A NEW AND COMPREHENSIVE GAZETTEER

ENGLAND AND WALES.

CARLISLE,

A city, inland port, and market-town, having separate jurisdiction, situated in the ward and county of Cumberland. The population of the different townships composing the two parishes of the city of Carlisle, in 1763, was 4158; in 1801, 9521; in 1831, 20,006. Assessed property, £31,739.

General Description.—This very ancient city is pleasantly situated on a gentle eminence at the confluence of the Eden and Calder, which, with the Petterel, nearly environ it. Standing at a short distance from the point where the great Roman wall crossed the Eden, it was called by the Romans and Britons Lugwallum. The Saxons contracted this to Luel, and added it to the word caer, 'city,' whence, by easy corruption, its modern name Carlisle, that is, 'the city near the wall.' Its three principal streets, which are broad and spacious, diverge from the market-place, and are called English-street, Scotch-street, and Castle-street. At the upper end of the former, on opposite sides of the street, stand two elegant court-houses, constructed in the Gothic style by Robert Smirke, junior, on the site of the ancient citadel granted by act of parliament to the county for that purpose. The Crown court communicates by a subterraneous passage with the gaol, and is ornamented with statues, that of George III., and impersonations of Justice and Mercy. Over the Eden and the Calder are stone bridges. That over the Eden, consisting of five elliptical arches, and connected with the city by an arched causeway, nearly a quarter of a mile in length, was executed from an elegant design by Smirke, at an expense of upwards of £70,000. The county gaol and house of correction were completed in 1827, at an expense of not less than £40,000. On the north end of the market-place stands the town-hall, where the mayor's court and city sessions are holden. A more modern erection on the east end of the court contains the council chamber and other corporation offices. Some of the public buildings we have particularized do great credit to the taste, the wealth, and the liberality of the citizens; but the ancient cathedral must still be allowed to be the principal ornament of the city. Standing on the highest ground in the parish of St Mary, it forms the most prominent object from whatever quarter you view it. Its origin is certainly Saxon; but its additions and embellishments have been the work of many successive generations. The most magnificent part of it, the choir, was begun by Bishop Welton, in the reign of Edward III., and finished by Bishop Strickland in 1401. It is 137 feet in length, with the aisles 71 in breadth, and its height 75 feet. From the area of the building to the summit of the tower the height is 130 feet. In the east end is a lofty window of nine lights, which, for exquisite workmanship, elegance of composition, and harmony of arrangement, is superior to any thing of the kind to be met with in the kingdom. There are here many interesting monuments; among others one recently erected to the memory of Archdeacon Paley, who composed several of his works while resident in this city, and who, with his two wives, was buried in the cathedral. Of the town,—the houses in general are handsome and well built; the streets carefully paved, and brilliantly lighted with gas. In the new prison is a capacious reservoir of water, raised from the Calder by means of a tread-wheel. The port of Carlisle extends from the Sark, which divides Cumberland from Scotland, to Bank-end near Mary-pool. Large vessels cannot discharge their cargoes nearer than Fisher Cross, a distance of 12 miles; but a canal completed in 1823, and extending from the city to the Solway frith, affords a communication with the ocean for vessels of from 60 to 80 tons burden, and cannot fail to add to the wealth and general prosperity of this city.

CARLISLE.

Trade, &c.—The trade carried on is mostly of the description called coasting, which, were the projected rail-road to Newcastle executed, would be increased to an incalculable extent. The manufactures consist principally of cotton goods for the West India market. Two thousand looms are thus employed in the town, and a much greater number in the adjacent villages. Besides numerous manufactories of checks, gingham, and cotton yarn, there are here a manufactory of carpets, a number of hat-making establishments, iron-foundries, tan-yards, and breweries. The fisheries on the Eden are extensive, and the markets, besides other provision, have always an abundant supply of fish. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday. There are two annual fairs, August 26th and September 19th, at which a vast deal of business is transacted. During these fairs, agreeably to the terms of the ancient charter, no person can be arrested for a civil suit within the liberties of the city. The first Saturday after Michaelmas is also a kind of fair; and every succeeding Saturday till Christmas. In April there is an annual show of cattle, when prizes are distributed by the agricultural society: races are run in September. The city of Carlisle has an academy of arts, with an annual exhibition for their encouragement, a mechanics' institution, a public library, a theatre, news-rooms, and extensive assembly-rooms at the two principal hotels.

Ecclesiastical affairs.—The city stands within the two parishes of St Mary and St Cuthbert, both of them in the archdeaconry and diocese of Carlisle. Both are perpetual curacies, the former endowed with £200 private benefaction, £600 royal bounty, and £1,000 parliamentary grant; the latter with £600 private benefaction, £1,200 royal bounty, and £1,000 parliamentary grant, and both are in the patronage of the dean and chapter. A handsome district church has recently been built in each parish, the livings of which are subordinated to the original churches. Carlisle is the seat of a diocese, having been by Henry I. in the year 1133, erected into a see under Adelup, his father confessor, with jurisdiction over a great part of Cumberland, and Westmoreland. Besides the established church there are here places of worship for almost all denominations of Christians. The Independents, Presbyterians, Friends, Baptists, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics have chapels in this city. The grammar-school, founded by Henry VIII. on instituting the dean and chapter, has an endowment of £190 per annum, by means of which between forty and fifty scholars are classically educated on paying a small quarterage each. There are also National, Lancasterian, and Sunday schools, besides a school of industry for girls. Charitable institutions are numerous, including a dispensary, a house of recovery, female visiting and clothing societies, with various charitable and benevolent bequests by different benefactors, whose venerated names would form a list too long to be inserted here.

Government.—The city of Carlisle received its first charter from Henry II., which was renewed, confirmed, and enlarged by succeeding sovereigns till the reign of Charles I., upon whose charter it is now governed. The present government is vested in a mayor, 2 bailiffs, 12 aldermen, and 24 common-councillmen, assisted by a chamberlain, 2 coroners, a town-clerk, a sword-bearer, 3 sergeants-at-mace, and subordinate officers. The mayor, bailiffs, and coroners, are annually elected by the council from among the aldermen; the aldermen, from the common-councillmen by the mayor and aldermen only; vacancies in the common-council are filled up by the court of aldermen.

The two senior aldermen, with the mayor and recorder, are justices of the peace within the city, and hold a session quarterly for trying all except capital offences. A court of record is held by the mayor and bailiffs every Monday for the recovery of debts to any amount. There is another court held the same day, at which the mayor presides, for the recovery of debts under 40s. These courts are held in the town-hall. There are eight fraternities or incorporated trades, namely, grocers, tanners, skimmers, butchers, smiths, weavers, tailors, and shoemakers. The freedom of the city is inherited by birth, and acquired by serving an apprenticeship of seven years to a resident freeman, or by gift from the corporation. The assizes for the county are always held here,—those of spring by one, and those of autumn by two judges. The Easter and summer-quarter sessions are also held here; the other two,—one at Cockermouth, and one at Penrith. The city has returned regularly two members to parliament since the 23d of Edward. The right of election was formerly vested in freemen who had been admitted into any of the eight fraternities, or guilds, resident or not resident, whose total number is said to have been about 1000, but of whom only 280 were resident. The new electors are about 800 in number, the townships of Bolchergate, Rickergate, with part of Caldewgate, being included within the boundaries of the borough. The mayor is the returning officer.

Walls and History.—Being from its earliest foundation a border or frontier city, Carlisle was from a very remote period of its history strongly fortified. It was surrounded with walls and had a strong citadel and castle under both the Saxons and Normans. The former are said to have been built by Egfrid, king of Northumberland, in the seventh century. They enclosed a triangular space and had three gates, named from their position with respect to the different countries, English, Irish, and Scottish gates. The west wall forming the base of the triangle was 2000 yards in length, the eastern 460, and the northern 650 yards. In the progressive improvement of the city, these walls, gates, and fortifications, have been completely swept away, a small portion of the west wall excepted, and the castle, which was erected by William Rufus on a bold eminence overlooking the Eden. This last is still kept in some degree of repair and maintained as a garrison, with a governor, lieutenant-governor, store-keeper, &c. Few existing cities of the empire have been so long the objects of national cupidity, or so often made to feel the bitter effects of national animosity. In the reign of Nero, during the temporary absence of the Romans, it was burnt to ashes by the Caledonians. It was repaired and fortified by Agricola, but on the departure of the Romans, again destroyed. In the seventh century it rose again to importance, having been rebuilt and fortified by Egfrid, king of Northumberland. In the ninth century it was demolished by the merciless Danes, and appears to have lain in ruins till after the Norman conquest, when it was restored by William Rufus, who fortified, garrisoned, and colonized it from the southern parts of the kingdom. It was taken possession of by David I. of Scotland, to whom it was afterwards ceded by Stephen. This monarch greatly improved its means of defence, and here he had his residence for some time after the unfortunate battle of the Standard. Restored to England by Malcolm IV., it suffered a severe siege under William the Lion, and was taken by his successor Alexander. Restored again to England, it was, in 1292, with all its public records, charters, &c., reduced to ashes through the vindictive malice of a ruffian who wilfully set fire to his father's house. To this place Edward I., in consequence of the want of provisions, retreated after the battle of Falkirk, and here he assembled a parliament in 1298. Here he appointed the rendezvous of his forces destined for the final subjugation of Scotland in 1306. Here too he celebrated his birth-day, shortly before he died on his march against Scotland at Burgh-on-the-Sands, July 7th, 1307. In the long and desperate war between the two countries that succeeded, Carlisle stood many sieges and was frequently much injured. Here, in 1568, Mary, queen of Scots, hoping to find an asylum from the well-merited hatred of her subjects, was taken into custody; and here, in 1596, 'the bauld Buccleugh' performed the notable exploit of carrying off the celebrated reaver, Kinnmont Willie. Standing out for Charles I. against the parliament, it was besieged by General Leslie, and after suffering almost incredible hardships, obliged to surrender. It was retaken by Sir Phillip Musgrove for the royalists, but in the end surrendered by treaty to Cromwell. In 1745 it was invested by the young Chevalier, Prince Charles Stuart, and most disgracefully surrendered at the first summons. No inquiry was ever instituted into the conduct and character of the then reigning authorities of the city; but ample vengeance was taken upon a few unhappy men left in it by Charles on his retreat, who were carried to London, condemned, many of them executed as traitors, and their heads sent down to be set upon public places, where the magistracy must have been conscious their own were far more deserving to stand. This, however, was the last of its fields, and distant be the day which shall put either the loyalty or the courage of its authorities to the proof.—Carlisle gives the title of earl to a branch of the Howard family. It is 301 m. N.N.W. from London; and 96 S. from Edinburgh.

CARLTON. See CARLETON.

CARLTON-UPON-TRENT, a chapelry in the parish of Norwell, county of Nottingham. This chapelry is bounded on the east by the Trent, over which there is a ferry about a quarter of a mile from the village. It is $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. from Newark. Population, in 1801, 308; in 1831, 265. Assessed property, £1,579.

CARLTON, a parish in the hundred of Hoxon and county of Suffolk. The living is a rectory with Kelsall, in the archdeaconry of Suffolk and diocese of Norwich, rated in the king's books at £3 11s. 0½d. The church is dedicated to St Peter. The patron, in 1829, was the Rev. B. Benco. It is $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W.W. from Saxmundham. Population, in 1801, 108; in 1831, 130. Assessed property, £805.

CARLTON-COVERDALE, a township in the parish of Coverham, north riding of York. It is 5 m. S.W.W. from Middleham. Population, in 1801, 236; in 1831, 301. Assessed property, £3,234.

CARLTON-HIGHDALE, a township in the same parish. Population, in 1801, 328; in 1831, 365.

CARMARTIENSHIRE

A county in South Wales, bounded on the N. by Cardiganshire, on the E. by Breconshire, on the W. by Pembrokeshire, and on the S.

by Glamorganshire and the sea. It extends from east to west about 45, and from north to south about 20 miles, and its contents have been calculated at 590,640 acres.

Divisions.—It is divided into 8 hundreds, which comprise 87 parishes and 6 market-towns, and belongs to the diocese of St David's, and province of Canterbury. The hundreds are Carnwallon, Cathinog, Cayo, Derlys, Elvet, Iskennen, Kidwelly, and Perfedd. The chief towns are Carmarthen, Llandovery, Kidwelly, Llandilovawr, Llanelly, Llandybïe, Newcastle Emlyn, and St Clear's. It contained, in 1801, a population of 67,317; and in 1831, 100,800. Assessed property, £277,455.

Surface.—The surface is broken and rugged, the numerous narrow valleys being darkened by the hills and lofty mountains that shoot up almost perpendicularly from their bases. The only tracts that can be called level, are the vale of Towy, about 20 miles in length, by 3 in breadth, and the plain of Llaugharne, which has been reclaimed from the sea. A large part of the county is waste, but it is pretty well wooded, and, with the exception of the mere mountains, it is generally fertile, and the farmers are esteemed the best in Wales. Numerous herds of a small breed of black cattle are reared on the hills, and considerable quantities of barley and oats are grown in the valleys. The mineral products of the country are iron and lead, coal and limestone. Tinned iron plates and coal are exported from Llanelly. Coals are also exported from Kidwelly, to which they are brought from the pits by a small canal. Woollen stockings are manufactured at Llandovery, a little to the north of which lie the principal lead-mines of the county.

Rivers, &c.—The rivers are the Towy, Colly, Dylus, Gwilly, Amman, and Loughur, all of them abounding in fish. The remains of a Roman road are still visible at Llandovery, and Roman coins have been found at Waitland. Sepulchral antiquities, belonging both to the Britons and Romans, are to be met with in various places. It was in this county where the independence of Wales as a state terminated, the last battle for native dominion between the forces of Edward I. and Llewellyn, prince of Wales, having been fought near Llandilovawr. The county now sends two members to parliament, who are polled for at Llandilovawr, Carmarthen, Llandovery, Newcastle Emlyn, St Clear's, Llanelly, and Llansawel.

CARMARTHEN, or CARR FRYDDYN, the county-town of Carmarthenshire, having a separate jurisdiction in the district called the county of the borough of Carmarthen. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Carmarthen and diocese of St David's, rated in the king's books at £6 13s. 4d., by the parliamentary returns, £91 12s. 8d. The church, which is very large, and stands outside the town, is dedicated to St Peter. The patron is the king. Carmarthen is situated upon the river Towy, over which there is a bridge consisting of six spacious arches, with four auxiliaries to increase the water passage during floods. The town commands a most extensive and beautiful prospect. The streets are steep and irregular, but the houses are handsome and well-built. The market-house is a superior structure. The town-hall, built of freestone, is adorned in front with Ionic columns. The county-gaol is of hewn stone, and occupies the site of the old castle. The manufactures are confined chiefly to cast-iron, tin-plate, and cordage. Ships are sometimes built here, but upon a very limited scale. The noble stream Towy affords great facilities for commerce, admitting vessels of 300 tons burden to come as far up as the bridge with ease and safety. Its corporate government is vested in a mayor, a recorder, two sheriffs, six peers, 20 common-councillors, and minor officers. Carnarthen with Llanelly sends one member to parliament. The two sheriffs are the returning officers. The ancient right of election was in the burgesses of Carnarthen and Llanelly, in number about 723. The new electors are only about 450 in number; but the 40s. freeholders in this town vote for Carnarthenshire. There is a court for the registry of wills held here, under the jurisdiction of the see of St David's. There is a free grammar school, endowed by Dr Owen, bishop of St David's, and endowments for the maintenance of an almshouse and marine school. The Maridunium of Antoninus, Carnarthen, was considered to be the capital of Wales, and upon its erection into a principality, the chancery and exchequer of the southern half were fixed here, and here they continued till the jurisdiction of the Welsh marches was abolished. It was the residence of the Welsh princes till 1116, when they removed to Dynefaur. It was given to hold in trust for Henry I. to Owen ap Caradoc, and Rhuddarch ap Tudor, the former of whom lost his life in its defence. In 1137 it was burned to the ground by Owen Gwynedd, and a few years after rebuilt by Gilbert, earl of Clare. Of the old town walls the memorials are slender, and of its princely castle not a single vestige remains. A little to the north of the town is the Gaer of the Romans, where several coins and a cube-formed altar have been dug up. Merlin 'the marvellous' was born here, and Sir Richard Steele died in the town of Carnarthen on the 1st of September, 1729. It gives the title of marquis to the duke of Leeds. Population, in 1801, 5548; in 1831, 9995. Assessed property, £16,684.

CARNABY, a parish in the wapentake of Dickering, east riding county of York. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry of the east riding and diocese of York, rated in the king's books at £7 8s. 11½d.; annual value, by the parliamentary returns, £40. The church is dedicated to St John the Baptist. The patron, in 1801, was Sir William Strickland, Bart. It is 3 m. S.W.W. from Bridlington. Population, in 1801, 129; in 1831, 155. Assessed property, £2,270.

CARNARVONSHIRE.

A county of North Wales, bounded on the N. by the sea; on the S. by the sea and the county of Merioneth; on the E. by Denbighshire; and on the W. by the Irish sea and the strait of Menai. It extends from north to south about 45 miles, from east to west about 13, and has been calculated to contain from 260,000 to 300,000 acres, scarcely one half of which is fit for cultivation.

Divisions.—It is divided into 10 hundreds, and comprises 71 parishes, and three market towns. The chief towns are, Carnarvon, Bangor, Pwllheli, Conway, Criccieth, and Nevin. The hundreds are, Committmaen, Creuddyn, Dinlana, Ffionydd, Gafloglan, Isaf, Is-Gorfa, Nant-Conway, Uchaf, and Uwch-Gorfa. It is in the diocese of Bangor, province of Canterbury, and Northern circuit. In 1801, it contained a population of 41,521; in 1831, 66,500 souls. Total assessed property of the county, £125,198.

Physical Features.—This is the most elevated county of Wales, and its mountain ranges are among the most lofty in Britain. Here, wreathing his head in clouds, rises the celebrated Y-Wyddfa, or Snowdon, 3759 feet above the level of the sea; and here—though shorn of half their terrors by an excellent turnpike road, which carries the traveller round their base with ease and safety—still frown "the cliffs of Penmaen Mawr, heaped hideous to the sky." Numerous lakes glitter among the mountains, and innumerable rivulets brawle around their bases, bearing beauty and fertility into the long and narrow valleys, where the simple inhabitants cherish the customs, and preserve, in a high degree, the primeval purity of their ancestors. The principal rivers are the Conway, one of the finest streams in Britain, navigable as far up as the village of Trefriw, the Ogwen, the Seiont, the Llugwy, and the Colwyn. Of the numerous lakes, the most remarkable are, Nantberris, and Nant-gwynant.

Productions, Trade, Roads, &c.—The mountains, composed of clay-slate, of sundry formation, in many places contain copper, and in others lead. They contain also, in different places, pure slate of the finest quality, great quantities of which are exported. The agriculture is necessarily of the pastoral kind: dairy-farming and cattle, horse and sheep-breeding, are the principal occupations of the farmer. Where corn is grown, the principal crops are barley and oats. Black cattle are bred on the hills, and sold to the English drovers; but the real wealth of the county lies in its mines, which, through the great improvements that have been made, and are still making, must be every day increasing in value. By the erection of the suspension-bridge over the Menai, this county has been connected with Anglesey, a great agricultural district, on the one hand, while that at Conway opens an easy communication with Denbigh on the other. The construction of the great parliamentary road through the wild and untrodden tracts of the county has, besides improving what was before valuable, imparted a real value to dreary wastes that were utterly valueless. Railroads have been introduced at Llanberris, Llandegai, and Carnarvon, and have opened a wide field for profitably employing the labour of the poor, and the increasing capital of the rich.—The county sends one member to parliament, who is polled for at Carnarvon, Conway, Capel Cerrig, and Pwllheli.—Among the antiquities of the county may be mentioned the Welsh castles of Dolwydellan, Crickath, and Dolbadern, and the stately structures of Carnarvon and Conway castles, built by Edward I. Many Roman antiquities have at different times been discovered in this county.

CARNARVON, or CAERNARVON, a borough-town in the parish of Llanbeblig, hundred of Is-Gorfa, and county of Carnarvon. The living is a curacy, not in charge, subordinate to the vicar of Llanbeblig. The chapel is dedicated to St Mary. The town is beautifully situated on the Menai strait, at the mouth of the river Seiont, very near the site of the Roman Segontium, or Caer-Seiont, part of the walls of which are still standing. It is surrounded by the castle and walls, with towers at short intervals, originally erected by Edward I., out of the revenues of the vacant archdiocese of York. Within the walls, the town consists of ten streets, of which the principal is High-street, running from the Land to the Water gate. This street is principally laid out in shops, which, for elegance and convenience, are quite equal to those of the first towns in England. Without the walls, the town consists of double the number of streets, with many handsome villas in the suburbs. The new baths deserve to be particularly noticed, as uniting elegance and utility; they consist of two suites of hot and cold sea-water baths, with a large swimming-bath and dressing-rooms attached to each. The water is drawn from the sea, at the distance of half a mile, by a steam-engine, through iron pipes, and received into large iron reservoirs. They were erected by the marquess of Anglesey, and cost upwards of £10,000. Without the wall is a beautiful terrace, affording most extensive and interesting prospects. This forms the principal promenade of the citizens. At the north end of the terrace is a pier, which it is proposed to extend a mile out into the river. At the south end of the terrace stands the custom-house, from which the quay extends along the bank of the river, under the walls of the castle. The quay and harbour, which was dangerous from the nature of its bar, has been of late enlarged and greatly improved, under the authority of an act of parliament, which established additional port-dues to defray the expense. The port is frequented by vessels of from 50 to 500 tons burden. The principal exports are slate and copper ore. The former are brought from the quarries of Llandberris and Llanillfyn, a distance of ten miles, by a railroad of recent construction. They are sent to all parts of Europe and America. The coasting trade of this port is carried on with London, Dublin, Bristol, Glasgow, Cork, Waterford, and Liverpool, to which latter port there is a steam conveyance. The imports are colonial produce, Manchester and Birmingham goods, groceries, London porter, &c.—

Carnarvon received from Edward I. the first royal charter granted in the principality. The corporation is governed by a mayor, who is constable of the castle by patent, two bailiffs, assisted by a town-clerk, and two sergeants-at-mace. The marquess of Anglesey is perpetual mayor of the town. It has, in conjunction with Crickath, Pwllheli, Nevin, and Conway, sent one member to parliament, ever since the 37th of Henry VIII. The right of election was formerly in the burgesses of these five boroughs, amounting to about 800. The new electors are about 500 in number. The stewards are the returning officers.—Edward II., who was afterwards the first of Wales, as the eldest son of the king of England, was born here in one of the towers of the castle built by his father, Edward I., one of the finest of the kind in Europe, and externally still entire. Even the room where the prince was born, with the cradle in which he was rocked, are still in tolerable preservation. The castle occupies a naturally strong position at the west end of the town, and, before the use of artillery, must have been impregnable. It is bounded on one side by the estuary of the Seiont, on another by the Menai straits, on a third by a creek of the Menai, and the fourth was isolated by art. It was besieged and taken by the parliamentary forces in 1646. Behind the town is a hill called Twt hill, which has a near resemblance to the Calton hill at Edinburgh, and like it commands a most extensive and varied prospect. The neighbourhood has many fine seats, particularly those of the marquess of Anglesey, Lord Boston, and Lord Newborough. Among the antiquities of this place, are the ruins of Segontium, part of a Roman road, several Roman stations, and some of the ancient mansions of the first English settlers. It is distant from London 235 m. The population, including the parish of Llanbeblig, in 1801, was 3626; in 1831, 7642. Assessed property, £9,618.

CARNFORTH, a township in the parish of Warton, county-palatine of Lancaster. It is 6½ m. N.E. of Lancaster. Population, in 1801, 219; in 1831, 299. Assessed property, £2,254.

CARNGIWCH, a parish in the hundred of Gafflaglan, county of Carnarvon, North Wales. The living is a chapelry, not in charge, to the rectory of Edeynen, in the diocese of Bangor. It is 4 m. N. from Pwllheli. Population, in 1801, 92; in 1831, 117. Assessed property, £336.

CARNO, a parish in the hundred of Llanidloes, county of Montgomery, North Wales. The living is a discharged vicarage, exempt from visitation, in the diocese of Bangor, rated in the king's books at £10, by diocesan report £67 3s. 9d. The church is dedicated to St John the Baptist. Patron, in 1829, Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart. It is 8 m. W.N.W. from Newton. Population, in 1801, 741; in 1831, 1010. Assessed property, £1,210.

CARNWALLON, one of the eight hundreds into which the county of Carmarthen is divided. It contains two parishes and nine hamlets, with a population, in 1831, of 10,899 souls.

CARON, or TREFF-GARON, or, ISCLAWDD, a small town in a parish of the same name, in the hundred of Pennarth and county of Cardigan, South Wales. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry of Cardigan and diocese of St David's, rated in the king's books at £8. The church, which occupies the summit of a rocky hill near the centre of the town, is dedicated to St Caron. Patron, the bishop of St David's. Caron lies in a hollow upon the banks of the river Berwyn a small distance above its union with the Teifi. Formerly it was a corporate town, but was disfranchised for corruption in the year 1742. It has a fair in March of three days' continuance, for the sale of horses, pigs, flannel, and hosiery, and the market-day is Tuesday. Thomas Jones, antiquary and poet, was a native of this parish. Population, in 1801, 1558; in 1831, 2282. Assessed property, £5,095.

CARPERBY, a township in the parish of Aysgarth, north riding of Yorkshire. It is 8½ m. W.N.W. from Middleham. Population, in 1801, 280; in 1831, 320. Assessed property, £2,515.

CARRIGHOVA, a township in the parish of Llany-Mynernh, which see. It is 5 m. S.S.W. from Oswestry in Salop. Population, in 1801, 206; in 1831, 362.

CARRINGTON, a chapelry in the parish of Bowdon, county of Chester. The living is a perpetual curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Chester, endowed with £1,000 private benefaction, £1,000 royal bounty, and £300 parliamentary grant. The chapel, consecrated in 1759, is dedicated to St George. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Stamford. It is 11 m. N. from Nether-Knutsford. Population, in 1801, 435; in 1831, 552. Assessed property, £2,604.

CARRINGTON, an extra-parochial township in the eastern division of the soke of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln. The living is a perpetual curacy with the curacies of Frith-Ville and West-Ville, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Lincoln. The chapel was consecrated so late as 1818. The township was erected by act of parliament on the draining of Wildman fen, in 1812. Population, in 1821, 139; in 1831, 149. Assessed property, £5,869.

CARROCK, or CANNOCK-PASSAGE, a chapelry in the parish of St Reep, county of Cornwall. The chapel, which was dedicated to St Cannock, is now in ruins. It is 1 m. N.E. from Fowey. The population is returned with that of the parish.

CARROCK, a mountain in Cumberland which rises 2409 feet above the level of the sea, and 2268 above the Derwent. It is a precipitous ridge, rent with horrid chasms that cannot be looked into without a painful feeling of danger being excited. Close under it lies a winding path of two miles in length, just broad enough to allow a horse to pass singly, and in many places interrupted by huge stones that have fallen from the mountain. At the end of it is a cavern, discovered in 1740, that has never been explored. Near it is a remarkable pool of water called Black Hole, 150 yards in circumference and upwards of 60 fathoms in depth. It is 12 m. N. of Keswick.

CARROG (Tŷ), a river in Carnarvonshire that falls into the Gwelly near Dinas Dinlle.

CARROW, a hamlet in the parish of Warden, county of Northumberland. It is chiefly noticeable from its being supposed to have been the Roman station, Procolitia, on the line of the military way of Severus. It is 8½ m. N.W. from Hexham.

CARSHALTON, or CASEHORTON, a parish and village, formerly a market-town, in the second division of the hundred of Wallington and county of Surrey. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry of Surrey and diocese of Worcester, rated in the king's books at £11 12s. 6d. The church, in which is a curious altar monument, is dedicated to All Saints. Patron, in 1829, J. Rose, Esq. The river Wandlo, running through this parish, has given rise to several establishments that have been of material advantage. Besides extensive bleaching grounds, calico printing has been conducted here on a large scale. Here are also large flour-mills, paper-mills, snuff-mills, manufactories of leather, and limekilns in active operation. The situation is considered one of the most pleasing in the neighbourhood of the metropolis. It has, of course, been selected as a place of occasional and temporary retirement from the fatigues of business by merchants, and the more substantial class of London tradesmen, who have adorned it with many spacious and elegant mansions. The parish is within the jurisdiction of a court of requests, held at Croydon for the recovery of debts under £5, and there is occasionally held a court for the manor. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a seminary connected with it in the parish, and a national school supported by subscription. Close to the churchyard there is a fine spring, Ann Boyle's well; it is arched over with stone, and kept in good repair. This parish was the residence of the celebrated Dr Radcliffe in the latter part of his life. It is 11 m. S.S.W. from St Paul's, London. Population, in 1801, 1449; in 1831, 1919. Assessed property, £11,335.

CARSINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Wirksworth and county of Derby. The living is a discharged rectory in the archdeaconry of Derby and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry, rated in the king's books at £5 1s. 10d.; annual value by the parliamentary returns £120. The church is dedicated to St Margaret. Patron, the dean of Lincoln. There is here a school for 29 poor children belonging to the parish, with the adjoining township of Hopton, endowed with £60 per annum. Carsington is in the honour of the duchy of Tutbury. It is 2 m. W.S.W. from Wirksworth. Population, in 1801, 190; in 1831, 286. Assessed property, £1,858.

CARSWELL, a hamlet in the parish of Buckland, county of Berks. It is $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. by E. from Great Fardington.

CARSWELL, a hamlet in the parish of Breadhembury, county of Devon. It is $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.S.E. from Collopston.

CARTER-MOOR, a hamlet in the parish of Ponteland, county of Northumberland formerly a distinct township, now united with that of Kirkclop. It is $10\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.N.W. from Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

CARTHORPE, a township in the parish of Burneston, north riding of the county of York. It is $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. from Bedale. Population, in 1801, 230; in 1831, 312. Assessed property, £2,286.

CARTINGTON. See CHARTINGTON.

CARTMEL, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Lonsdale, north of the sands, county-palatine of Lancaster. The living is a curacy, not in charge, united to that of Cartmel-Fell, in the archdeaconry of Richmond and diocese of Chester; annual value by the parliamentary returns £88 6s. 9d. The church, a spacious cruciform structure in the early style of English architecture, with a curious tower, is dedicated to St Mary. Patron, Lord G. Cavendish. Cartmel stands in a valley surrounded by hills of considerable altitude and varied aspect, the romantic fells of Conistone rising majestically behind them to the north. The streets are irregular and narrow, but the houses, built of stone and white-washed, give them a neat and cleanly appearance. The bay of Morecambe bounds the parish on the S. and S.E., where, at ebb tide, there is a passage over the sands, called Lancaster sands, to Bolton. The sands are passed by two routes, —one of them 9, and the other 4 miles in length; but as neither of them can be taken by strangers without danger, guides are always in waiting to trace out the one or the other as circumstances require. There is in this parish a free grammar-school, endowed with £117 per annum. The number of scholars is about 50, one-half of whom are educated classically. The market-day, formerly Monday, is now Tuesday. The fairs are two, —Whit-Monday and the Monday after the 23d of October. Cattle-markets are held on the Wednesday before Easter, and November 5th. According to Camden, Egfrid, king of Northumberland, in A.D. 677, made a gift of this parish with all the Britons inhabiting it to St Cuthbert. Here Ethelred, after being restored to the throne of that kingdom, having decoyed from their sanctuary at York the two sons of Alfwold, who had been advanced to the throne upon his expulsion, murdered them, and here "William Mareschal, the elder earl of Pembroke, founded, A.D. 1188, a priory of regular canons of the order of St Austin, which was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, and rated, 26th of Henry VIII., at £91 6s. 3d. per annum. Dugd. £124 2s. 1d. Speed. £212 11s. 10d. second valuation. Herein, about the time of the dissolution, were reckoned ten religious, and forty-eight servants. The site of this monastery was granted, 32nd of Henry VIII., to Thomas Holcroft." Tanner's Not. Mon. There is in this parish, at a place called Pitfarin, an interesting spring; and, a few miles to the south of the town, a spring called Holy Well, celebrated for relieving pains of the gout, and curing nephritic and cutaneous diseases. It is 12 m. N.E. from Lancaster. The population, including its five townships and its two chapelries of Broughton-East and Cartmel-Fell, in 1801, was 4007; in 1831, 4302. Assessed property, £20,313.

CARTMEL-FELL, a chapelry in the above parish, of the certified value of £8 10s. 2d.; annual value by the parliamentary returns, £40 10s. 0d. The chapel is dedicated to St Anthony. The patron, in 1829, was Lord G. Cavendish. Population, in 1801, 322; in 1831, 317.

CARTWORTH, a township in the parish of Kirk-Burton, west riding of Yorkshire. It is $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. from Huddersfield. Population, in 1801, 997; in 1831, 1796.

The living is a discharged rectory in the archdeaconry of Brecon and diocese of St David's, rated in the king's books at £7 0s. 7½d., annual value by the parliamentary returns £145. The church is dedicated to St Michael. Patron, the bishop of St David's. It is 5 m. W.N.W. from Presteigne.

CASEHORTON. See CARSHALTON.

CASHIO, the name of a hundred, formerly called the liberty of St Alban's, in Hertfordshire, containing 21 parishes, and the market-town of Chipping-Barnet, comprising, in 1831, a population of 28,519 souls.

CASHIO, a hamlet in the parish of Watford, hundred of Cashio, and county of Hertford. It was constituted a liberty by Edward IV. It is $\frac{1}{2}$ m. from Watford.

CASHMORE, a hamlet in the parish of Gussage St Michael, eastern division of the county of Dorset. It is $7\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. from Bland-Forum.

CASSINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Wootton, county of Oxford. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford, rated in the king's books at £12. The church is dedicated to St Peter. The patrons are the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford. It is $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. from Oxford. The population, in 1801, was, excluding the hamlet of Worton, 374; in 1831, 353. Assessed property, £2,135.

CASSOP, a township in the parish of Kelloe, county-palatine of Durham. It stands on the declivity of a hill, commanding an extensive and variegated prospect, particularly towards the N.W. It is $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. from Durham. Population, in 1801, 53; in 1831, 69. Assessed property, £1,006.

CASTER, a hamlet in the parish of Ilam, county of Stafford. It is 6 m. N.N.W. from Ashborne.

CASTERTON, a township in the parish of Kirkby-Lonsdale, county of Westmoreland

In Casterton there are two houses called Chapel houses, and a place near unto them called Chapel-head close, where a chapel formerly stood, but the ground is now ploughed up; and there is a well nigh unto it, called St Côumes (St Columba) Well, to which Saint the chapel probably was dedicated. It is 2 m. N.E. from Kirkby-Lonsdale. Population, in 1801, 246; in 1831, 302. Assessed property, £2,648.

CASTERTON (GREAT), or BRIGG-CASTERTON, a parish in the hundred of East and county of Rutland. The living is a rectory with Pickworth, in the archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, rated in the king's books at £11 2s. 11d. The church is dedicated to St Peter and St Paul. Patron, in 1829, the marquess of Exeter. Vestiges of a Roman station have been supposed to be visible here, but antiquarians are not agreed about its identity. There is a bridge over the Gwash, or Wash, at this place, of several arches, from which it used to be called Brigg-Casterton. It is 2 m. N.N.W. from Stamford. Population, in 1801, 306; in 1831, 333. Assessed property, £1,556.

CASTERTON (LITTLE), a parish in the hundred of East and county of Rutland. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, rated in the king's books at £6 15s. 5d. The church, a neat little structure, in the late Norman and early English styles of architecture, is dedicated to All Saints. The patroness, in 1829, was Mrs Brown. It is 2 m. N.N.W. from Stamford. Population, in 1801, 121; in 1831, 135. Assessed property, £1,634.

CASTLE-ACRE, or EAST-ACRE, a parish in the Lynn division of the hundred of Freebridge, Norfolk. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, rated in the king's books at £5 6s. 8d., annual value by the parliamentary returns, £70. The church, a spacious and ancient structure, with a lofty embattled tower, is dedicated to St James. Patron, in 1829, T. W. Coke, Esq. This parish takes its name from a magnificent castle, founded here by the earl of Warrenne, soon after the conquest, of which nothing now remains but entire ruins. He also founded a priory for monks of the Clunian order, who were subordinate to the house of Lewes, in Sussex. This was dedicated to the blessed Virgin Mary, valued the 26th Henry VIII. at £306 11s. 4d., ob. q. Dugd.; and £321 17s. 5d., ob. q. as Speed; and granted 2nd Henry VIII. to Thomas, duke of Norfolk. Of this priory, the ruins are venerable, and exceedingly picturesque. Castle-Acre has, besides the established church, places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists. It has fairs for toys and pedlery on St James' day and August 5th. It is 4 m. N. from Swaffham. Population, in 1801, 842; in 1831, 1333. Assessed property, £3,954.

CASTLE-ASHBY, a parish in the hundred of Wymersley and county of Northampton. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, rated in the king's books at £17 9s. 7d. The patron, in 1829, was the marquess of Northampton. It is 6½ m. E.S.E. from Northampton. Population, in 1801, 123; in 1831, 150. Assessed property, £2,634.

CASTLE-BELLINGHAM. See BELLINGHAM.

CASTLE-BYTHE, a parish in the hundred of Kemys and county of Pembroke. The living is a discharged rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of St David's, rated in the king's books at £6, in the parliamentary returns at £90. Patron, the lord chancellor. It is 10 m. N.E. from Haverford. Population, in 1801, 174; in 1831, 284. Assessed property, £733.

CASTLE-CAER-EINEON, a parish, partly in the hundred of Cawrse, and partly in that of Mathrafel, county of Montgomery, North Wales. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of St Asaph, rated in the king's books at £12 17s. 6d. The church is dedicated to St Garmon. The patron is the bishop. It is 3½ m. W.S.W. from Welsh-Pool. Population, in 1801, 741; in 1831, 783. Assessed property, £2,324.

CASTLE-CAMPS, a parish in the hundred of Chifford, county of Cambridge. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Ely, rated in the king's books at £16 4s. 3d. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The patrons are the governors of the Charter-house, London, to which foundation the manor belongs. Here are the ruins of a magnificent castle, formerly the residence of the Veres, earls of Oxford. It is 6 m. E.S.E. from Linton. Population, in 1801, 546; in 1831, 731. Assessed property, £3,222.

CASTLE-CAREY, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Catsash, county of Somerset. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry of Wells and diocese of Bath and Wells, rated in the king's books at £11 16s. 3d. The church, which is placed upon an eminence and seen from all sides to great advantage, is dedicated to All Saints. Patron, the bishop of Bath and Wells. Castle-Carey is most delightfully situated, and is deservedly admired by the lovers of rural beauty and retirement. The market-day is Tuesday. The market is small. The fairs are the Tuesday before Palm-Sunday, May 1st, and Whit-Tuesday, for cattle, broad-cloth, &c. Besides the established church there are here places of worship for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. The name of the place probably originated in its ancient castle belonging to a lord of the name of Carey. It was in the manor-house here that Charles II. found refuge after the battle of Worcester. It is 113 m. S.W. from London. Population, in 1801, 1281; in 1831, 1794. Assessed property, £3,877.

CASTLE-CARRACK, a parish in Eskdale ward and county of Cumberland. The living is a discharged rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Carlisle, rated in the king's books at £5 12s. 11d., annual value by the parliamentary returns, £130. The church is dedicated to St Peter. Patron, the bishop of Carlisle. There is abundance of both lime and free-stone in this parish, and near the church there is a mineral spring, the water of which is similar to that of Gilsland spa. Twenty acres of land have been allotted for the endowment of a school, on the enclosure of the moors, pursuant to an act of parliament in 1801. It is 11 m. E. from Carlisle. Population, in 1801, 250; in 1831, 383. Assessed property, £2,208.

CASTLE-CHURCH, a parish in the east division of the hundred of Cuttlestone, county of Stafford. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Stafford and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry, certified value £9 6s. 8d., annual value by the parliamentary returns, £52 10s. The church is dedicated to St Lawrence. Patron, the lord-chancellor. It is 1 m. S.W. from Stafford. Population, in 1801, 563; in 1831, 1374. Assessed property £7,333.

CASTLE-COMBE, a parish in the hundred of Chippenham, and county of Wilts. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Wilts and diocese of Salisbury, rated in the king's books at £9. The church, which appears to be of a very ancient date, is dedicated to St Andrew. Patron, in 1829, H. Scroop, Esq., in whose family the manor has remained for upwards of four centuries. Castle-Combe is a considerable village, and in ancient times was celebrated for its castle, the baronial residence of the Dunstanvilles. This celebrated strength was dismantled before the close of the 14th century, and its remains are now scarcely discernible. It is 5½ m. N.W. by W. from Chippenham. Population, in 1801, 567; in 1831, 655. Assessed property, £2,731.

CASTLE-DURRAN, a chapelry in the parish of Kilmaenllwadd, and hundred of Derllys, South Wales. The living is a curacy, not in charge, in the archdeaconry of Carmarthen and diocese of St David's, annual value by the parliamentary returns £72 6s. The patron is the king as Prince of Wales. The population in 1801 was returned with that of the parish; in 1821, it was 80; in 1831, 85.

CASTLE-DYKES. See BARTON-UPON-HUMBER.

CASTLE-EATON, a parish in the hundred of Highworth, Cricklade, and Staple, county of Wilts. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Wilts and diocese of Salisbury, rated in the king's books at £19. The church is dedicated to St Mary. The patrons, in 1820, were the Rev. T. Shepherd and others. It is 4½ m. N.W. by W. from Highworth. Population, in 1801, 295; in 1831, 302. Assessed property, £3,224.

CASTLE-EDEN, a parish in the south division of Easington ward, county-palatine of Durham. The living is a curacy, not in charge, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Durham, certified value £12 4s., annual value by the parliamentary returns £63 5s. The chapel, built at the expense of Rowland Burdon, Esq., who is also patron, is dedicated to St James. The river Eden runs through this parish, intersecting a deep and narrow valley which presents a great variety of sublime and beautiful scenery.—Castle-Eden house, the mansion of Rowland Burdon, Esq., is a handsome modern building and commands a number of admirable views both of land and water. It is 10 m. E.S.E. from Durham. Population, in 1801, 362; in 1831, 260. Assessed property, £1,521.

CASTLEFORD, a parish in the upper division of the wapentake of Osgoldcross, west riding of the county of York. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of York, rated in the king's books at £20 13s. 1½d. The church, supposed to occupy the site of a Roman camp, is dedicated to All Saints. The patron is the king as duke of Lancaster. Population, in 1801, 1175; in 1831, 1587. Assessed property, £2,851.

CASTLEFORD, a township in the above parish, 3½ m. N.W. by N. from Pontefract. Population, in 1801, 793; in 1831, 1141. Assessed property, £1,457.

CASTLE-FROME, a parish in the hundred of Radlow, county of Hereford. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Hereford, rated in the king's books at £5 13s. 4d. The church is dedicated to St Michael. The patron, in 1829, was Henry Roxby, Esq. It is 7 m. N.N.W. from Ledbury. Population, in 1801, 190; in 1831, 223. Assessed property, £1,562.

CASTLE-GRESLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Church-Gresley, Derbyshire, 4½ m. E.S.E. from Burton-upon-Trent. Population, in 1801, 114; in 1831, 126.

CASTLE-HEDINGHAM. See HEDDINGHAM-CASTLE.

CASTLE-HOWARD, the seat of the earl of Carlisle, situated 4 m. S.W. from New Walton, in Yorkshire. This magnificent mansion was built by Charles, third earl of Carlisle, on the site of the old castle of Hinderkelf. It consists of a rich centre of the Corinthian order, with a cupola, and two extensive wings, and is reckoned the masterpiece of its architect, Sir John Vanbrugh. The hall is 35 feet square, and 60 feet high: the walls were painted by Pellegrini. The saloon is 34 feet by 24. The dining-room is 28 feet by 21, and the drawing-room 23 feet by 27—the latter room is hung with very rich tapestry. The museum is 24 feet square, and the antique gallery 160 feet by 20. The collection of paintings is very valuable; all those over the doors in the state-apartments, being 23 in number, were painted by Sebastian Ricci.

CASTLE-INN, an extra-parochial part of the borough of Bruen, county of Brecon, South Wales. Population, in 1821, 20; in 1831, 24.

CASTLE-LEAVINGTON, a township in the parish of Kirk-Leavington north riding of Yorkshire. It is 3½ m. S.E. from Yarm. Population, in 1801, 47; in 1831, 45. Assessed property, £1,318.

CASTLE-MARTIN, one of seven hundreds, into which the county of Pembroke, South Wales, is divided. Its situation is peninsular, having Milford haven on part of the north and west, and the Bristol channel on part of the south and east. It comprises 16 parishes, abounds in gentlemen's seats, fine orchards, and thriving plantations, and, in 1831, contained a population of 5024 souls.

CASTLE-MARTIN, a parish containing a village of the same name, in the hundred of Castle-Martin and county of Pembroke, South Wales. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of St David's, rated in the king's books at £7 17s. 6d.; annual value, by the parliamentary returns, £98. The patron and impropiator is Lord Cawdor. The parish is extensive, and remarkable for its fertility. The remains of the castle, which gives name to the parish, are still to be seen in the village. It is 5 m. W.S.W. from Pembroke. Population, in 1801, 338; in 1831, 487. Assessed property, £2,572.

CASTLE-MORTON, or MORTON-FOLIOT, a parish in the lower division of the hundred of Pershore, county of Worcester. The living is a perpetual curacy annexed to the vicarage of Loughdon, rated in the king's books at £5 8s. 6½d. The church, a very ancient structure, with a fine old tower and steeple, is dedicated to St Gregory. The patrons are the dean and chapter of Westminster. This parish possesses charitable bequests to the amount of about £30 per annum. It is 4½ m. W.S.W. from Upton-upon-Severn. Population, in 1801, 659; in 1831, 879. Assessed property, £4,510.

CASTLE NORTHWICH, a township in that part of the parish of Great Budworth, which is in the second division of the hundred of Eddisbury, county-palatine of Chester. Population, in 1801, 385; in 1831, 692. Assessed property, £991.

CASTLE-RISING, a parish and borough—formerly a market-town—having separate jurisdiction, locally in the Lynn division of the hundred of Freebridge, county of Norfolk. The living is a rectory united with that of Roydon, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the rector, rated in the king's books at £8. The church, an ancient structure in the Norman style of architecture, richly ornamented on the western front with a square tower rising from the centre, is dedicated to St Lawrence. The patrons, in 1829, were the Hon. Fulke Howard and Mrs Howard. Castle-Rising was formerly a considerable seaport, scarcely inferior to those of Lynn and Yarmouth. Its harbour, however, either from neglect or the natural effect of wind and tide, became gradually choked up, its trade declined, its population decreased, and its bustling market, which was held twice in the week, has long been entirely discontinued. It derives its name from an ancient castle that stood on an eminence to the south of the town. The castle has long been in ruins, but its ruins amply attest its ancient strength and magnificence. It was the property of the Howards, and was often the temporary residence of royalty. Here, the 'she-wolf of France,' Isabel, after the murder of her husband, Edward II., and the death of her paramour, Mortimer, was shut up from the year 1330 till her decease in 1358. The government of the borough was originally vested in a mayor, twelve aldermen, and an indefinite number of burgesses, aided by a recorder, high steward, and other officers; now the whole is vested in two aldermen who alternately elect each other to the office of mayor! and who, until the disfranchisement of their snug little borough by the fatal reform bill, enjoyed the privilege of sending a representative each to parliament! There are several chalybeate springs in the parish, and it gives the title of baron to the duke of Norfolk. Population, in 1801, 254; in 1831, 358. Assessed property, £1,400.

CASTLE-THORPE, a parish about 2½ m. in length, and 1½ in breadth, in the hundred of Newport and county of Buckingham. The living is a curacy to the rectory of Hanslope, in the archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Lincoln. The chapel is dedicated to St Mary. The patronage goes with the rectory of Hanslope. Here was the ancient castle of the barony of Hanslope, taken and demolished in 1217, by Fulke de Brent. A deep ditch and a lofty artificial mount are the only remains of this building. Earl Spencer is the chief proprietor in this parish. It is 5 m. N.N.E. from Stony-Stratford. Population, in 1801, 260; in 1831, 366. Assessed property, £1,767.

CASTLE-THORPE, a hamlet in the parish of Broughton, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln. It is 1½ m. from Glandfordbridge.

CASTLETON, a parish in the hundred of High Peak, county of Derby. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry of Derby and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry, rated in the king's books at £6 7s. 6d., and endowed with £200 private benefaction, and £600 royal bounty. The church, a small but fine specimen of early English architecture, is dedicated to St Edmund. Patron, the bishop of Chester. Castleton is a considerable village, situated at the bottom of a rugged eminence on which is seated the ancient castle from which it derives its name. The inhabitants draw their means of subsistence principally from the mining district by which it is surrounded. The town has been formerly fortified by a rampart, the ditch of which, called the town ditch, is still visible, extending to the castle, the ruins of which still seem to frown from the summit of the hill. Directly below the keep of the castle, rises the precipitous and dizzying edge of the limestone rock; at the height of 50 feet in the face of this rock is the entrance to the cavern of the Peak, or, as it is vulgarly called, the Devil's cave, through a tolerably well-formed, though somewhat depressed, Gothic arch, 46 feet high, and 120 feet wide. Within this arch the cavern recedes about 90 feet. Here a company of twine-makers have taken up their residence, and established a manufactory which excites the wonder, and sometimes the charity of the curious visitants. Beyond this first recess the light of day does not penetrate; and the remainder must be examined with torches. A low and narrow arch leads into a spacious opening called the Bell-house, whence a path leads to 'First Water.' This is a lake forty-two feet in breadth, passing below a massive arch of rocks, in some places not more than twenty inches above the surface of the water. Laying himself flat along the bottom of a small canoe, the curious visitor, with his guide, shoots through below the depending rocks into an opening 220 feet in length, 200 feet in breadth, and 121 feet in height. At the farther extremity of this vast excavation the stream, which flows along the bottom, forms itself into what is called the 'Second Water;' but this is generally passed on foot, and leads to 'Roger Rain's house,' a projecting pile of rocks so called from the petrifying water that incessantly dribbles from their numerous crevices. Beyond this is an appalling hollow called the 'Chancel,' from which an opening leads into the 'Devil's cellar,' and thence, by a rapid descent to what is called the 'Half-way house.' From the Half-way house a passage leads into another immense concavity, which, from its being formed like a bell, is called the 'Great Tom of Lincoln.' This is perhaps the finest of the whole; and, when brilliantly illuminated, has a sublime and a pleasing effect. A little beyond this the opening becomes so narrow as to be barely sufficient to carry off the water. This astonishing excavation, wholly formed of limestone strata, abounding in marine exuvia, with an occasional intermixture of schist, extends from the entrance to its farthest extremity 2300 feet, and is supposed to be 645 feet in depth from the summit of the mountain.—About a mile distant from this is the Speedwell level or Navigation mine, a scene not less wonderful than that we have just described. It is situated at the foot of 'The Winnets,' so called from certain gusts of wind that frequently burst out at that place from the hills, and was formerly worked for lead. The descent is by about a hundred steps beneath an arched vault leading to the sough or level, where the explorer is, by a boat, conveyed over a broad stream, bounded by an immense gulf, the depth of which has never been accurately ascertained, though sounded by a line of 350 feet, above which the roof, so great is its elevation, cannot be seen even with the aid of rockets and Bengal lights. Into this profound chasm, which has already swallowed upwards of 40,000 tons of rubbish, arising from the blasting of the rocks, without any apparent diminution of its depth, the superfluous water rushing through an artificial opening has an effect indescribably appalling.—A little to the west of the Speedwell mine is the Odlin lead mine, wrought by the Saxons—who imposed upon it the name of one of their chief deities—and, though it has been carried on for so many centuries, is still one of the most productive mines in the county, affording employment to upwards of 140 persons.—At a short distance from this, rising to the height of 1300 feet above the vale of Castleton, is Mam-Torr, the mother-hill, called also, from the fragments of shale and gritstone continually falling from its southern side, the shivering mountain. On its summit are the remains of a camp, supposed to be Saxon, with the greater part of the rampart entire.—Not far from this is the Water Hall mine, from which is procured the beautiful and peculiar fluor spar, locally known by the name of Blue John. Large quantities of this, particularly the violet blue and rose-coloured, are wrought up into vases, urns, time-piece cases, &c., and disposed of to dealers who disperse them over the whole kingdom. The castle is supposed to have been originally founded by Edward the Elder, or perhaps by his heroic sister, Ethelfleda. From William Peverel, a natural son of William the Conqueror, who bestowed upon him this, with thirteen other lordships in the county, who probably very much enlarged and strengthened it, received the name which it still bears, 'Peverel's Palace in the Peak.' The castle-yard, the walls of which are in some places still twenty feet high and nine feet thick, seems to have occupied the whole summit of the hill; the castle itself, equally massive in its walls, and situated on a point of the rock naturally almost inaccessible, must have been, before the use of artillery, impregnable to all assaults but those of disease and famine. The population, exclusive of the chapelry of Edale, in 1801, was 843; in 1831, 996. Assessed property, excluding the chapelry of Edale, £2,968.

CASTLETON, a parish in the hundred of Sherborne, Sherborne division, county of Dorset. The living is a curacy in the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean of Salisbury, certified value £7; annual value by the parliamentary returns £137. The chapel is dedicated to St Mary Magdalene. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Dighy. It is 1 m. E.N.E. from Sherborne. Population, in 1801, 125; in 1831, 186. Assessed property, £267.

CASTLETON, a township in the parish of Rochdale, county-palatine of Lancaster. It is 1 m. S.E. by S. from Rochdale. Population, in 1801, 5460; in 1831, 11,079. Assessed property, £13,515.

CASTLETON, a hamlet in the parish of Marshfield, county of Monmouth. It is $\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. from Newport.

CASTLEY, a township in the parish of Leathley, west riding of Yorkshire. It is $\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.N.E. from Otley. Population, in 1801, 82; in 1831, 118. Assessed property, £743.

CASTLE-WRIGHT, a township in the parish of Mainstone, hundred and county of Montgomery, North Wales. This is one of the townships incorporated for supporting the house of industry at Forden. It is in the immediate vicinity of Montgomery. Population, in 1801, 143; in 1831, 182. Assessed property, £899.

CASTON, a parish in the hundred of Wayland, county of Norfolk. The living is a rectory, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, rated in the king's books at £11 19s. 2d. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross. The patron, in 1829, was the Rev. B. Parker. It is $\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. from Watton. Population, 11

1801, 307; in 1831, 541. Assessed property, £3,131.

CASTOR, or CASTRE, a parish in the liberty of Peterborough, county of Northampton. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, rated in the king's books at £52 12s. 8½d. The church, a spacious cruciform edifice, with a beautiful Norman tower of two stages, surmounted by a spire rising from the intersection, is dedicated to St Keneburgha. Castor, and the opposite village of Chesterton, occupy the site of the Roman station Duro-brivæ. It was here that the Roman road, called Erming-street, commenced. After proceeding some distance, it branched off into two divisions; one called the Forty-foot way, leading to Stamford, the other Longclitch, or High-street, running by Lolham bridge, through West Deeping, into Lincolnshire; of both these the remains are still visible. Castor is 5 m. W. from Peterborough. The population, in 1801, exclusive of the township of Ailsworth, and the chapelries of Sutton and Upton, was 475; in 1831, 669. Assessed property, £3,049.

CASWELL-BAY, a rocky bay in the Bristol channel, hundred of Swansea. There are the ruins of an ancient chapel here, and some highly romantic scenery. It is 4 m. S. from Swansea.

CATCH-BURN, a township in the parish of Morpeth, east division of Castleward, county of Northumberland. It is 1½ m. S. from Morpeth, within the new boundaries of which borough it is included. Population, in 1801, 137; in 1831, 189.

CHARD, a parish in the east division of the hundred of Kingsbury, county of Somerset. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Taunton and diocese of Bath and Wells, rated at £36 18s. 9d. The church is dedicated to St Mary. Patron, the bishop of Bath and Wells. This parish comprises the market-town of Chard, the tythings of Crim-Chard, Old Chard, South Chard, and Tatworth-with-Forton. The town of Chard is situated at the southern extremity of the county, on the highest ground between the north and south seas, a stream of water in the streets being divertible at pleasure into the English or the Bristol channel. Monday is the market-day. There are fairs on the first Wednesday in May, August, and November, for cattle and pedlery. It was constituted a borough in the reign of Edward I., and sent its representatives regularly to parliament till the 2d of Edward III., when the privilege was withdrawn and has not since been restored. Its government is vested in a portreeve and two bailiffs, chosen annually from among the burgesses at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. Chard was the scene of battle between the partizans of Charles I. under Colonel Penruddock, and the parliamentarians, in which the former sustained a signal defeat. On Brown Down in the neighbourhood of Chard are several barrows, called Robin Hood's butts, which the vulgar maintain marked the distance to which Robin Hood and Little John were accustomed to throw their quoits. It is 140 m. W.S.W. from London. Population, in 1801, 2784; in 1831, 5141. Assessed property, £13,238.

CHARLTON, a parish in the hundred of Blackheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, county of Kent. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Rochester, rated at £10 7s. 8½d. The church is dedicated to St Luke. Patron, in 1829, Sir T. M. Wilson, Bart. A weekly market and an annual fair were formerly held here. The market has long been discontinued, but the fair is still holden on St Luke's day. It is called Horn fair, some say, from the custom of carrying small horns at this fair in honour of St Luke; others say that it is so called from an intrigue of the ill-starred King John, who, being detected by the husband, was obliged to compound for his offence, by a liberal grant of land and the establishment of this fair. It does not appear that there is any existing document of such a transaction, but a grotesque, and not very decorous procession, which took place annually at this fair, till considerably in the latter half of the last century, and was accompanied by so many indecencies, as to give rise to the proverb, 'All is fair at Horn Fair,' gives some countenance to the suspicion that it really happened. The jurisdiction of the court of requests for the recovery of debts under 40s., which is held at Bromley, Greenwich, and Woolwich, alternately extends over this parish, the inhabitants having the right to choose six of the commissioners. The parish abounds in villas; and nearly opposite the church, stands the noble old manor-house, built by Sir Adam Newton, tutor to Prince Henry, within which is deposited a fine collection of specimens illustrative of natural history. In front of this house are a row of cypress trees, said to be the first that were planted in England. Dr Plot says, that "there was a marble chimney-piece in the dining-room of this house, so exquisitely polished, that the lord of Doune could see in it a robbery committed on Shooter's-hill, whereupon, sending out his servants, the thieves were taken." It is 8 m. E.S.E. from London. Population, in 1801, 747; in 1831, 2327. Assessed property, £5,652.

CHARTER-HOUSE, an extra-parochial liberty in Finsbury division, in the hundred of O. sulston, county of Middlesex. The history of this place is thus given by Tanner: "Sir Walter de Manny, one of the first knights of the most noble order of the Garter, in the year of the great plague, 1349, bought a piece of ground without West Smithfield bars, which he enclosed, and got consecrated for the burial of the dead. It was thereupon called the New Chirche-hawe, and a chapel was built, wherein, about the year 1360, the above-mentioned knight intended to found a college for a warden, or dean, and twelve secular priests; but in the next year that design was altered, when Michael de Northbury, bishop of London, joined with him in the building and endowing a priory in this place for double the number of Carthusian monks, which was to be called the 'Salutation of the mother of God,' and was finished about A.D. 1370. The yearly revenues of this house, which was surrendered June 10th, 1535, were valued 26^o of Hen. VIII. at £642 0s. 4d. ob. Dugd. £736 2s. 7d. Speed. The site was first granted, as it is said, to Sir Thomas Audley, but to Sir Edward North, knight, 36^o Hen. VIII. and 1^o Marie. Upon which site Thomas Sutton, Esq. temp. Jac. I. founded and largely endowed a most magnificent hospital, consisting of a master, a preacher, a head schoolmaster and second master, with forty-four boys and eighty decayed gentlemen, who have been soldiers or merchants, besides physician, chirurgeons, register, and other officers and servants of the house. The greatest and most bountiful gift, saith Mr Stow, that ever at any time was given in England—no abbey (at the first foundation thereof) excepted, or therewith to be compared, being the gift of one man only." CHATBURN, a township in the parish of Whalley, Lancaster. It is 2½ m. E.N.E. from Clitheroe. Population, in 1801, 415; in 1831, 591. Assessed property, £1,584.

CHATHAM AND GILLINGHAM, a hundred in the lathe of Aylesford, and near the north side of the county of Kent, containing 2 parishes, and a population of 6,363.

CHATHAM,

A market-town and parish, adjoining, or forming a suburb, to the city of Rochester, but chiefly in the hundred of Chatham and Gillingham, lathe of Aylesford, county of Kent. Population, in 1801, 10,505; in 1831, 17,936. Assessed property, £23,222.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—The living is a curacy, not in charge, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Rochester. The church, a plain modern structure of brick containing a number of elegant monuments, is dedicated to St Mary. The patrons are the dean and chapter of Rochester. To accommodate the increasing population a district church has recently been erected, and an elegant chapel in the dock-yard to accommodate the officers and the numerous artificers with their families there employed. The living of the former is a perpetual curacy in the gift of the perpetual curate of Chatham, the latter a perpetual curacy in the gift of the lords of the admiralty. The Independents, Baptists, and Unitarians, have chapels here.

General description of the Docks.—Chatham, anciently called Cetham, derives its name from the Saxon cyte, a 'cottage,' and ham, a 'village,' and, till it was converted into one of the naval arsenals of England, was nothing more than what its name implies, namely, a paltry cluster of cottages. It stands on the S.E. bank of the Medway, on the north side of Chatham hill. The dock-yard, occupying an area of nearly a mile in length, was commenced in the reign of Elizabeth. It was removed to its present situation in the end of the reign of James I., and by his son Charles I., who erected capacious store-houses, and constructed docks to enable ships to float in with the tide. It was further improved by Charles II., in whose reign the Dutch, under De Ruyter and Von Ghent, after taking and destroying Sheerness, sailed up the Medway to the very front of Upnor castle. The houses of the principal officers are handsomely built, and the offices in the several departments of the yard neatly and commodiously arranged. The numerous store-houses, one of which is 660 feet in length, contain immense quantities of every article necessary for the purposes of naval equipment, all arranged in such perfect order, that upon any emergency a first rate man-of-war can be fully equipped in a few days. The mast-house is 240 feet in length, and 120 in width. Timber for making masts, some of which are three feet in diameter, and 120 in height, is constantly kept floating in two capacious basins, ready to be wrought upon the shortest notice. In the new rope-house, which is 110 feet in length and 50 feet wide, are twisted by the aid of powerful machinery, cables of great dimensions, some of them 100 fathoms in length and 25 inches in circumference. The sail loft is 210 feet in length. In the smith's shop, which contains 40 forges, every article necessary for ship-building, from the smallest bolt to an anchor of five tons in weight is made. The saw-mills on the north-east extremity of the yard, recently erected under the superintendence of Mr Brunel, are upon a most extensive scale. In the sawing-room, which is 90 feet square, are fixed eight saw frames, each capable of carrying from one to thirty saws, and two circular saw benches, with windlasses and capstans for supplying them with wood, the whole being set in motion by a most powerful steam-engine which produces eighty strokes of the saws per minute. Connected with this steam-engine are extensive water-works for the supply of the yard, and in the iron pipes laid down in various parts of the yard are fire-plugs, from which, when opened, the water is thrown far above the summits of the highest buildings. The wet-docks, four in number, are sufficiently capacious for first rate men-of-war, and there is a new stone-dock constructed, or constructing, upon a still larger scale. In the docks are six slips or launches, for building or repairing ships of the largest dimensions, and they are for the most part full. The wood is floated into the yard by a canal which passes, under a tunnel three hundred feet long, into an elliptic basin of immense depth, whence it is raised by machinery. On the ordnance wharf, which occupies a narrow neck of land between the chapel and the river, the guns belonging to each ship are laid up in tiers, with the weight of metal and the name of the ship to which they belong marked on them. The gun-carriages are laid up under cover, and immense quantities of shot are piled up pyramidally in various places. Every department has its proper officer, and nothing can exceed the order and despatch with which every thing is executed here. The number of artificers and labourers employed is at all times great, but in the time of war they commonly exceed three thousand. The defence of this important arsenal was originally confided principally to guardships in the river, aided first by Upnor castle, and by fortifications thrown up at Sheerness, which were strengthened and extended at different periods with the special purpose of adding security to Chatham. As its stores were accumulated, however, its importance became more apparent, and, in 1758, an act was passed for purchasing ground and constructing such works as should place it in perfect security. Under this act the lines were erected. These lines commence on the banks of the Medway, above the ordnance wharf, and encircle an area of a mile in length from east to west, and of one-half mile from north to south, including the church of Chatham, the village of Brompton, the barracks, and the magazine, to beyond the western extremity of the dockyard where they again meet the river. During the American war, these lines were enlarged and strengthened by the erection of a strong redoubt on the summit of an eminence commanding the river. By subsequent acts they have been still further improved and strengthened by the erection of Fort Pitt on an eminence overlooking the town, and commanding the upper part of the river. Since the conclusion of the war, this fort has been used as an hospital.

Barracks, &c.—Connected in some degree with the defences of the town are the barracks, of which there are first, the Lower or Marine barracks, a large and uniform range of building, enclosing a spacious quadrangle. Second, The Upper or Brompton barracks, also neatly built, extensive and commodious. Third, The New or Artillery barracks, built in 1804, forming three sides of a quadrangle, and containing suitable apartments for the officers and accommodation for twelve hundred men. The open side of this quadrangle commands a most charming view of the Medway, with the Thames in the distance. The artillery hospital, erected in 1809, contains wards for 100 patients, with offices for the medical establishment. The premises, formerly occupied as a victualling office for supplying the ships lying at Chatham, Sheerness, and the Nor, stand at the entrance into the town from Rochester. They were held upon lease from the dean of Rochester; and the lease being out, they have been appropriated to private purposes.

Hospitals, &c.—Melville hospital, intended for the use of the whole naval department, has been recently erected at a short distance from Chatham, at an expense of £70,000. It forms a beautiful range of building, and has apartments for 340 patients. Here is also an hospital for decayed mariners and shipwrights, with their widows, founded by Sir John Hawkins in 1592. A fund commonly called the chest, sometimes the Chatham chest, established here in 1586, by Sir Francis Drake and Sir John Hawkins for the relief of sailors who had been disabled in the service to which, after the defeat of the great armada, the seamen of the royal navy agreed to contribute a portion of their pay, has, in consequence of some defect in the management, been transferred to Greenwich, and the management, which was formerly vested in the principal naval officers, committed to the first lord of the admiralty, the comptroller of the navy, and the governor of Greenwich hospital, "Gundulph, bishop of Rochester, temp. Will. Rufi, founded the hospital of St Bartholomew here for leprous people, which was after confirmed by King Henry III. and other kings, and increased by several benefactors. The governor was styled custos or warden, and sometimes prior, and the brethren canons: it escaped dissolution, and is still existing under the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester." Tanner's Not. Mon. There are at present on this foundation four brethren, two of whom are in holy orders, and officiate as chaplains.

Trade, Franchise, &c.—The town was paved and lighted under the provisions of an act passed in 1772, but the streets are still narrow and inconvenient. The market-day is Saturday. Horse-races are annually held in the month of August, and there are fairs of three days' continuance, each commencing on the 15th of May and 19th of September. A school has recently been erected at an expense of £1600, defrayed by a hundred shareholders of £15 each. The town is partly in the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, and partly in the jurisdiction of the town of Rochester. For the recovery of debts below £5 it is wholly within the jurisdiction of a court of requests held at Rochester. This place now returns one member to parliament. The number of electors are about 1200. Chatham, which, with Rochester and Stroud, forms one continuous street two miles in length, has been rendered much less of a thoroughfare by the new road to Canterbury being carried to the south of the town without entering it. It is 30½ m. S. E. of London.

CHATHILL, a township in the parish of Ellingham, county of Northumberland. It is 8½ m. N. of Alnwick. Population, in 1801, 39; in 1831, 30.

CHATSWORTH, an extra parochial liberty in the hundred of High Peak, county of Derby.

CHATSWORTH-HOUSE, the seat of William Spencer Cavendish, duke of Devonshire, stands in a wide and deep valley, near the foot of a lofty eminence, covered with wood, in this liberty. The building is of the Ionic order, and forms nearly a square of 100 feet. The interior is splendidly adorned with painted walls and ceilings, and a variety of exquisite carvings by Gibbons. The dancing gallery, 100 feet by 22, is exceedingly splendid. The park is 9 m. in circumference, and is beautifully diversified with hill and dale, and intersected by the river Derwent. The estate of Chatsworth anciently belonged to the family of Leeche, but was purchased by Sir William Cavendish in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The gardens are laid out in the antique style, and most gorgeously decorated with fountains, cascades, and streams poured out of the mouths of lions, dragons, and the urns of river and sea-nymphs. It was in an old mansion occupying the same spot that Mary, queen of Scots, spent a large proportion of the melancholy years of her captivity; and it was in this present mansion, then only newly finished, that Marshal Tallard was sent to reside when brought over to England a prisoner, after the battle of Blenheim. It is 3½ m. N. E. from Bakewell.

CHATTERIS, a parish in the northern division of the hundred of Wichford, Isle of Ely and county of Cambridge. The living is a vicarage in the diocese of Ely, and exempt

The church, a handsome structure, with a square tower 100 feet in height, surmounted by pinnacles, is dedicated to St Andrew. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Wells. Chedder is situated at the foot of the Mendip hills, and its dairies have been long famous for producing cheese of almost unrivalled excellence. Camden says, it was "famous in his time for the excellent and prodigious great cheeses made there, some of which require more than one man's strength to set them on the table." There are many immense excavations and rifted chasms in the neighbourhood, that seem to have been the effect of an earthquake. One of these chasms, called Chedder cliff, extends upwards of a mile in length, the rugged walls shooting up perpendicularly, frequently to the height of 800 feet. A carriage road has been formed through this valley. Nine springs issue from the foot of this cliff, on the side next Chedder, all within 30 feet of each other. These, uniting their streams about 40 feet from their sources, form the river Chedder, so remarkable for the purity of its water. Fairs for horned cattle and sheep are held here on the 4th of May and the 29th of October. It is $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. from Axbridge. Population, in 1801, 1160; in 1831, 1980. Assessed property, £8,434.

The Wesleyan Methodists and the Presbyterians have places of worship here. It is 5 m. S.W. from Tideswell. Population, in 1801, 201; in 1831, 268. Assessed property, £1,773.

CHELMONDISTON, a parish in the hundred of Samford, county of Suffolk. The living is a discharged rectory in the archdeaconry of Suffolk and diocese of Norwich, rated at £8 10s. Church, dedicated to St Andrew. Patron, the king. It is 5½ m. S.S.E. from Ipswich. Population, in 1831, 480. Assessed property, £1,639.

CHELMSFORD, a hundred in the centre of the county of Essex, surrounding the town of Chelmsford, and comprising 30 parishes which, in 1831, contained a population of 27,179 souls. By the boundary and division acts this hundred belongs to the south division of the county.

CHELMSFORD, a parish, market, and county-town, in the above hundred. Living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Essex and diocese of London, rated at £31 2s. 6d. The church, a stately structure lately rebuilt, is dedicated to St Mary. Patroness, in 1829, Lady Mildmay.—Chelmsford derives its name from an ancient ford on the river Chelmer near its junction with the Cann. It seems to have been, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, in the possession of the bishops of London. In the reign of Henry I. Maurice, bishop of London, built a stone-bridge of three arches over the Cann, and, diverting the road, which previously passed through the village of Writtle two miles to the eastward, into the line of his new bridge, made Chelmsford the great thoroughfare to the eastern parts of the county, as well as the counties of Suffolk and Norfolk. From this period its importance rapidly increased. A charter of privileges was obtained from King John, and in the reign of Edward III. it was honoured to send four representatives to a grand council held at Westminster. At present the town consists of four streets, all well-paved and lighted with gas. The houses are in general modern, and many of them have gardens behind them extending to the river. A beautiful iron-bridge has recently been thrown over the Chelmer, and an elegant stone bridge of one arch over the Cann has some time ago replaced that erected by Bishop Maurice. It is by this bridge that the populous hamlet of Moulsham is joined to the town. Near the centre of the town stands the shire-hall, an elegant and commodious structure. The old county gaol, finished in 1777 at an expense of £18,000, stands in the hamlet of Moulsham. This is perhaps the most complete establishment of the kind in Britain, possessing suitable apartments for the classification of prisoners, an infirmary for the sick, and a chapel. The prisoners are employed at various kinds of work, and the profits applied to the support of the establishment. The old house of correction has been incorporated with the gaol, and a new house of correction has been erected at Springfield-hill, at the enormous expense of nearly £56,000. It is capable of accommodating 254 prisoners, of whom 218 may be confined in separate cells; and it is composed of seven distinct ranges of building radiating from an area comprehending nine acres of ground, in the centre of which stands the governor's house, including a neat chapel, and commanding a view of 14 yards, among which the prisoners, according to a distinct scale of classification, are distributed. Eight of these yards are furnished with tread-wheels upon which 213 persons can be employed at one time. During the late war with France, two extensive ranges of barracks were erected here, but they have been since taken down. There are several large corn-mills on the Chelmer, the principal trade of the place being in corn which is sent to the London market. It possesses also an extensive traffic of a miscellaneous nature, arising from its situation as a great thoroughfare. It has a navigable canal to the Black-water river—a distance of 12 miles—which has contributed greatly to its prosperity. The market is held on Friday, and it has fairs on May 12th, and November 12th. There is a very neat and commodious theatre which is opened occasionally; assemblies and concerts take place periodically in the shire-hall; and horse-races which continue for three days are held in the latter end of July. The county-magistrates have jurisdiction within the town; and constables and other officers are appointed at a court-leet of the lord of the manor. The assizes and sessions for the county are regularly held here. The archdeacon holds his court in the established church. There are also places of worship for the Independents, Methodists, and the Society of Friends. There is a free grammar school founded and endowed by Edward VI. Two charity schools, one for 50 boys, and the other for 20 girls, are supported here by subscription; and there are besides a Lancasterian, a national, and an infant school. A convent of Black friars was established here at an early period. The revenue of this convent at the dissolution was £9 6s. 5d. It is 29 m. E.N.E. from London, and is the principal place of election for the southern division of the county. Population, in 1801, 3755; in 1831, 5435. Assessed property, £14,935.

CHELSEA,

A parish in the Kensington division of the hundred of Ossulstone, county of Middlesex. The population, in 1801, was 11,604; in 1831, 32,371. Assessed property, £126,467.

Ecclesiastical affairs.—The original living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Middlesex, rated at £13 6s. 8d. The old church, now used as a chapel, a small brick edifice, is dedicated to St Luke. It contains many curious monuments, especially one to Sir Thomas More, whose body, however, it is most probable, was interred within the Tower after his execution. The earl of Cadogan is patron. The new church, a magnificent edifice, built in 1824, at an expense of £40,000, with a lofty square tower, is also dedicated to St Luke. It is a perpetual curacy of which the rector of Chelsea is patron. The chapel in Sloan-street, a handsome edifice, built in 1830, in the later style of English architecture, with two minaret turrets at the west end, is also a perpetual curacy in the gift of the rector of Chelsea. To these may be added Park episcopal chapel, built by Sir Richard Manningham in 1718.

General Description.—Chelsea, from the beauty of its situation, and its vicinity to the metropolis, was, at an early period, selected as a place of retirement from the fatigues of business or of dissipation, and the superb mansions reared up by the illustrious loungers who courted a temporary repose in its solitude, acquired for it the appellation of a village of palaces. Here was the residence of Sir Thomas More, the witty, the upright, but bigoted chancellor of Henry VIII.; here was the princely dwelling of the bishops of Winchester; here was a favourite palace of the good Queen Bess; and here the notorious Sir Robert Walpole spent some of his years 'unclogged with cares of state.' The buildings which sheltered these great men and women of other ages, have all been taken away; but they have been replaced by others not less worthy of admiration, though they may be tenanted by less ambitious spirits. Chyne walk, in the old town, can boast many handsome and substantial houses; and Sloan-street, in the new town, presents a regular range of respectable buildings nearly a mile in length. The streets are but partially paved; but they are brilliantly lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are supplied with water by the Chelsea water-works company, incorporated in 1724. There are in Chelsea pretty extensive manufactories of soap, a very large one of floor-cloth, and a brewery. There is a considerable traffic in the article of coal, and large tracts of ground in the neighbourhood are cultivated by market gardeners. A petty session for the hundred is held here every Tuesday by the county magistrates.

Head borough, constables, and other officers, are appointed at the court-leet held for the manor. The Thames is here of great breadth, and an unsightly wooden bridge across it connects the parishes of Chelsea and Battersea.

Botanic Gardens.—The physic garden—containing 4 acres of ground—originally a present from Sir Hans Sloane to the company of apothecaries, on condition of their paying a quit-rent of £5, and delivering annually to the Royal society specimens of fifty different plants, the growth of the garden, till the number should exceed 2000—is now rich in the number, the variety, and the rarity of its plants. To the garden are attached a hot-house, green-houses, and a library of natural history. In the centre of the garden is a fine statue by Rysbach of Sir Hans Sloane, in front of which, towards the river, have been planted two remarkably fine Libanus cedars. Lectures are delivered here at stated periods by a demonstrator appointed for that purpose. A second botanic garden of considerably larger extent, well stocked with plants, arranged after the Linnæan system, in 17 compartments, has been recently formed. Lectures are delivered here annually in the months of May and June.

Military Hospital.—The most remarkable object, however, in Chelsea, is the national asylum for maimed and worn-out soldiers, the Royal military hospital, one of the noblest foundations in the world, the buildings of which alone were finished at an expense of £150,000, and of which the annual expenditure comes little short of £1,000,000. The buildings were originally commenced by James I. shortly after his accession to the English crown, as a foundation for a college devoted solely to the study of controversial theology, more particularly of the points at issue between the English and the Romish churches. He accordingly incorporated a provost and fellows by the title of King James' college of Chelsea, and this corporation he endowed by his letters patent with certain lands in Chelsea, authorizing it at the same time to receive from any of his loving subjects who were willing to bestow them, lands not exceeding in whole the annual value of £3,000. From the frivolity and natural indolence of his character,—from his extreme poverty,—his contentings with his parliaments, and his negotiations for a splendid match to his son, 'baby Charles,' James made but little progress with the building of his new college, though collections were made for it in 1616 in a number of parishes: still it was kept on foot. Charles I., intent only upon extending his prerogatives, had neither the time, the means, nor the inclination to extend the interests of learning; and the college of Chelsea fell into the hands of Charles II. at the restoration just as his grandfather had left it. A convenient hospital for sick, maimed, and superannuated soldiers having been long wanted, that monarch converted the unfinished buildings of King James' college of Chelsea to that use; hence its name to this day, the college of Chelsea. Thus, recommenced by Charles II., the buildings were somewhat forded by James II.; but they were completed by William and Mary in 1692, under the direction of Sir Christopher Wren. The building, which, with the exception of the ornamental parts, is of brick, stands at a short distance from the river, in the form of a parallelogram, and has a very noble appearance. The principal part is a large quadrangle, in the centre of which is a statue of Charles II. The two wings are each 365 feet in length, and consist chiefly of the pensioners' wards. The whole length from east to west is 790 feet. In the centre of the north side is a large vestibule lighted by a dome, on one side of which is the chapel, containing an admirable painting of the 'Resurrection,' by Ricci, and on the other, the grand hall in which the pensioners dine. The south side of the quadrangle is open to the river, affording a fine view of the extensive gardens which reach to its margin. To the north is a field of 13 acres, laid out in walks, with avenues of fine trees. The number of in-pensioners is about 500; the number of out-door pensioners is indefinite. The inmates are provided with clothes, lodging, and diet, and an allowance of eight-pence per week. York hospital, also in this parish, is a receptacle for wounded soldiers arriving from foreign stations who are waiting for a vacancy in the royal college.

Military Asylum.—The royal military asylum was founded in 1801 by parliamentary grant, under the auspices of the late duke of York. Its objects are to support and educate the orphan children of soldiers, and children whose fathers are on foreign stations. To the support of this institution the whole army contributes annually one day's pay. Upwards of seven hundred boys and three hundred girls are here maintained, and taught reading, writing, and arithmetic. The girls are also taught needle-work, &c.

CHELSEFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, county of Kent. The living is a rectory with the chapel of Farnborough, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Rochester, rated at £24 14s. 2d. Church dedicated to St Mary. Patrons, the master and wardens of All Souls college, Oxford. It is 7 m. S.E. from Bromley. Population, in 1801, 605; in 1831, 796. Assessed property, £3,174.

CHELSHAM, a parish in the upper division of the hundred of Tandridge, county of Surrey. The living is a curacy to the vicarage of Wasingham, in the archdeaconry of Surrey and diocese of Winchester, not in charge. The chapel is dedicated to St Leonard. It is 7 m. S.E. from Croydon. Population, in 1801, 201; in 1831, 279. Assessed property, £2,018.

CHELTENHAM, a hundred in the eastern division of the county of Gloucester, containing 4 parishes, and, in 1831, 15,522 inhabitants.

CHELTENHAM

A market-town and parish in the hundred of II.

Cheltenham and county of Gloucester. Population, in 1801, 3076, in 1831, 22,942. Assessed property, £35,637.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—The living is a perpetual curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester. The church, an ancient cruciform structure, in the early decorated and later styles of English architecture, with a square tower arising from the intersection, and surmounted by a lofty octagonal spire, is dedicated to St Mary. The patronage is in the hands of the society for the purchase of livings. To accommodate the rapidly increasing population, several chapels-of-ease have been recently erected here. The living of each of these is a perpetual curacy. The patrons are trustees elected by the subscribers for a term of 40 years, after which the right of presentation is vested in the perpetual curate of Cheltenham. In addition to all these, a new free church has just been completed, the one half of the expense of which was defrayed by a grant from the parliamentary commissioners, and the other by a general subscription among the inhabitants. There are several dissenting chapels here.

General Description.—Cheltenham is delightfully situated in an extensive and fertile valley, open to the south and west, but on the north and east sheltered by the immense amphitheatre formed by the Cotswold hills, which terminate abruptly about two miles to the east of the town. Its name is derived from the small river Chilt, which, rising at Dowdswell, in the vicinity, flows by the north side of the town on its way to the Severn, which it enters at Wainslade. The town consists principally of one street, something better than a mile in length, which contains, with houses of ancient date and mean appearance, many fine ranges of buildings. Branching off from this main street numerous new streets have been formed, which display in all their beauty the elegant and tasteful varieties of architectural decoration. All of them are well paved and brilliantly lighted with gas, under the authority of an act of parliament passed in the 59th of George III., enlarged and amended in the 2d of George IV.

Mineral Springs.—Cheltenham derives its importance solely from its medicinal or mineral springs, the first of which was discovered by accident in the year 1716. Several others have at different periods been discovered since, possessing, in varied proportions, chalybeate, aperient salts, chiefly sulphate of soda, sulphate of magnesia, and oxide of iron, held in solution by carbonic acid. The last was discovered in 1803 by Dr Thomas Jameson. This, according to the analysis of the discoverer, contains a greater proportion of sulphurous gas than the others, and, in many instances, bears a strong affinity to the Harrogate waters. A modern physician of some eminence has enumerated no less than 22 diseases for which these waters may be considered remedial, but they are principally efficacious in cases of jaundice, and other diseases of the liver, in dyspepsia, and in complaints arising from the debilitating influence of hot climates. They rose, however, slowly into repute, and, it cannot be doubted, are indebted for the greater part of the cures they have effected to concomitant circumstances and the force of imagination. The old well was not closed in for years after it was discovered. In 1721 it was let for £61, and it must have been considerably frequented, when, in 1738, Captain Henry Killicorn erected over it a brick pavilion, supported on four arches, built a pump-room, and laid out walks for the accommodation of visitors. In 1780, the number of lodgings in the town amounted only to thirty. In 1788, Cheltenham was visited by George III. who remained in the immediate neighbourhood for some weeks, taking the benefit of the waters, and, since that time, it has been rapidly increasing in the extent and splendour of its buildings, the multitude and the wealth of its inhabitants, and especially in the number and respectability of its visitants, who average, annually, upwards of 15,000. To meet and accommodate this immense influx of valetudinary fashions, every necessary preparation is made. There are warm, cold, medicated, and vapour baths, with every necessary appendage, carefully provided for their use, and placed under the direction of prudent and experienced persons. Hotels of the first order, affording every accommodation, are numerous. Lodging-houses are to be met with, not in twos and threes, but in hundreds, splendidly fitted up, and every way suitable for visitors of the highest grade in society. For their convenience and gratification, various libraries, reading-rooms, and musical repositories, are richly stored, and carefully conducted. Of late years, a splendid suit of rooms has been completed, where, under the superintendence of a master of the ceremonies, concerts and assemblies are regularly held during the season, and the theatre, an uncommonly neat one, is regularly opened by the Cheltenham company. There are also horse-races annually in the month of July.

Trade, &c.—The trade of the place, besides what is necessary for the supply of the inhabitants and their numerous visitors, consists in malt and the various kinds of medicinal salts. For the preparation of the latter there is a very large manufactory on the road to Bath. Coal is brought by the Severn to Gloucester, from Staffordshire, from Shropshire, and the Forest of Dean, and thence by a railroad to the wharfs at the west end of the town. Thursday and Saturday are the market-days. The fairs are the second Thursday of April, the fifth of August for lambs and pedlery, the second Thursday in September, and the third Thursday in December for cattle and cheese. The first and second Thursdays after Michaelmas day are also statute fairs. Cheltenham is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates who hold a petty-session for the division every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. A high bailiff and constables are appointed at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. Local affairs are under the control of commissioners appointed under an act of the 2d of George IV. Cheltenham now returns one member to parliament. The number of electors is about 2,067. A monastery was founded here in 803. Cheltenham is 94 m. N.W. from London.

CHELVESTON, or CHELSTON, a parish in the hundred of Higham-Ferrers. The living is a curacy with Caldicot to the vicarage of Higham-Ferrers. Chapel, dedicated to St John the Baptist. It is 2 m. E. from Higham-Ferrers. Population, in 1801, including the hamlet of Caldicot, 266; in 1831, 332. Assessed property, £1,907.

CHELVEY, a parish in the hundred of Hartcliffe with Bedminster, county of Somerset. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Bath and diocese of Bath and Wells, rated at £4 9s. 7d. The church is dedicated to St Bridget. The patroness, in 1829, was Lady Tynte. It is 8½ m. W.S.W. from Bristol. Population, in 1801, 43; in 1831, 70. Assessed property, £622.

CHELWOOD, a parish in the hundred of Keynsham, county of Somerset, 2 m. S.E. from Pensford. The living is a discharged rectory in the archdeaconry of Bath and diocese of Bath and Wells, rated at £5 7s. 6d. The church is dedicated to St Leonard. Patron the bishop of Bath and Wells. The Independents have an endowed chapel here. There are in this parish extensive coal-mines. Population, in 1801, 192; in 1831, 216. Assessed property, £1,972.

CHELWORTH, a tything in the parish of St Sampson, Wiltshire. It is 1¼ m S.W. from Cricklade.

CHENEYS, or CIENTES, a parish in the hundred of Burnham, county of Buckingham. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Buckingham, and diocese of Lincoln, rated at £12 16s. 0½d. The church is dedicated to St Michael. The patron is the duke of Bedford. John Russell, Esq., ancestor of his grace the duke of Bedford, was raised to the peerage in 1538-9, by the title of Baron Russell of Cheneys, a title still borne by his descendants. It is 5 m. E.N.E. from Amersham. Population, in 1801, 423; in 1831, 649. Assessed property, £2,400.

CHEPSTOW, a parish, port, and market-town in the upper division of the hundred of Caldicot, county of Monmouth. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Llandaff, rated at £6 16s. 8d., endowed with £200 private benefaction, and £200 royal bounty. The church, formerly the conventual church of the priory, and exhibiting a fine specimen of Norman architecture at the western entrance, is dedicated to St Mary. Patroness, in 1829, Mrs Davies. Chepstow is delightfully situated on the slope of a hill among the lofty cliffs that rise abruptly from the western bank of the Wye near its confluence with the Severn. It is neatly built, the streets broad, well-paved, and lighted with gas. There are no manufactures carried on here, but the foreign trade is considerable. Wines are imported from Oporto, and deals, hemp, flax, and pitch, from Norway and Russia. It is the port of all the towns on the rivers Wye and Lug, and supplies Herefordshire and the eastern part of Monmouthshire with all the necessary imports. It exports bark, iron, cider, coal, and millstones. It sends a vast quantity of timber to Plymouth, Portsmouth, and Deptford; and the Bristol market depends upon it in a great measure for its supply of grain. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent, for which there are convenient docks on the banks of the Wye. The tide runs up the river with wonderful rapidity, and rises frequently to the height of from 50 to 60 feet. It has even been known to rise 70 feet. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday, and there are markets on the last Monday of every month for horses, cattle, sheep, pigs, and wool. The fairs are Friday and Saturday in Whitsun-week, the Saturday before June 20th, August 1st, and the Friday before October 29th. There is a small theatre which is occasionally opened for the amusement of the inhabitants. The petty-sessions are held here for the division by the county-magistrates. The curious old wooden-bridge over the Wye has been of late displaced by an elegant iron-bridge, at the joint expense of the counties of Gloucester and Monmouth, that river forming the line of separation between them. The passage over the Severn, within two miles of the town, has also been greatly improved by the erection of stone-piers, and the establishment of a steam-packet. Besides the established churches, there are places of worship here for the Baptists, the Independents, the Wesleyan Methodists, and the Roman Catholics.—The name of this place is supposed to be derived from the Saxon chepe, a 'market,' and stowe, a 'town.' From the earls of Pembroke, who possessed it at the time of the conquest, it obtained the name of Striguil, Striguil being the name of the castle in which they resided, they were called lords of Striguil, and under this designation the manorial courts are held to this day. A strong castle was erected here on the summit of a precipice overhanging the Wye, by William Fitz-Osborn, earl of Hereford, not long after the conquest. The remains of this castle, overgrown with ivy, form a striking and picturesque object from almost every point in which it can be viewed. About the same time the castle was built, the town was fortified with strong walls, portions of which, with the bastions erected for their defence, are still remaining. In the reign of Stephen there was founded here a priory of Benedictine monks, dedicated to St Mary. At the dissolution it contained three religious, and its revenues were estimated at £32 4s. per annum. In the contest between Charles I. and his parliament, the inhabitants adhered to the royal cause, and the castle was not surrendered to the parliamentarians till after a vigorous siege. The duke of Beaufort is lord of the manor and proprietor of the fisheries in the Severn from Cone-pill to the New-passage, and in the Wye from Brockwar to the mouth of Chepstow river. Population, in 1801, 2080; in 1831, 3524. Assessed property, £6,280.

CHERRHILL, a chapelry in the parish and hundred of Calne, county of Wilts. The living is a curacy to the vicarage of Calne, not in charge. The chapel is dedicated to St James. On the summit of a hill near this village is Oldbury camp, the supposed retreat of the Danes after the battle of Ethenden. On the slope of the same hill is the figure of a horse 157 feet long, in a trotting attitude, cut out of the turf, on the chalk rock. It was executed under the direction, and at the expense of Dr Christopher Allsop, an eminent physician of Calne, and from its situation, being the highest land between London and Bath, is visible at the distance of 20 miles in almost every direction. It is 2½ m. E. from Calne. Population, in 1801, 304; in 1831, 404. Assessed property, £1,917.

CHERINGTON, a parish in the Brilles division of the hundred of Kington, county of Warwick. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Worcester, rated at £11 10s. 7½d. The church is dedicated to St John the Baptist. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. S. Nichol. It is 4 m. S.E. from Shipston-upon-Stour. Population, in 1801, 290; in 1831, 328. Assessed property, £1,719.

CHERITON, a parish in the hundred of Folkstone, lathe of Shepway, county of Kent. The living is a rectory, consolidated with the vicarage of Newington, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Canterbury, rated in the king's books at £16 12s. 6d. The church is dedicated to St Martin. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. J. D. Brockman. It is 2 m. W.N.W. from Folkstone. Population, in 1801, 727; in 1831, 1143. Assessed property, £3,332.

CHERITON, a parish in the hundred of Swansea, county of Glamorgan, South Wales. The living is a rectory in the diocese of Llandaff, rated at £9 7s. 3½d., returned at £117. Patron, the king, as prince of Wales. The village of Cheriton is pleasantly situated on the small river of Iury. The harbour has six feet of water at all times on the bar, but it is open to the N.W., and the tail of the Hopper sand bank, which is continually shifting, makes the entrance sometimes dangerously narrow. It is 14 m. W.N.W. from Swansea. Population, in 1801, 235; in 1831, 242. Assessed property, £816.

CHERITON, a parish in the hundred of Fawley, Fawley division of the county of Southampton. The living is a rectory with the curacies of Kilnstone and Titchbourn, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the incumbent, rated at £66 2s. 6d. Church dedicated to St Michael. Patron, the bishop of Winchester. This parish is within the jurisdiction of the Cheney-court, Winchester. It is 3 m. W.S.W. from New Alresford. Population, in 1801, 411; in 1831, 722. Assessed property, £3,484.

CHERITON-BISHOP'S, a parish in the hundred of Wonsford, county of Devon. Living, a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Exeter, rated at £22 13s. 4d. Church dedicated to St Mary. Patron, the bishop of Exeter. It is 6 m. S.W. from Crediton. Population, in 1801, 604; in 1831, 799. Assessed property, £3,110.

CHERITON (NORTH), a parish in the hundred of Horethorne, county of Somerset. Living, a discharged rectory in the archdeaconry of Wells and diocese of Bath and Wells, rated at £8 12s. 1d. Church dedicated to St John the Baptist. Patron, in 1829, the Reverend Thomas Gatehouse. It is 3 m. S.S.W. from Wincanton. Population, in 1801, 233; in 1831, 246. Assessed property, £1,662.

CHERITON (South), a hamlet in the parish of Horsington, Somersetshire.

CHERITON-FITZPAINE, a parish in the hundred of West Budleigh, county of Devon. Living, a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Exeter, rated at £37 6s. 8d. Church dedicated to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. W. H. Arundell. It is 5 m. N.N.E. from Crediton. Population, in 1801, 884; in 1831, 1085. Assessed property, £5,135.

CHERRINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Longtree, county of Gloucester. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester, rated at £13. Church dedicated to St Nicholas. Patrons, in 1829, Mr and Mrs R. Brettingham. It is 4 m. N.N.E. from Tetbury. Population, in 1801, 173; in 1831, 251. Assessed property, £2,096.

CHERRINGTON, a township in the parish of Edgmond, county of Salop. Population, in 1801, 173; in 1831, 192. Assessed property, £1,527.

CHERRY-HINTON, a parish in the hundred of Flendish, county of Cambridge. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Ely, rated at £9 14s. 7d. Church dedicated to St Andrew. Patrons, the master and fellows of Peter house, Cambridge. It is 3 m. E. from Cambridge. Population, in 1801, 319; in 1831, 574. Assessed property, £2,876.

CHERTSEY, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Godley and Chertsey, county of Surrey. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Surrey and diocese of Winchester, rated at £13 13s. 4d. The church is dedicated to All Saints. Patrons, the Haberdashers' company, and the governors of Christ's hospital alternately. The town of Chertsey is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Thames, over which there is a fine bridge of seven arches. The trade is confined chiefly to malt and flour. Coarse thread, iron hoops, and brooms, form the principal articles of manufacture. The market-day is Wednesday; and there are fairs on the first Monday and Tuesday in Lent, for cattle; on the 14th of May for sheep; on the 6th of August and 25th of September for toys and pedlery. The government of the town is vested in a bailiff, appointed for life by letters patent from the exchequer. The bailiff, with the hundred, is exempt from the jurisdiction of the sheriff, but they are within that of the county magistrates, who hold meetings for the division here on the first and third Wednesday of every month. There are here places of worship for Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians. It is supposed that it was near the town of Chertsey that Cæsar crossed the Thames in order to attack the army of the Trinobantes, under their king Cassivelaunus. "About the year 666, Erkenwald, afterward bishop of London, founded a monastery here, which was of the Benedictine order, and valued 26^o Henry VIII. at £659 15s. 8d. ob. q. per annum, Dugd. Upon its surrender, 29^o Henry VIII., the king granted it with all its lands to the abbey of Besham in Berkshire, and after the dissolution of that house, the site of Chertsey was granted, 7^o Edw. VI., to Sir William Fitz-Williams." St Anne's Well, in this parish, was formerly in great repute for curing diseases of the eyes, and St Anne's Hill, one of the most delightful situations within its boundaries, was the residence of the celebrated C. J. Fox, in the latter years of his life. In the Porch House, at Chertsey, also, did 'the melancholy Cowley' close his days. Day, the poet, but better known as the author of Sandford and Merton, domiciled in this vicinity. It is 19 m. W.S.W. from London. Population, in 1801, 2819; in 1831, 4795. Assessed property, £18,022.

CHESEL, a hamlet in the parish of West Winterslow, Wiltshire.

CHESELBORNE, a parish in the hundred of Whiteway, Sherborne division of the county of Dorset. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Dorset and diocese of Bristol, rated at £18 10s. 5d. Patron, in 1829, Lord Rivers. It is 10½ m. W.S.W. from Blandford Forum. Population, in 1801, 268; in 1831, 351. Assessed property, £1,795.

CHESHAM, a market-town and parish in the first division of the hundred of Burnham, county of Buckingham. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Lincoln in two mediæties, Chesham-Leicester and Chesham-Woburn, consolidated in 1767, and each rated at £13 1s. 5½d. The church is dedicated to St Mary. Patron, the duke of Bedford. Wednesday is the market-day for corn, Saturday for provisions in general, straw-plait, &c. The fairs are on the 21st of April, 22d of July, and 28th of September. The two first are chiefly for cattle. It is 29 m. N.W. by W. from London. Population, in 1801, 5388. Assessed property, £15,656.

CHESHAM-BOIS, a parish in the first division of the hundred of Burnham, county of Buckingham. The living is a donative rated at £5 6s. 8d. The church is dedicated to St Leonard. Patron, the duke of Bedford. It is 1½ m. from Chesham. Population, in 1801, 135; in 1831, 157. Assessed property, £1,186.

CHESHIRE,

A county-palatine, bounded on the N. and N.W. by the county of York, the county-palatine of Lancaster, the estuary of the Mersey, and the Irish sea; on the E. by the counties of Derby and Stafford; on the S. by the counties of Salop and Flint; on the W. by the estuary of the Dee, and the counties of Denbigh and Flint. It extends from 53^o to 53^o 3' N. lat., and from 1^o 46' to 3^o 29' W. long. Its greatest length, taking it at the extreme points, from east to west, may be somewhat better than 50 miles; and its greatest breadth, from north to south, about 30. Its form is oval, with a narrow neck of land on the west of about six miles in breadth, projecting between the estuaries of the Dee and the Mersey nearly 20 miles into the Irish sea, and a still narrower stripe on the east, projecting about 15 miles between the counties of York and Derby. It has been estimated to contain 1052 square miles or about 673,280 statute acres, of which not more than 200,000 are supposed to be arable, the remainder being woodlands, wastes, commons, meres, marshes, water-courses, mosses, and sea-sands. It comprises eighty-seven parishes, twelve market-towns, and one city; is divided into seven hundreds, and contained, in 1801, a population of 191,751; and in 1831, 334,410 souls. Assessed property, £1,083,083.

Physical Features.—The surface of this county being almost one dead level, presents a landscape for the most part tame and uninteresting. Some hills, but of no great altitude, rise upon its eastern border, forming as it were first steps to the romantic mountains of Derbyshire. A few have also been dropped across the Wirral, between the estuaries of the Dee and Mersey; a few in the hundreds of Bucklow and Broxton, and Alderly-edge by itself in the hundred of Macclesfield, but none of them are entitled to any particular description. Its woods are nearly confined to the hedgerows, which are numerous, to the coppices that adorn gentlemen's seats, and to the parks and pleasure-grounds that surround the residences of the nobility. It abounds also with meres or small lakes, most of them abounding in fish, and some of them not without beauty. In the article of landscape nothing here approaches to the sublime, but its wide-spread mosses, its dreary and seemingly interminable wastes, by courtesy still termed forests, and, at ebb tide, its "broad and ribbed sea-sands."

Rivers.—This county is watered by numerous streams, all of them having a northerly course, and none of them going beyond its limits, being almost, if not altogether, without exception, all of them conducted into the Irish sea by the two principal ones, the Mersey and the Dee.—The former has its remote sources in Derbyshire, and is formed by the junction of the Etherow and Goyt rivers, on the border of the county to the east of Stockport. From Stockport to the Irish sea it forms the boundary between this county and Lancashire, to which, as forming the port of Liverpool, it more properly belongs.—The Dee rises in Merionethshire, and approaching Cheshire near Shocklach, forms the boundary between Cheshire and Denbighshire, till it approaches Aldford, whence, with very few windings, it flows on to Chester, and from Chester, by an artificial channel, formed at a vast expense, it is carried direct into the broad estuary which unites it with the Irish sea.—To these the next in importance is the Weaver, which has its rise in a mere, called Ridley pool, on Bulkeley heath, and flowing by Nantwich to Northwich, is there joined by the Dane, a considerable stream; and a little farther on by the Peover, also of some magnitude; after which it flows by Frodsham to Winton, where it meets by the same estuary with the Mersey,—the Irish sea. Its whole course is about 30 miles, for 20 of which it has been rendered navigable, at a considerable expense indeed, but, latterly, with immense profits.—The Dane, rising in Macclesfield forest, has at first a southerly course; and, for a considerable distance, forms the boundary between this county and that of Stafford. Taking a westerly course, it flows by Congleton, and Middlewich to Northwich, where, as we have already seen, it falls into the Weaver.—The Bolling has its sources also in Macclesfield forest, and flowing in a northerly direction, falls into the Mersey, after a course of nearly twenty miles.—The Tame rises in Yorkshire, and, flowing to the west, forms the boundary between Cheshire and Lancashire, till it falls into the Mersey near Stockport.—The Peover, as we have seen, is a tributary of the Weaver, which it enters not far from Northwich.—The Weelock is a tributary of the Dane, which it enters near Croxton. Besides the rivers which contribute so much to the internal communication of the county, it has the advantage of numerous canals which intersect it in almost all directions.

Soil, &c.—The soil of this county is various. To a considerable extent clay and sand predominate, in some places clay. Towards the confines of Yorkshire and Derbyshire peat-earth is the predominant soil, as is also the case in several other districts. In some parts of this county potatoes are cultivated to a great extent. In a great part of the county, however, the dairy is the great object of the attention of the farmer, and cheese has long been one of its staple productions, not less than 12,000 tons—the produce, according to a late survey, of 32,000 cows—being made annually. In the southern parts of the county it is mostly bought up by factors for the London merchants; and to the northern parts the markets of Liverpool, Manchester, and Stockport, are always open. Another important staple of this county is salt, which is found here in greater abundance than any where else in Great Britain. Nearly 17,000 tons have been produced from the brine springs alone in one year. This, however, is a mere trifle to the rock salt dug in the neighbourhood of Northwich, where, from one single pit—and there are a number of them—100 tons are raised in a day. The supply is for the most part furnished to the Scottish and Irish fisheries, to those of Newfoundland, and the other British colonies in that quarter, and to the different ports on the Baltic. Coal is another necessary requisite for manufacturing processes, which this county, especially in the northern districts, yields in abundance and of excellent quality. Lead is also found at Alderby-edge, and cobalt, from which malt is manufactured scarcely to be distinguished from that of Saxony. Freestone of excellent quality is found in several places, and by the Mersey and the duke of Bridgewater's canal, particularly from the quarries of Runcorn, is sent to Liverpool and Manchester in large quantities. Marl is found in almost every part of the county.

Manufactures, &c.]—Manufactures of various kinds are extensively carried on throughout this county. Of these the most extensive seems to be that of cotton, which, from Lancashire, has extended itself here in some places to the exclusion of almost every other. Silk, in the various branches of ribands, ferrets, handkerchiefs, &c., is also carried on extensively, as is the tanning of leather, the manufacturing of shoes, gloves, hats, threads, buttons, and a few places, woollen cloths.

History.]—Under the Britons, this county formed part of the territory of the Cornavii. By the first Roman division of the country, it was included in Britannia-Superior by the second in Flavia Cæsariensis. After the conquest it was by the conqueror bestowed upon his nephew, Hugh de Avaranches. In the reign of Henry III., John, earl of Chester, dying without male issue, that monarch seized upon the earldom, which he bestowed upon his eldest son, Prince Edward. It was erected into a principality by Richard II. Under his successor, it again became a county-palatine, and continued under the king's eldest sons, as earls of Chester, to be governed by a separate and an independent jurisdiction. Under Henry VII., the city of Chester was separated from the county, being constituted a county of itself. Under Henry VIII., the privileges of the counties-palatine were greatly curtailed, and, in return, two knights were allowed in parliament to represent the county, and two burgesses the city of Chester. By the recent reform and division of counties acts this county is divided into northern and southern divisions, each of which returns two members. The principal place of election for the former is Knutsford; for the latter, Chester.—There were thirteen religious-houses, including a preceptory of the knights' hospitalers, within the limits of this county, before the dissolution.

CHESHUNT, a parish in the hundred of Hertford, county of Hertford. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Middlesex and diocese of London, rated at £26. The church is dedicated to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, F. Garrett, Esq. Wolsey, in the palmy days of his glory, had large possessions here. Here, also, treasurer Burleigh built his mansion of Theobald's, which was by his son given to James I. in exchange for the manor of Hatfield Regis. Here that pedantic monarch trifled away much of his time. From this place issued many of his pithy and pleasant epistles to his 'faithful dog Steenie,' and his 'sweet baby Charles;' and here, bedrugged and beplastered by his faithful adherents, he died, not without strong suspicions of foul play, in 1625. In the village of Cheshunt, Richard Cromwell, in a house still carefully preserved, spent the latter days of his life under the name of Clarke, having died here in peace in 1712, at the advanced age of 80 years. This parish has also been fixed upon by her trustees as the seat of the late Lady Huntingdon's theological academy, originally established at Talgarth, South Wales. Its revenues amount to upwards of £1,200 per annum, and are devoted to the education of students for the ministry, who are left entirely free in the choice of the denomination of Christians amongst whom they will exercise their ministry. Population, in 1801, 3173; in 1831, 5021. Assessed property, £22,204.

CHESIL BANK, a bank of sand and gravel, thrown up by the sea, 9 miles in length, which connects the isle of Portland with the mainland. It stretches from Abbotsbury to the S.E., with a narrow sea running between it and the shore.

CHESLYN-HAY, a township in the parish of Cannock, Stafford. Population, in 1801, 443; in 1831, 648. Assessed property, £1,146.

CHESSINGTON, a parish in the lower half-hundred of Cophthorne and Effingham, county of Surrey. Living, a curacy to the vicarage of Maldon. Population, in 1801, 137; in 1831, 189. Assessed property, £1,368.

CHESTER,

A city and county of itself, locally situated in the hundred of Broxton, county-palatine of Chester, of which it is the capital. Population, in 1801, 14,977; in 1831, 21,363. Assessed property, £55,966.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.]—It is the seat of a diocese, comprehending the counties of Cheshire and Lancashire, with a portion of those of Cumberland, Westmoreland, Denbigh, Flint, and Yorkshire, comprising in all 256 parishes. Of these parishes, besides the castle and the liberties of the cathedral, which are extra-parochial, eleven are within the city of Chester, viz.—St Bridget's, a rectory not in charge, returned at £100. Patron, the bishop of Chester.—St John the Baptist, a vicarage not in charge. Patron, the earl of Grosvenor.—St John the Little is a curacy not in charge. Patrons, the mayor and corporation of the city.—St Martin's, a rectory not in charge, returned at £70. Patron, the bishop of Chester.—St Mary-on-the-Hill, a rectory rated at £32. Patron, the earl of Grosvenor.—St Michael, a curacy not in charge, returned at £90. Patron, the bishop of Chester.—St Olave, a curacy not in charge, returned at £54. Patron, the bishop of Chester.—St Oswald, a discharged vicarage, rated at £8 18s. 4d. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Chester.—St Peter's, a discharged curacy, rated at £6 13s. 4d. Patron, the bishop of Chester.—St Thomas, the church of which is in ruins.—The Holy Trinity, a discharged rectory, rated at £8 15s. 6d. Patron, the earl of Derby. Dissenters of almost every denomination have also places of worship here.

General Description.]—Chester is situated on the north bank of the Dee, on a rocky elevation, half encircled by a bend of that noble river, and has to the eye of a stranger a striking and picturesque appearance. It is walled all around, the walls being nearly 2 miles in circumference, and so broad as to admit, even where they are narrowest, of two persons to walk abreast. They form, indeed, a fine promenade for the citizens, and afford most delightful views of the estuary of the Dee, the neighbouring county of Flint, and the distant mountains of Wales. The town is composed of four principal streets running from a common centre called here the pentice—elsewhere it would be called the cross—to the four cardinal points of the compass, each terminated by an arched gateway named from their accidents, Bridge-gate, Water-gate, East-gate, and North-gate. The keeping of these gates was in former times an office of great importance and high honour, and as such, claimed by the first families of the kingdom. The streets are cut down several feet into the solid rock, and level with the streets are low shops or warehouses, above which are balustraded galleries, or rows as they are called by the inhabitants, which serve the purposes of side pavements for foot passengers. Along these rows are shops and houses, the upper stories being built over them so that they seem to run along the first floors of the houses. They are connected with the streets by flights of steps at convenient distances. In the old buildings they are closed in with heavy wooden railings and immense pillars of oak, with transverse beams supporting the upper stories; in the more modern buildings they have been greatly improved, and their appearance rendered light and airy by the use of elegantly formed iron railings. The streets, though brilliantly lighted with gas, are very indifferently paved, an inconvenience scarcely felt by foot passengers who are never seen in them except it be to cross them from one row to another on the opposite side. The new bridge is particularly worthy of notice. It consists of only one arch, but one of the largest ever attempted with stone, being 200 feet in span. It is built of Peckforton stone with granite girders, and cost not less than £40,000. Of the many fine buildings that adorn the city of Chester we cannot pretend even to give the names. The Linen-hall, erected in Water-gate street by the Irish merchants, about the year 1780, is a splendid pile of building. The Exchange in North-gate street containing concert-rooms and courts of justice, is a handsome building ornamented with four fine columns. Union-hall, and Commercial-hall were built by subscription in 1809 and 1815, to accommodate the merchants from Manchester and Yorkshire, at the fairs of July and August. In the latter of these halls are held the quarter-sessions and meetings for electing the city officers.—Of all the buildings in the city, however, that called the Castle is decidedly the most splendid. It stands on the site of the old castle, nearly the whole of which has been taken down, and contains the county-gaol, court-house, &c.* The hall itself is internally of a semi-circular form, 80 feet in diameter, and 41 feet in height. On the east side of the yard are a range of barracks, and on the opposite side is an armoury large enough it is said to store 30,000 stand of arms. The castle is a royal fortress with a governor, lieutenant-governor, &c.

Trade, &c.—Chester was at one time a place of great trade. The gradual accumulation of sand in the mouth of the river, however, rendered it impossible for vessels of any burden to enter it, and as a port it was of necessity deserted about the middle of the 15th century. By the River Dee navigation company, incorporated about the beginning of the 18th century, a new channel has been cut for the river, whereby between 2000 and 3000 acres of land have been redeemed from the sea, and the navigation so much improved that vessels of 600 tons burden can come up to the port; yet its commerce has not been restored, being, with the exception of a few ships which visit Spain, Portugal, the Mediterranean, and the Baltic, chiefly confined to Ireland. Its imports are linen in immense quantities, butter, provisions, hides, tallow, timber, iron, hemp, flax, feathers, lamb and kid skins, fruit, oil, wine, barilla, and cork, from Spain and Portugal. Its exports are cheese, lead, coal, calamine, copper-plates, and cast-iron. Its manufactures are gloves, tobacco, tobacco-pipes said to be of a very superior quality, snuff, white lead, shot, leather, &c. Ship-building is carried on to a very considerable extent, ten or twelve ships being sometimes to be seen on the stocks at one time. Its market-place is commodious and its markets at all times most plentifully supplied. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday, and the fairs are the last Thursday in February for horses and cattle, July 5th, and October 10th for articles in general, particularly Irish linen, Manchester goods, Welsh flannel, with hardwares from Birmingham and Sheffield. The races, which are held in the beginning of May, are attended by an immense concourse of people. They are run upon a fine level called Roodey, belonging to the corporation, on the side of the city and immediately beneath its walls, from which they can be seen to great advantage.

Municipal Government.—By its present charter granted by Charles II., the government of this city is vested in a mayor, a recorder, two sheriffs, 24 aldermen, and 40 common-councillors. There are 24 guilds or incorporated trades. The mayor, assisted by the recorder in conformity to ancient usage and the authority of various charters, holds a crown-mote and a port-mote. In the former of these, his jurisdiction extends to all crimes, high treason excepted, and he passes sentence of death and orders execution independently of the crown; in the latter to pleas of any amount. On the abridgment of its privileges as a county-palatine, Chester was allowed to send two members to parliament, a privilege which it still enjoys. The electors are about 1900 in number. The returning officer is the mayor. The 40s. freeholders of the city vote for the members for the southern division of the county.

Schools, &c.—There is a free grammar-school here, founded by Henry VIII., and liberally endowed for two masters and 24 boys. It has an exhibition for a scholar at one of the universities. Here is also a blue-coat school, endowed for maintaining and educating 35 boys, which has been extended to the educating of 120 boys, and there is Earl Grosvenor's school, founded in 1812, for instructing 400 boys in reading, writing, and arithmetic; and the countess of Grosvenor's, for educating as many girls. To these must be added the diocesan school, which will contain 400 scholars, with numerous infant and Sabbath schools. Charitable institutions are also numerous. One endowment, for decayed freemen alone, yields £400 per annum. The general infirmary is supported at an expense of upwards of £3,000 per annum, and the work-house, or house of industry, is carefully attended to.

History.—Chester is unquestionably a place of great antiquity. The attempts, however, to illustrate its history, while it belonged to those respectable savages the Cornavil, have not been remarkably successful. That it has been noticed by the Roman statist and geographers, under the names of Deunana and Deva, and that it was occupied by the twentieth legion, under Agricola, and remained under the power of the Romans till their final departure from the island, seems to be all that is certainly known of its early history. After the departure of the Romans, it is said to have been demolished by Egfrid the Northumbrian, and afterwards, (we are not told who rebuilt it,) by the Danes. During the contest between Henry III. and his barons, Chester was held by the earl of Derby for that monarch, who, in consequence, was particularly favourable to it, confirming all the privileges bestowed on it by the Norman earls, and embodying them under the form of a corporate government. The citizens, indeed, seem always to have ranked themselves on the side of prerogative, for which they have sometimes suffered considerable privations. In the contest with Charles I., the city suffered all the misery of a protracted siege, and from its towers that insatuated king had the mortification to witness the total route of his forces, under Sir Marmaduke Langdale, on Rowston moor, by the parliamentary troops, under the generals Poyntz and Jones. The town was seized upon, in 1688, by the Catholic Lords Aston and Molyneux, for James II., whose pusillanimous abdication happily rendered their foolish interference unavailing.—In this city there was pretty early in the Saxon times a religious house, probably a nunnery, dedicated to St Peter and St Paul. It was ruined by the wars; and in the reign of King Ethelstan, re-edified for secular canons, by the noble Elfleda, countess of Mercia, and afterwards more amply endowed by the munificence of King Edmund and others. In the year 1093, Hugh Lupus, earl of Chester, expelled from hence the seculars, and settled here an abbot and convent of Benedictine monks from Bec in Normandy. The yearly revenues of the abbey were rated, 26th Hen. VIII., at £1,003 5s. 11d., Dugd.; £1,073 17s. 7d., ob. q. Speed. Here were also the monasteries of St Mary and St Michael; the colleges of St John and the Holy Cross; the hospitals of St Giles and St John the Baptist; and houses of the Black, Grey, and White friars. The city of Chester was anciently famous for its theatrical representations, called mysteries. They appear to have been first performed here in 1328, and a thousand days of pardon from the pope, and forty from the bishop of Chester, was granted to all who attended them.

CHESTER (LITTLE), a township in the parish of St Alkmund, county of Derby. Population, in 1801, 181; in 1831, 191. Assessed property, £974.

CHESTER-PARVA, or CHESTER-THE-WATER, a hamlet in the parish of Irchester, Northampton, 2½ m. from Wallingborough.

CHESTERBLADE, a chapelry in the parish of Evercreech, and (though locally situate in the hundred of Whitestone) hundred of Wells Forum, county of Somerset. The living is a chapel to the vicarage of Evercreech, of the yearly value of £12. The chapel is dedicated to St Mary. It is 3½ m. E.S.E. from Shepton-Mallot.

CHESTERFIELD, a parish and market-town, in the hundred of Scarsdale, county of Derby. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Derby and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry, rated at £15 0s. 2½d., returned at £135. The church, which has a spire 230 feet in height, is dedicated to All Saints. Patron, the dean of Lincoln. From its Saxon name, Cæster, this place, like many other of our English towns, is supposed to have been a Roman station. From the Norman survey, where it is named Cestresfeld, it appears to have been at that time a bailiwick to Newbold, now a very poor inconsiderable hamlet in this parish. How, or by what means it rose into importance, it would, perhaps, be in vain now to inquire. It was erected into a free borough, with the privilege of markets, fairs, &c., by King John, and given by him to William Brierley. It is situated on the side of a hill, between the Hipper and the Rother, two inconsiderable rivulets, occupies a considerable extent of ground, and is irregularly built. It has a considerable trade, and extensive manufactories of cotton, silk, carpets, gloves, hosiery, &c. The neighbourhood abounds with coal, iron-stone, and lead-ore, all of which are successfully wrought. There are several iron-foundries in the parish, where all kinds of machinery are made; and lead is sent in great quantities from Chesterfield, by the canal that runs from that place into the Trent, a little below Gainsborough. There are also potteries in this parish, chiefly employed in making coarse brown ware, at which some hundreds of people are employed. It is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, 6 brethren, and 12 capital burgesses, assisted by a chamberlain, town-clerk, &c. The market-day is Saturday. The fairs are on the 27th of January, 28th of February, first Saturday in April, 4th of May, 4th of July, 25th of September. The races are held annually in autumn. There are here places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, Independents, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, Sandimanians, Unitarians, &c. &c. There is a free grammar school, under the management of the corporation, endowed with £109 10s. 0d. per annum. Another, intended as assistant or auxiliary to this, is endowed with £78 per annum. There are also a national and a Lancastrian school, supported by subscription, where some hundreds of children are taught the common branches of education. Chesterfield gives the title of earl to the family of Stanhope. It is 25 m. N.E. from Derby. Population, in 1801, 4,267; in 1831, 5,775. Assessed property, £17,488.

CHESTERFORD (GREAT), anciently CAMBORICUM, a parish in the hundred of Uttersford, county of Essex. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry of Colchester and diocese of London, rated in the king's books at £10, endowed with £200 private benefaction, and £200 royal bounty. The church—which contained a chantry, valued at the dissolution at £9 9s. 7d.—is dedicated to All Saints. The patrons are alternately the king and the marquess of Bristol. Chesterford, once a considerable market-town, now a small village, is situated on the eastern bank of the river Granta. It has afforded a rich harvest to the antiquaries of coins, earthen-pots, stone-coffins, skeletons, urns of red clay, and scrolls of rotten parchments. Its market has long been discontinued, but it has still a fair for horses, held on the 5th of July. It has an endowed free school, and a number of benefactions for the poor. The tenure in this parish is Borough English. It is 4 m. N.N.W. from Saffron Walden. Population, in 1801, 600; in 1831, 873. Assessed property, £2,362.

CHESTERFORD (LITTLE), a parish in the hundred of Uttersford, county of Essex. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Colchester and diocese of London, rated in the king's books at £11. The church is dedicated to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, the marquess of Bristol. It is 3 m. N.W. by N. from Saffron-Walden. Population, in 1801, 120; in 1831, 211. Assessed property, £1,777.

CHESTERHOPE, a hamlet in the parish of Corenside, north-east division of Tyndale ward, county of Northumberland. It is 5 m. E.N.E. from Bellingham.

CHESTER-LE-STREET, a parish in the middle division of Chester ward, county-palatine of Durham. For the livings in this parish see the chapelries of Chester-le-Street and Lamesley. Population, in 1801, 11,665; in 1831, 15,378.

CHESTER-LE-STREET, a chapelry in the above parish. The living is a curacy, not in charge, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Durham. The church, which has a nave and side aisles, with an octagonal tower, terminated by an elegant spire 160 feet high, is dedicated to St Mary and St Cuthbert. The patrons, in 1829, were Lord Durham and W. Jolliffe, Esq., alternately. Chester-le-Street stands in a fertile valley a little to the west of the river Wear, occupying, according to Camden, the site of the Condercum of the Romans. It consists of one street, on the road between Durham and Newcastle, about a mile in length. It is the seat of the petty-sessions for the ward, which are held once a fortnight. "Bishop Eardulfus being forced to fly with the body of St Cuthbert from Lindisfarne, fixed his episcopal see here, A.D. 883, which, being by the bounty of good people, endowed with great revenues and privileges, had probably a chapter of monks, or rather of secular canons, attending it here also, translated with the bishopric to Durham, A.D. 995. But in memory of St Cuthbert's body having been so long in this church, Anthony Beck, bishop of Durham, [and patriarch of Jerusalem], A.D. 1286, made it collegiate, consisting of a dean, seven prebendaries, five chaplains, three deacons and other ministers. The prebends of the seven portionists, with the vicarage of this church, were taxed in the Lincoln valuation, 26th Edward I., at £146 13s. 4d.; but the 20th Henry VIII. the deanery and seven prebends were valued at no more than £77 12s. 8d. in the whole, viz., the deanery, £41; prebend of Lamley, £5 16s. 8d.; Welton, £5 16s. 8d.; Chester, £6; Lamesley, £10; Tanfield, £3 6s. 8d.; Byrtley, £3 6s. 8d., and Urpeth, £2 6s. 8d." Besides the established churches, there are here places of worship for almost all denominations of Christians. There is a free grammar school, founded in 1497 by Bishop Storey, and endowed by him with the prebend of Highly. The number of scholars is inconsiderable. Another free school was founded in 1702 by Oliver Whithy, and endowed by him with lands which now yield upwards of £1,200 per annum, for the purpose of affording to 12 boys an education fitting them for a naval life: the number of scholars on the foundation is 25. Several other schools, a dispensary, and an infirmary, are supported by subscription.

General Description.—Chichester is situated in a plain near the Lavant, a small river, by which it is nearly encircled, and which falls into an arm of the sea at Dell-key, about 2 miles below the town. Here there is a small harbour through which the trade of the city is carried on—the most part of it with the London market. This town was originally strongly walled, having four gates fronting the cardinal points of the compass, and from these gates four principal streets, named after their gates, and respectively meeting in its centre nearly at right angles, where there still stands an octagonal cross—erected in 1478 by Robert Storey, on his being translated from the see of Carlisle to that of Chichester—in the decorated style of English architecture, which, in simplicity of design, and elegance of execution, is supposed to surpass anything of the kind that is to be met with in the kingdom. The gates have long ago been removed, and the walls taken down, except on the north and east sides, where they were, upwards of a century ago, formed into terraces, covered with gravel which, now shaded with rows of lofty elm trees, afford a delightful promenade for the inhabitants, and are highly ornamental to the city. The houses are generally substantially built, the streets well-paved and brilliantly lighted with gas. The palace of the bishop is chiefly remarkable for its extensive and admirably planned gardens. The cathedral, built in the form of a cross, with a fine tower rising from the centre, surmounted by an octagonal spire, 300 feet high, is a most beautiful building. It is 410 feet in length, by 227 feet in breadth, along the transepts. The choir is fitted up in the most superb style. The stalls are of oak, beautifully carved, and richly gilt, with the names of the dignitaries and prebendaries painted over them.

Trade, &c.—The trade of this town consists chiefly of malt, flour, corn, timber, and coal. The manufacture of needles, for which Chichester was so long celebrated, is now entirely abandoned. Salt made at Itchenor, about 3 miles distant, and prawns and lobsters caught at Salsea, about 7 miles distant, form considerable items in its commerce with London, which is greatly facilitated by means of the Portsmouth and Arundel canal which passes on the south side of the town. Wednesday and Saturday are the market-days, and the markets are most abundantly supplied. Every second Wednesday is a market for sheep, black cattle, and hogs. Its fairs are:—April 3d, Whit-Tuesday, St James'-day, Michaelmas-day, and October the 20th, called the sloe-fair.

Municipal Government.—The first charter of incorporation seems to have been bestowed on Chichester by King Stephen, but that by which it is presently governed was granted by James II. The government is vested in a mayor, a recorder, a bailiff, and 38 common-councilmen, from among whom the mayor is chosen. Chichester, since the 23d of Edward I. has sent 2 members to parliament. The elective franchise, while vested in resident householders, paying scot and lot, was enjoyed by nearly 886 voters, but the number of electors under the new franchise is only 680. The returning officer is the mayor.

History.—Chichester is a place of great antiquity. It was unquestionably a Roman station. According to Camden it was “built by Cissa the Saxon, the second king of this province taking also its name from him, for Cissaceaster is nothing else but ‘the city of Cissa,’ whose father Ælla was the first Saxon that here erected a kingdom; yet, before the Norman conquest, it was of little reputation, noted only for St Peter’s monastery, and a little nunnery. After the conquest it was ordained that the bishop’s sees should be translated out of little towns to places of greater note and resort; this city being honoured with the bishop’s residence, which was before at Silsey, began to flourish. Not many years after, Bishop Ralph built here a cathedral church, which, before it was finally finished, was burnt down. Notwithstanding, by his endeavours, and King Henry I. his liberality, it was raised up again.” The bishopric was valued, 26th Hen. VIII., at £698 7s. 5d. in the whole. The celebrated Bishop Bradwardine, and the poets Collins and Hayley, were natives of this city, which gives the title of earl to a branch of the Pelham family. It is 62 m. S.S.W. from London.

CHILTERN-HILLS, a ridge of chalk-hills extending from Henley-upon-Thames in Oxfordshire, through Buckinghamshire to Tring in Hertfordshire. They are in some places covered with wood, and some of the more considerable eminences command rich prospects. This district belongs to the crown, and from time immemorial has given title to the nominal office of stewards of the Chiltern hundreds. Of this office, as well as the manor of East hundred in Berks, it is remarkable that, although frequently conferred upon members of parliament, it is not productive either of honour or emolument, being granted at the request of any member of that house merely to enable him to vacate his seat by the acceptance of a nominal office under the crown; and on this account, it has frequently been granted to three or four members in one week.

CHILTERN-ALL-SAINTS, a parish in the hundred of Heytesbury, county of Wilts. CHIPPENHAM, the name of a hundred in the north and northwest of the county of Wilts. It comprises, besides the borough of Chippenham, 24 parishes, and contained, in 1831, 20,460 souls.

CHIPPENHAM, a parish, borough, and market-town, in the hundred of Chippenham, county of Wilts. The living is a discharged vicarage with the curacy of Tythot-on-Lucas, in the archdeaconry of Wilts and diocese of Salisbury, rated at £13 19s. 4d. The church, a very ancient structure, is dedicated to St Andrew. Patrons, the dean and canons of Christ's church, Oxford. The town is pleasantly situated on the south bank of the Avon, by which it is nearly surrounded, and over which is a fine stone bridge of 22 arches. There are a few grist mills, and the tanning of leather is carried on upon a large scale, but the business of the town seems to arise principally from its being a great thoroughfare on the Bath and Bristol roads, having, too, the advantage of the Wilts and Berks canal which passes close by the town. The market-day is Saturday; and the fairs are May 17th, June 22d, October 29th, and December 11th, for hogs, sheep, horned cattle, and horses. Chippenham is a borough by proscription, but was incorporated by charter in the reign of Mary. It is governed by a bailiff and twelve burgesses, and returns two members to parliament. The returning officer is the bailiff, and the number of electors is about 319. The several parishes of Chippenham, Hardenhuish, and Langley-Burrell, and the extra-parochial space called Pewisham, are included within the borough by the new boundaries act. The petty sessions for Calne and Chippenham division are held here.—Chippenham is a place of great antiquity, and under the West Saxon kings was one of the first cities in the island. "In those times," says Camden, "it was the country house of the Saxon kings, which king Alfred, by his will, bequeathed to his younger daughter. Now there is nothing worth seeing but the church." There are in the parish two chalybeate springs, formerly in great repute, but now altogether neglected, except by some of the poorer classes in the neighbourhood, who still continue to use one of them occasionally, and sometimes derive great benefit, the waters having lost none of their medicinal qualities, though it be no longer fashionable to frequent them. Population, in 1801, 3336; in 1831, 433. Assessed property, £20,143.

CHIPPING, a parish in the lower division of the hundred of Blackburn, county-palatine of Lancaster. CHIRK, a parish in the above hundred. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of St Asaph, rated at £6 11s. 5½d. Church dedicated to St Mary. Patron, the bishop of St Asaph. The parish is divided into UPPER and NETHER CHIRK, or CHIRK ABOVE and CHIRK BELOW. The great Holyhead road, and the Ellesmere canal, pass through the parish. The latter is carried over the river and vale of Ceinog, by a most magni-scent aqueduct of nine lofty arches, and the former passes directly through the village of Chirk, which is rapidly rising into a place of importance. Here the petty sessions are held for the division of Nanheudwy. It has three annual fairs; the second Thursday in February, the second Tuesday in June, and the 12th of August, for sheep, horned cattle, and horses. For the beauty and magnificent extent of its views, the vicinity of this village is nearly unrivalled. Within half a mile of the village stands the castle of Chirk, built in the early part of the 11th century, and still in perfect preservation. It has been the seat of the Myddletons upwards of two centuries. Chirk is 178 m. W.N.W. from London. Population, in 1801, 1099; in 1831, 1598. Assessed property, £7,346.

CHIRTON, a township in the parish of Tynemouth, Northumberland. It is 1 m. W.S.W. from North Shields. Population, in 1801, 1152; in 1831, 4973. The rapid increase of population in this township is to be ascribed wholly to the extension of the collieries, from the introduction of railroads.

CHISBURY-CASTLE. See BEDWIN (Great).

CHISBURY, a hamlet in the parish of Tisbury, Wilts, 3 m. from Hendon.

CHISENBURY, a tything in the parish of Nether-Avon, Wilts, 8 m. W.N.W. from Ludgershall.

Church, dedicated to St Nicholas. Patrons, the dean and chapter of St Paul's. Chiswick is delightfully situated on the north bank of the Thames, near the Henslow road, and is adorned with a great number of elegant mansions. Of these the most striking is DEVONSHIRE HOUSE, or CHISWICK HOUSE, belonging to the duke of Devonshire. It was designed by the celebrated Kent, the father of modern gardening, with the exception of two wings which have been added by Wyatt. The ascent to the house is by a noble flight of steps. The portico is supported by six finely fluted Corinthian columns, with an elegant pediment, and the cornice, frieze, and architrave, are rich in the extreme. The pleasure-grounds around it, extending to upwards of 30 acres, are laid out with the greatest taste, and decorated with statues. In this elegant mansion the Right Hon. Charles James Fox breathed his last, in the year 1806; as did the Right Hon. George Canning in 1827.—The extensive gardens belonging to the Horticultural society of London, are in this parish. In the churchyard there are some tombs of great antiquity, and a monument to the memory of Hogarth, the painter, who was buried here. It is 7 m. W.S.W. from St Paul's cathedral. Population, in 1801, 3235; in 1831, 4994. Assessed property, £16,419.

CHOLDERTON. See AMPORT.

CHOLLERTON, a parish in the north-east division of Tindale-ward, county of Northumberland, and diocese of Durham, rated at £6 14s. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Church dedicated to St Giles. Patrons, in 1829, Colonel Beaumont and his lady. This parish comprises the townships of Barrasford, Broomehope and Buteland, Chollerton, Colwel and Swinburn, Gunnerton and Chipchase. Within the limits of this parish stand the anciently strong castles of Swinburn and Chipchase, now modernized into quiet habitations. Chollerton is 6 m. N. from Hexham. Population, in 1801, 1075; in 1831, 1252. Assessed property, £13,873.

CHOLMONDELEY, a township in the parish of Malpas, county-palatine of Chester. Cholmondeley castle was garrisoned in 1643 for the ill-fated Charles I., and in the course of a few months was repeatedly lost and won by the contending parties. It settled, of course, in the hands of the parliamentarians. It is $7\frac{1}{2}$ m. from Nantwich. Population, in 1801, 292; in 1831, 272. Assessed property, £2,507.

CHOLMONDESTONE, a township in the parish of Acton, county-palatine of Chester. Population, in 1801, 168; in 1831, 180. Assessed property, £1,842.

CHOLSEY, a parish in the hundred of Reading, locally situate in the hundred of Moreton, county of Berks. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Salisbury, rated at £18 9s. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Church dedicated to St Mary. Patron, the king. Here was one of the three old monasteries referred to in King Henry I.'s foundation charter of the abbey of Reading, as having been long before destroyed. Cholsey is $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. from Wallingford, with which borough a portion of this parish is now included by the boundaries act. Population, in 1801, 814; in 1831, 983. Assessed property, £6,344.

CHOLSTREY, a hamlet in the parish of Leominster, Herefordshire.

CHORLEY, a parish and market-town in the hundred of Leyland, county-palatine of Chester. The living, originally a curacy to the rectory of Croston, of the certified value of £33 6s. 0d., was, in 1793, upon Chorley being constituted a parish, erected into a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Chester. The chapel is dedicated to St Lawrence. Patroness, in 1829, Mrs Masters. To meet the increasing population, a new church has been recently built, under the authority of the parliamentary commissioners. The living of the new church, which is dedicated to St George, is a perpetual curacy. Patron, the rector of Chorley. Various denominations of dissenters have chapels here. Chorley, situated on the great western road to London, derives its name from the Chor, a small rivulet which falls into the Yarrow, at a short distance from the town. It is a handsome and rapidly increasing town. The Yarrow, a large and beautiful stream, encompasses the southern part of the township, and gives motion in its progress to immense masses of powerful machinery for spinning and weaving cottons. The printing and bleaching establishments on its banks are almost innumerable. The town has only one magistrate, who, assisted by a neighbouring justice of the peace, holds the petty sessions alternately here and at Rivington once a month. The market is held on Tuesday. There are here four annual fairs, which are held on the 26th of March, 5th of May, 20th of August, and the 5th of September. It is 32 m. S.E. from Lancaster. Population, in 1801, 4516; in 1831, 9282. CHRIST-CHURCH, the name of a hundred in New Forest, west division of the county of Southampton, comprising 4 parishes and the borough of the same name, and containing, in 1831, a population of 5344 souls.

CHRIST-CHURCH, a parish, borough, and market-town, in the above hundred. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Winchester, rated at £16, returned at £113. The church, anciently the collegiate church of the priory, is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Winchester. A chapel to this church has recently been erected at Bransgore. Christ-church stands on the border of the New Forest, between the rivers Avon and Stour, whence its ancient name Twinambourne. Uniting their streams a little below the town, these two rivers fall into Christ-church bay by an estuary, which forms the harbour of Christ-church. Owing to a sand bank which runs from Hengistburyhead on the Hampshire side, to St Christopher's cliff, Isle of Wight, and which is perpetually shifting its position with the winds and the tides, this harbour cannot be entered but at high water, and even then, only by vessels of small burden. From its peculiar situation, it enjoys the advantage of double tides. The knitting of stockings is carried on to a great extent here. The market-day is Monday; and there are two annual fairs, Trinity Thursday and October the 17th. Christ-church is governed by a mayor, recorder, bailiffs, and common-councilmen, amounting in all to 24. The town, however, is wholly within the jurisdiction of the magistrates of the county. The borough formerly sent two, but now returns only one member to parliament. The number of new electors is about 400. The mayor is the returning officer. The church of Christ, or the Holy Trinity, here, had a dean and 24 secular canons in the time of Edward the confessor. The yearly revenues of this priory were valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £312 7s. 3d., Dugd.

£544 6s. 0d., Speed. It is 21½ m. W.S.W. from Southampton. Population, in 1801, 3773; in 1831, 5344. Assessed property, £2876.

CHRIST-CHURCH, a parish, partly in the east half-hundred of Brixton, and partly in the borough of Southwark, county of Surrey. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Surrey and diocese of Winchester. Christ-Church—formerly called the liberty of Paris Garden—is situated to the south of Blackfriar's bridge, and was originally part of the parish of St Saviour. It was disjoined by act of parliament in 1706. Population, in 1801, 9933; in 1831, 13,705. Assessed property, £56,960.

Patrons, the feoffees of the parish. The Independents have a chapel here. The town, which consists of one long street, is pleasantly situated on the east bank of a small stream called Teign. The woollen trade was formerly the staple of this place. The cider made here has a high character. The market-day is Saturday, and it has three annual fairs,—Easter Tuesday, third Tuesday in June, and the second of October. Chudleigh confers the title of baron on the Clifford family, whose seat at Ugbrook, about a mile to the south or south-west, is accounted one of the most enchanting situations in the county. The bishops of Exeter had, at one time, a most sumptuous residence here, but there are now scarcely any remains of this building. It is 9½ m. S.S.W. from Exeter. Population, in 1801, 1786; in 1831, 2278. Assessed property, £8,988.

CHUMLEIGH, a parish and market-town in the hundred of Witheridge, county of Devon. Living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Barnstable and diocese of Exeter, rated at £20 18s. 1½d. The church, which was formerly collegiate, is dedicated to St Mary Magdalene. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. G. Hole. The Independents and the Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here. The market-day is Friday, and there is an annual fair on the first of August. Chumleigh is often spelled Chimley, but this is merely the vulgar Devonshire pronunciation. It is 21 m. N.W. from Exeter. Population, in 1801, 1383; in 1831, 1573. Assessed property, £6,247.

CIRCOURT, a joint tything with Goosey, in the parish of Stanford, Berkshire. Pop., in 1801, 139; in 1831, 203.

CIRENCESTER, a borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of Crowthorne and Minety, county of Gloucester. The living is a discharged perpetual curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester. The church, a magnificent Gothic structure, with an embattled tower 132 feet high, having a peal of twelve bells, is dedicated to St John the Evangelist. Patron, the bishop of Gloucester. Besides the church of St John, this town had formerly other two; the one dedicated to St Cecilia, the other to St Lawrence, both of which have been desecrated. It has also several chapels-of-ease, besides places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, Wesleyan Methodists, Unitarians, &c. &c. There is here a free grammar school with a considerable endowment, besides the blue and yellow-coat schools, both of them endowed, and there are three hospitals and an alms-house for the aged and the infirm, all of them endowed to considerable amount. "There was," says Leland, "afore the conquest, a fair and rich college of probendaries in this town, but of what Saxon's foundation, no man can tell." "King Henry I. built here, A. D. 1117, to the honour of the blessed Virgin Mary, a stately abbey for Black canons, which he endowed with the lands of the secular priests and other revenues, and privileges which were so much increased by some of the succeeding kings, that 26th Hen. VIII. it was valued at £1051 7s. 1d. ob. per annum, Dugd., Speed, but the site was granted 1^o Edward VI. to Sir Thomas Seymour, and 6^o Elizabeth, to Richard Masters."—Tanner's Not. Mon. All that remains of this rich abbey—whose mitred abbot was a lord of parliament—is a barn and two gateways. The town is pleasantly situated on the west bank of the Churn, a few miles from its confluence with the Thames. It was a city of the Britons, prior to the invasion of the Romans. Camden terms it "a famous city of great antiquity, called by Ptolemy Corinium, by Antonine Durocornovium." The rebellion against Henry IV., in favour of Richard II., terminated here by the death of the principal leaders, the earls of Kent and Salisbury, who were shut up in their quarters in this town, and slain by the townsmen, in consequence of which, Henry sent the inhabitants a charter of incorporation, with an order for an annual allowance of venison from the forest of Bradon, and of wine from the royal cellars, to enrich and to enliven their election dinners. (Rymer, VIII. 250.) By this charter the town was erected into a hundred of itself, but it being cancelled by the court of chancery in the reign of Elizabeth, the town has merged into the adjoining hundred. It was here, as is generally stated, that matters came to the last extremity between Charles I. and his people, by the inhabitants resisting and attacking Lord Chandos, when attempting to carry into effect a commission of array. It made, however, ample amends for this patriotic ebullition, by declaring for that priest-ridden bigot, James II., in 1688, and attacking Colonel Lovelace on his way to join the prince of Orange.—Formerly the manufacture of woollen cloth was carried on here to a great extent, and for wool it was the first market in the kingdom, but the trade in both is now trifling. The Thames and Severn canal passes in the neighbourhood, and it has the advantage of a branch brought close to the town. It has two market-days; Monday for provisions and corn, Friday alternately for provisions. The fairs are Easter Tuesday, July 18th, Monday before, and Monday after old Michaelmas, and Nov. 8th. The jurisdiction of the county magistrates extends over the borough, in which are held the petty sessions for the seven hundreds of Cirencester. A court of requests is also held here for the same division. It is governed by two high constables, assisted by 14 of the principal inhabitants, called wardmen, chosen annually at the court leet of the manor. Representatives were sent from this borough to the great council of the nation so early as the reign of Edward III., but it is only since the reign of Elizabeth that it acquired the privilege of sending regularly two burgesses to parliament. The elective franchise formerly extended to all resident housekeepers not receiving alms, being about 700 in number. It is now limited to about 362. The constables of the manor are the returning officers. Cirencester is one of the polling places for the eastern division of the county of Gloucester. It is 17 m. S.E. from Gloucester. Pop., in 1801, 4130; in 1831, 5420. A. P., £7,421.

CITADELLA, a hamlet in the parish of Easby, north riding of Yorkshire, 1 m. N.N.W. from Catterick.

chapelry of Oakly, and it is singular that, although it has long been a distinct parish, the inhabitants still bury their dead there." Lyson's Mag. Brit., Vol. I., 69. It is 2½ m. N.N.W. from Bedford. Pop., in 1801, 157; in 1831, 298. A. P., £2,009.

CLAPHAM, a parish and village in the hundred of Brixton, county of Surrey. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester. Church, built in 1776, under the authority of an act of parliament, at an expense of £11,000, dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Patron, in 1829, Bowyer Atkins, Esq. There are two chapels belonging to the establishment here. The Independents have also two places of worship here, and the Baptists one. There is a parochial school attended by about 300 scholars. This is one of the richest and most respectable of the numerous villages that surround the metropolis. It is built around a common, extending to about 200 acres, originally a mere morass, now skillfully drained, intersected with carriage-drives, and tastefully adorned with trees and shrubs. The houses are generally of a corresponding character, being, for the most part, occupied by the merchant-princes of the city. The value of land here is very great. It is within the limits of the new police, established by Mr Peel's bill. The road to London is brilliantly lighted with gas. The county-magistrates hold a petty-session here once a-week, and it is within the jurisdiction of the court of requests for the borough of Southwark. It is 4½ m. CLARE, a parish and market-town in the hundred of Risbridge, county of Suffolk. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, rated at £4 18s. 9d. Church, ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Patron, the king as duke of Lancaster. This is a place of great antiquity, having been during the heptarchy a frontier town of the kingdom of East Anglia. After the conquest it gave the title of earl to the family of De Clare, and that of duke to Lionel, third son of Edward III., who was created the first duke of Clarence. It is situated on the river Stour, near the border of Essex. It is the seat of the petty-sessions for the division, and has a market on Monday, and two annual fairs, Easter-Tuesday, and 26th of July. There are places of worship here for the Baptists and Independents. There are a number of benefactions for the relief of the poor, among which is the privilege of depasturing, on a piece of land appropriated for that purpose, by Queen Mary, of bloody rather than charitable memory, 40 milch cows. Earl Alfric founded the church of St John the Baptist in the castle here, which church Gilbert de Clare gave, A.D.

1090, to the monastery at Bec in Normandy, and thereby it became a cell of Benedictine monks to that abbey until the year 1124, when his son Richard removed them to Stoke. Friars Heremites of the order of St Austine are said to have been seated here in A.D. 1248. It is 18 m. S.S.W. from Bury-St-Edmunds. Pop., in 1801, 1170; in 1831, 1619. A. P., £3,417.

CLARENDON-PARK, an extra-parochial liberty in the hundred of Alderbury, county of Wilts. This was anciently a royal chase; but is particularly known in history as the place where, in 1164, were enacted, 'the Constitutions of Clarendon,' forming a remarkable epocha in the history of the British constitution. The park, in the reign of Charles II., was bestowed upon Monk, previously created duke of Albemarle. In the same reign, it gave the title of earl to Chancellor Hyde, author of a very laboured but very partial history of the troubles in the reign of Charles I., which he calls 'the Great Rebellion.' Pop., in 1801, 129; in 1831, 177. A. P., £3,522.

St John's parish is distinct from the parish of St James, although, as regards their poor, they are under one management. 3d, St Mark's, a perpetual curacy. The church was built only a few years ago, at an expense of upwards of £14,000, and is ded. to the saint whose name it bears. Patron, the bishop of London. There is also a chapel-of-ease to St James's at Pentonville. There are here places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, Independents, and Methodists. It has also a Scottish church, and a Welsh chapel.—There are some small endowments for the education of the young, a female penitentiary capable of admitting 100 penitents, and a medical dispensary upon a pretty respectable foundation. The name of this parish is derived from 'The Clerk's Well,' said to be a well beside which the parish-clerks of the city of London were accustomed to assemble at certain periods for the representing of sacred dramas. Besides this well there were several others, some of them celebrated for medicinal virtues, some of them for the comfortable accommodations afforded by the houses that had been erected over them or beside them. Of these no inconsiderable number are still among the places of amusement whose names are familiar to the ears of the present generation: such are Islington Spa, the White Conduit House, Bagnigge Wells, New Tunbridge Wells, and Saddler's Wells. A little knowledge of the writings of Fielding and Foote will introduce any one to the Mulberry and Vineyard gardens, now we believe not to be seen; and the Pear garden at Hockley-in-the-hole.

though long ago shut up, will stand for ever open in the delightful pages of the Spectator. Of the Clerk's Well some slight vestiges are said to be still preserved. The principal business followed here is the making of clocks and watches, with mechanical tools and engines. The very foolish tax imposed on clocks and watches in the year 1791, is said to have thrown out of bread in this parish alone upwards of 7000 persons. There is, in Clerkenwell Green, a splendid sessions house for the county, built at an expense of £13,000, and a prison, comprising a governor's house, a chapel, two infirmaries, 20 wards, 10 day-rooms, and 12 airing yards. In Cold Bath Fields—formerly a scene of amusement—there is a house of correction erected at the cost of £70,000. The new river brought from Amwell near Ware in Hertfordshire, after a course of 38 miles, falls into the great cistern, known by the name of 'the New River Head,' in this parish. This splendid and useful achievement was accomplished by Hugh Myddleton, citizen and goldsmith of London, at the expenditure of his whole fortune, and without further assistance than the sum of £6,347 4s. 11½d. from James II. It was completed on the 29th of September 1613. The property was divided into 72 shares, one moiety of which was vested in Mr Myddleton, and 28 other persons incorporated by charter of James I, 1619. The other moiety was vested in the crown. Hugh Myddleton was created a baronet by James in 1622, probably to console him in some degree for his losses; and Charles I., after his accession to the throne, restored to him that moiety of the river concern which had been vested in the crown. But let no man ever despair of money or of labour expended in a good cause: a single share in this concern has been sold for £14,000! Of the religious houses which formerly existed in this parish, we find the following account in Tanner:—"Sir Jordan Bristet gave fourteen acres of land hereabout to one Robert, a priest, his chaplain, in order for him to build a religious house, either for nuns or grey monks, upon which hero was a priory founded for nuns, of the order of St Benedict, about the year 1100, to the honour of God and the assumption of our Lady. This nunnery was valued 26th Henry VIII., at £262 19s. Dugd. £282 16s. 5d. Speed., and was granted by act of parliament, 31st Henry VIII., to Thomas, duke of Norfolk, who, 35th Henry VIII., gave the same back to the king, and he anno regni 37, granted the same to Walter Henley and John Williams, Knts. —In the north suburbs of the city of London, near West Smithfield, the before-mentioned Jordan Bristet, by some called a knight, by others a baron, erected A.D. 1100, or some few years after, an house or hospital for a new religious order, then famous in Christendom, viz. the knights hospitallers of St John of Jerusalem, who, by the liberality of the kings and nobility of England, and the accession which was made to them upon the suppression of the templars, temp. Edw. II. were endowed at the suppression, with lands to the yearly value of 3040 marks according to Mr Leland; £2,385 12s 8d. Dugd. and Speed. £3,385 19s. 8d. Stow. The lord-prior here had precedence of all the lay-barons in parliament, and chief power over all the preceptories and lesser houses of this order throughout England. The site of this priory was granted, 38th Henry VIII., to John Viscount Lisle, and great part of the church, with the fine bell tower, was blown up 3rd Edward VI. But King Philip and Queen Mary, 4 et 5 regni, re-established a lord-prior; and some brethren of the order repaired the house, and restored many of the old estates in divers counties to the same, who were again suppressed in the first year of Queen Elizabeth." Tanner's Not. Mon. It was over the gate of St John's, in this parish, where that faithful servant and useful patron of literature, Edmund Cave, had his printing-office, and whence he issued with so much eclat, for many a year, 'The Gentleman's Magazine,' still bearing the gateway on its title-page. Clerkenwell is 1 m. N.N.W. from St Paul's cathedral. Pop., in 1801, 23,396; in 1831, 47,634. A. P., £149,361.

CLEATHER (Str), a parish in the hundred of Lesnewth, county of Cornwall. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter, rated at £6 11s. 10½d.; returned at £100. Patrons, in 1829, J. Carpenter and T. J. Philips, Esqrs. It is 7 m. E. from Camelford. Pop., in 1801, 134; in 1831, 171. A. P., £1,998.

CLETTERWOOD, a township in the parish of Buttington, South Wales. Pop., in 1801, 201; in 1831, 260. A. P., including that of the neighbouring township of Hope, £2,471.

CLEVEDON, a parish in the hundred of Portbury, county of Somerset. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Bath and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £15 14s. 4d. The church, which occupies a high and particularly prominent situation on the shore of the Bristol channel, is ded. to St Andrew. Patron, the bishop of Bristol. The Yeo, a small stream which falls into the Bristol channel, a little to the south of the church, flows through the village. As a bathing place, Clevedon is greatly admired for the beauty of its scenery and the mildness of its climate, which is such, that myrtles and plants of a like delicate tenderness, flourish here in the gardens at all seasons. It is 12½ m. S.W. from Bristol. Pop., in 1801, 334; in 1831, 1147. A. P., £6,145.

CLEVEDON-MILTON, or MILTON-CLEVEDON, a parish in the hundred of Bruton, county of Somerset. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £6 13s. 4d. Church ded. to St James. Patron, the earl of Ilchester. It is 2½ m. N.N.W. from Bruton. Pop., in 1801, 206; in 1831, 242. A. P., £1,702.

CLEVELAND-PORT, a hamlet in the parish of Ormesby, N. R. of Yorkshire. This district, called Cleveland, or Cliffland, is partly encompassed by the Tees and the German ocean. It was formerly called Cargo Fleet, and through it the greater part of the produce of the surrounding district is shipped for the neighbouring ports. Some derive its name from the high cliffs which it exhibits, others from its strong stiff clay soil, whence the doggerel generally applied to the place,

'Cleveland in the clay,
Bring in two soles but carry one away.'

CLEVELEY, a hamlet in the parish of Enstone-Church, co. of Oxford. It is $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. from Neat-Enstone. Pop., in 1831, 214.

CLEVELEY, a township, part of it in the parish of Cockerham, and part of it in the parish of Garstang, co.-palatine of Lancaster. It is $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. from Garstang. Pop., in 1801, 145; in 1831, 140. A. P., £691.

CLEVERTON, a township in the parish of Lea, county of Wilts.

CLEWER, a parish in the hundred of Ripplesmere, co. of Berks. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £14 ls. 0 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Church ded. to St Andrew. Patrons, the provost and fellows of Eton college. The village of Clewer lies about a mile to the west of Windsor, but the parish extends into that town, of which it comprises a considerable portion. The 29th of May is held here as a fair. Pop., in 1801, 1695; in 1831, 3011. A. P. £4,872.

CLEY. See COCKLEY-CLEY.

CLEY, NEXT THE SEA, a parish, market-town, and seaport, in the hundred of Holt, county of Norfolk. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Norwich, rated at £22 13s. 4d. Church ded. to St John. Patron, in 1829, John W. Tomlinson, Esq. The town stands in the N.E. corner of the county, at the confluence of a small stream with the sea. The jurisdiction of the port extends about 30 miles along the coast, yet its trade is but trifling, ships of burden being by numerous shoals prevented from approaching the town. Salt is manufactured here to a considerable extent, and seems to be the principal article of exportation. The market-day is Saturday, and the last Friday in July is annually held as a horse-market. It was into this small port that the vessel with Prince James of Scotland, afterwards James IV., on board, was forced by stress of weather on his passage to France, and basely detained a prisoner for seventeen years. "The seamen of the place," says Camden, "made a present of him to King Henry IV." It is 26 m. N.N.W. from Norwich. Pop., in 1801, 547; in 1831, 827. A. P. £1,846.

CLEYGATE, a manor in the parish of Thames-Ditton, co. of Surrey. It is $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.S.E. from Eshar. Pop., in 1821, 559; in 1831, 708.

CLIBURN, a parish in West ward, co. of Westmoreland. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle, rated at £9 ls. 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Church dedicated to St Cuthbert. Patron, the bishop of Carlisle. It is 7 m. N.W. by W. from Appleby. Pop., in 1801, 157; in 1831, 220. A. P., £2,117.

CLIDDESSEN, a parish in the upper half-hundred of Basingstoke, co. of Southampton. Living, a rectory consolidated with the rectory of Farleigh Wallop, rated at £10 16s. 3d. Patronage, with the rectory of Farleigh Wallop. It is $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. from Basingstoke.

CLIFFE, a joint township with Lund, in the parish of Hemmingborough, E. R. of Yorkshire, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. E. from Selby. Pop., in 1801, 424; in 1831, 490. A. P., £3,760.

CLIFFE, a parish in the hundred of Shamwell, lathe of Aylesford, co. of Kent. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Rochester, rated at £50. The church, reckoned the finest in the county, and formerly collegiate, is ded. to St Helen. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. The village, designated from the cliff on which it is situated, was anciently much more extensive than it is at present, great part of it having been destroyed by fire in the year 1520, and never rebuilt. It is supposed to have been at one time a residence of the bishops of Canterbury, and the scene of several councils and provincial synods. It now, however, consists of only two streets of very moderate extent. According to an old custom, the rector distributes at his parsonage-house, on St James' day, annually, a mutton pye and a loaf to as many as may choose to demand it. It is 5 m. N.W. from Rochester. Pop., in 1801, 525; in 1831, 832. A. P., £5,894.

CLIFFE (WEST), a parish in the hundred of Bewsborough, co. of Kent. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury. Church, ded. to St Peter. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. It is $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. from Dover. Pop., in 1801, 61; in 1831, 82. A. P., £1,024.

CLIFFE, a township in the parish of Mansfield, N. R. of Yorkshire, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. from Darlington. Pop., in 1801, 46; in 1831, 68. A. P., £460.

CLIFFE, or ST THOMAS-AT-CLIFFE, a parish in the hundred of Bingham, co. of Sussex. Living, a discharged rectory in the dio. of Canterbury, a peculiar, rated at £5 12s. 6d.; returned at £100. Church, ded. to St Thos. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. It is $\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. from Lewes. Pop., in 1801, 1113; in 1831, 1408. A. P., £2,241.

CLIFFE-REGIS, or KING'S CLIFFE, a parish in the hundred of Willybrook, co. of Northampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, rated at £13 16s. 3d. Church, ded. to All Saints. Patron, the earl of Westmoreland. This was at one time a market-town. An annual fair is still held here on the 29th October. There is here an endowment of about £260 per annum, for the support of a school and alms-houses. The Rev. William Law, well known as a theological writer, was a native of this parish, where he died in 1761. It is $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. from Oundle. Pop., in 1801, 876; in 1831, 1173. A. P., £3,486.

CLIFFE (NORTH), a township in the parish of Sancton, E. R. of Yorkshire, 3 m. S. from Market-Weighton. Pop., in 1801, 89; in 1831, 85. A. P., £728.

CLIFFE (SOUTH), a township in the parish of North-Cave, E. R. of Yorkshire, $3\frac{1}{2}$

m. S. from Market-Weighton. Pop., in 1801, 106; in 1831, 104. A. P., £965.

CLIFFE-PYPARD, or CLEEVE-PYPER, a parish in the hundred of Kingsbridge, co. of Wilts. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £9; returned at £129. Church, ded. to St Peter. Patron, in 1829, Ambrose Goddard, Esq. It is 4½ m. S.E. from Wootton-Bassett. Pop., in 1801, 624; in 1831, 885. A. P., £6,356.

CLIFFORD, a township in the parish of Bramham, W. R. of York, 3½ m. S.S.E. from Wetherby. Pop., in 1801, 660; in 1831, 1166. A. P., £2,616.

CLIFFORD, a parish in the hundred of Huntington, co. of Hereford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, rated at £4 10s.; returned at £128 9s. 6d. Church, ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, T. Trumper, Esq. Some remains of Clifford castle, the baronial residence of the lords de Clifford, are still to be seen here upon an eminence on the banks of the Wye. Here was also a priory of Cluniac monks, subordinate to Lewes, in Sussex. It is 10 m. S.W.S. from Kington. Pop., in 1801, 627; in 1831, 807. A. P., £9,720.

CLIFFORD-CHAMBERS, a parish locally situated in the upper division of the hundred of Kiftsgate, but included in the hundred of Tewksbury, co. of Gloucester. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, rated at £18 15s. 7½d. Church, ded. to St Helen. Patron, in 1829, L. Dighton, Esq. It is 3 m. S.W. from Stratford-upon-Avon. Pop., in 1801, 223; in 1831, 336. A. P., £2,100.

CLIFTON, the name of a hundred in the S.E. corner of Bedfordshire. It comprises 5 parishes, and, in 1831, contained a population of 5558 souls.

CLIFTON, a parish in the hundred of Clifton, county of Bedford. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £20 2s. 11d. Church, ded. to All Saints. Patroness, in 1829, Mrs Olivier. Pop., in 1801, 329; in 1831, 664. A. P., £2,417.

CLIFTON, or ROCK SAVAGE, a township in the parish of Runcorn, co.-palatine of Chester, 2 m. N.N.E. from Frodsham. Pop., in 1801, 28; in 1831, 36. A. P., £1,243.

CLIFTON-WITH-CAMPTON, a township in the parish of Ashbourne, but locally in the wapentake of Warksworth, co. of Derby. It is 4½ m. S.W. from Ashbourne. Pop., in 1801, 627; in 1831, 839. A. P., 4,988.

CLIFTON, a parish in the hundred of Barton-Regis, co. of Gloucester. The living is a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, valued at £6. The church is ded. to St Andrew. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. C. Simeon. Nothing can be conceived more romantic than the site of this fine village, upon a craggy, almost precipitous cliff, rising to the height of 300 feet, and commanding most sublime views of the surrounding country, at the bottom of which flows the Avon, of a depth and a width sufficient to admit vessels of any burden. The portion of the village, situated at the base of the rock, and from the medical spring named HOT WELLS, is remarkable for a mild and balmy atmosphere, peculiarly suited to persons of weak and debilitated constitutions, for whom also the waters seem to be special preparations; but it is too crowded, and wants fore ground to give effect to its natural characteristics. The different acclivities have many of them been laid out and fitted up with great taste under the various names of parades, rows, squares, terraces, and crescents, and the summit is crowned with elegant mansions commanding views of the most enchanting and the most sublime character. The place, however, owes its importance wholly to its hot wells, which have been in general repute, especially in cases of scrophula, cancer, inflammations, spitting of blood, dysentery, diabetes, &c., for upwards of two hundred years, and most of the fine houses are only occupied for a part of the year by wealthy persons, who are, or who imagine they are, labouring under some of these disorders. This celebrated water, which contains sulphuric acid, with other impregnations, is lighter than common water, clear, pure, and soft, free from any fetid smell, and about the mean temperature of 68° of Fahrenheit, issues from a rift at the bottom of the cliff, about 10 feet above low water, and 26 below high water mark. It is pumped into reservoirs for use, and is by pipes conveyed into many of the houses. The spring is secured from coming into contact with the water of the river, which, in spring-tides, rises here to the height of 36 feet. Perhaps it is not unworthy of remark, that, during the great earthquake at Lisbon in 1757, the water of this spring was so much discoloured and muddied as to be unfit for use. The rock is limestone or marble, of various shades of colour, from a light red to brown, and from grey to blue. Assemblies and concerts are kept up here by subscription, with all the other amusements necessary for a gay watering place. Part of the parish is under the jurisdiction of the city of Bristol, and part of it under the county-magistrates for the Bristol division of the county of Gloucester. There is one private episcopal chapel, one in Lady Huntingdon's connexion, and a floating chapel for seamen. A national school, an infant school, and a dispensary, are supported by subscription. It is 1½ m. W. from Bristol. Pop., in 1801, 4457; in 1831, 12,032. A. P., £4,535.

CLIFTON-WITH-SALWICK, a township in the parish of Kirkham, co.-palatine of Lancaster. It is 3½ m. E.S.E. from Kirkham. Pop., in 1801, 552; in 1831, 508. A. P., £5,874.

CLITHEROE, an unincorporated borough and market-town in the parish of Whalley, higher division of the hundred of Blackburn, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Living, a curacy under that of Whalley, in the archd. and dio. of Chester, certified at £22 12s. Church ded. to St Michael. Patron, in 1829, Earl Howe. Clitheroe is situated at the foot of Pendle-hill, on the east bank of the Ribble. The business of the place is, generally speaking, the cotton manufacture, for the spinning, weaving, and printing of which there are extensive establishments both in the town and neighbourhood. The market-day is Tuesday; and there are annual fairs July 21st, September 29th, and December the 7th, for cattle, horses, and cloths. This place belonged originally to the family of Lacy, who erected a castle here sometime in the 12th century. The first charter of the borough, granted during the life-time of Henry de Lacy, who died about the middle of the 12th century, has been confirmed by many successive monarchs. By this charter the government is vested in two bailiffs, chosen annually by the burgesses out of their own body. Clitheroe sent, since the time of Elizabeth, two members to parliament, but has been deprived of one member by 2^o Will. IV. c. 45. and schedule B. The elective franchise, formerly confined to about 36 voters, is now enjoyed by upwards of 350; and the chapelries of Dowham and Clitheroe, and the four townships of Whalley, Wiswall, Pendleton, and Henshorn, with Little Mitton and Colcoats, have been included within the boundaries of the borough. The bailiffs are the returning officers. There is a grammar school here largely endowed. The castle built here was bestowed by Charles II. upon Monk, created duke of Albemarle, and dismantled by the orders of the parliament in 1649. It has now nearly disappeared, a modern castle having been built within its precincts. It is 30 m. N. from Manchester, and 26 S.E. from Lancaster. Pop., in 1801, 1368; in 1831, 5213. A. P., £5,359.

COBHAM, a parish in the upper half-hundred of Shamwell, co. of Kent. Living, a vicarage not in charge in the archd. and dio. of Rochester, returned at £65. The church, which is singularly rich in monumental brasses commemorative of the family of the Cobhams, is ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Darley. There was formerly a weekly market here on Monday, and an annual fair on St Mary Magdalene's day. The market has long been discontinued; but the fair is still held on the 2d of August. A college, as it is called, was built here in 1598 by the executors of William Lord Cobham, for the maintenance of 20 poor people. The building contains an apartment for each of the members, who has also a garden for his own use. The incorporated wardens of Rochester bridge are the perpetual presidents of this institution. Cobham Hall and Park, for many ages the seat of the barons of Cobham, now belonging to the Darnley family, lie to the east of the village. In the park is a mausoleum, erected by Lord Durnley at an expense of £15,000. It is 5 m. W. of Rochester. Pop., in 1801, 571; in 1831, 732. A. P., £2,531.

COBHAM, a parish in the hundred of Elmbridge, co. of Surrey. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester, rated at £9 17s. 11d.; returned at £130. Church, ded. to St Andrew. Patron, in 1829, H. P. Watson, Esq. There are two annual fairs held here on the 17th of March, and 11th of December. The mineral wells of this place were at one time much frequented, but have lost their reputation. Pop., in 1801, 1200; in 1831, 1422. A. P., £7,094.

COBLEY, a joint hamlet with Tutnal, in the parish of Tandebigg, formerly in the co. of Warwick, but now annexed to Worcestershire. It is 3½ m. N.E. from Bromsgrove. Pop. of the two, in 1801, 400; in 1831, 518. A. P., £5,030.

Living, a chapelry in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, of the certified value of £34 13s. 4d.; returned at £97. Chapel, ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Lonsdale. This town is situated on the Cocker, which divides it into two halves immediately before its junction with the Darwent. A bridge of one arch unites the two divisions. The Darwent flows on the north of the town, and a bridge of two arches connects the hamlet of Goat, which lies on the north side of the Darwent, with Cockermouth. The trade of this place is considerable, particularly in cottons, linens, and woollen goods, for all of which there are extensive manufactories in the town or its immediate neighbourhood. It is also noted for its excellent tanworks, and its extensive manufacture of hats. The market-day is Monday, and every alternate Wednesday through the summer is a market for cattle. A cattle-fair is held annually for horses and cattle on the 10th of October; and the Mondays succeeding Whitsunday and Martinmas are days set apart for hiring servants. The town has no separate jurisdiction. A bailiff is chosen by a jury of 16 burgesses at the court of the manor, but he has no local authority nor does he exercise any magisterial functions. The magistrates of the county hold a petty-session every Monday. The lord of the manor holds his courts in like manner within the town, assisted by commissioners appointed for the several manors comprised within the honour, along with the townships of Eaglesfield, Brigham, Papcastle, and Bridekirk. Cockermouth returns two members to parliament. The bailiff is the returning officer. Besides the established church, there are places of worship for the Society of Friends, the Independents, and the Methodists. The now ruinous castle of Cockermouth stands upon an eminence to the north of the town fronting the confluence of the Cocker and the Darwent. It is supposed to have been built soon after the conquest by William de Meschines, brother to Ranulph, earl of Chester. It was garrisoned during the civil wars for Charles I. but it was after a month's siege in 1648, reduced and dismantled by the parliamentarians. It is the property of the earl of Egremont, one of whose titles is baron of Cockerinoyth. Pop., in 1801, 2866; in 1831, 4536. A. P. £5,454.

COCKET (THE), or COCQUET, a river in the county of Northumberland which, rising in the N.W. part of the county near the borders of Roxburghshire, flows gently to the eastward through a fine pastoral country. After many beautiful windings it flows past the town of Rothbury, and, crossing the great road between Morpeth and Alnwick, falls into the sea opposite Cocquet Isle, at a short distance from the castle of Warkworth.

This church, which was conventual as well as parochial, has been in ruins for nearly two centuries, but shows still some of the most exquisite fragments of Norman architecture to be found in the kingdom.—13th, St Giles, a discharged rectory, rated at £30, in the gift (1829) of the Rev. J. W. Morgan.—14th, St Leonard's, or the Hyth, a discharged rectory, rated at £10, in the gift of the crown.—15th, St Mary Magdalen, a vicarage, rated at £11, in the gift of the crown.—16th, St Leonards, Lexden, a rectory, rated at £12. In the parish of St Nicholas was a chapel ded. to St Helena, which has been appropriated as a place of worship by the Society of Friends. The chapel of St Ann, formerly a hermitage in the parish of St James, has been totally desecrated by being converted into a barn. Besides the established churches, there are here two Baptist and two Independent meeting-houses. The Society of Friends, the Wesleyan Methodists, and the Unitarians have also places of worship here. There is a free grammar-school, with an annual income of £117, arising out of certain ecclesiastical revenues granted by Queen Elizabeth. There are upon this foundation always from 30 to 40 scholars.

General Description.—Colchester occupies the summit and the northern acclivity of a gentle eminence on the south bank of the Colne, which incircles and intersects part of the town on the N. and N.E., and over which, for the convenience of the inhabitants, there are three bridges. The river has been made navigable for small craft up to a long street running along the river side, called the Hithe or Hythe, where there is a convenient quay, and for vessels of large burden to Wyvenhoe, within 3 miles of the town, where stands the custom-house. Like every other town which has any claim to antiquity, many of the buildings are irregularly disposed, and the lanes narrow and inconvenient; but it has some very fine streets, adorned with elegant and substantial buildings, well-paved and brilliantly lighted with gas.

Barracks, during the late war, were fitted up here, capable of accommodating 10,000 men. They have since been taken down.

Trade.—The woollen trade seems to have been carried on here extensively from its earliest introduction into this country. The making of baize and serge was introduced by a number of Flemings expatriated for their religion, and settled here in the reign of Elizabeth, and for some generations the town had nearly a monopoly of these articles. The silk manufacture has been recently introduced, and is extensively prosecuted. Colchester has long been famous for candied eringo root, and for oysters, the fishery of which on the river Colne was granted to the free burgesses by a charter from Richard I. The vast extent and the great number of men employed in this fishery may be inferred from the fact that some hundreds of smacks are engaged for conveying the produce to London. The oysters are procured in abundance on the sands at the mouth of the Colne, called Spitts, and are carried up to Wyvenhoe where they are laid in beds or pits on the shore to fatten. After they have lain here a sufficient length of time, they are again taken up and sent to the market. The sprat fishery is also most successfully prosecuted here. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday, the latter being the principal day for cattle and corn. The fairs are Easter-Tuesday, July 5th, and 6th, and 23d, and October 20th. Those in July are principally for horses and cattle; the other for horses, cattle, and merchandise in general.

Government.—By its charter, obtained in 1089 from Richard I., and renewed so late as 1818 the government is vested in a mayor, a high-steward, a recorder, a chamberlain, 12 aldermen, 18 assistants, and 18 common-councilmen, with the necessary addenda of clerk, coroners, water-bailiff, sergeants-at-mace, &c., &c. The mayor, late mayor, the recorder, and four of the aldermen are justices of peace for the borough. Courts of session for the borough and liberties are held quarterly by the corporation and courts of pleas for the recovery of debts to any amount at stated periods. One of these courts, called the Law Hundred, admits no actions except against free burgesses. The other, called the Foreign Court, is open to all. Two members, with some intermission, have been sent to parliament for this borough since the 23d of Edward I. The elective franchise is now enjoyed by above 1,200 persons. The mayor is the returning officer. A general hospital has been built, and is supported by subscription. The mayor and aldermen for the time being, with 48 of the principal inhabitants, are a corporation for the benefit of the poor.

History.—Cæsar Colnæ was the British name of this town, which seems to have been a place of importance previous to the invasion of Julius Cæsar. "That it flourished even more than ever," says Camden, "in the time of the Romans, abundance of their coins found every day fully evince, though I have met with none antienter than Gallienus, the greatest part of them being those of the Tetrici, Victorini, Posthumus C. Carausius, Constantine, and the succeeding emperors. The inhabitants glory that Fl. Julia Helena, mother to Constantine the Great, was born in this city, daughter to King Coelus. And in memory of the cross which she found, they bear for their arms a cross enragled between four crowns." After the departure of the Romans, it continued to flourish under the Saxons, who gave it the name of Colne Ceaster. On the irruption of the Danes it is said to have been occupied by that people who were expelled by Edward the Elder. At the time of the Norman survey Colchester appears to have been a flourishing town. Adhering to Charles I., the town was besieged by the forces of the parliament in 1648, under Fairfax, and after a brave defence of eleven weeks, compelled to surrender. Sir Charles Lucas and Sir George Lisle, the principal defenders, were, after the surrender, shot under the city walls. The melancholy marks of this siege are still visible, particularly on the fine church of St Botolph's, which was then destroyed, and has never been repaired. It is supposed to have been the seat of a diocese in the first ages of Christianity in Britain. In the new order of ecclesiastical arrangements, contemplated by Henry VIII., it was made the seat of a suffragan; and two were successively consecrated; but the scheme being in the end abandoned, Colchester relapsed into its former dependence on the diocese of London. Eudo, a great officer in the courts of William the Conqueror, began to build here, A. D. 1096, an abbey of the order of St Benedict, which was valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £523 17s. 0d. q. Dugd. The Right Hon. Charles Abbot, late speaker of the house of commons, who was a native of this neighbourhood, was, in 1817, elevated to the peerage by the title of Baron Colchester. It is 51 m. N.E. by E. from London.

COMB-MARTEN, a parish, and nominally a market-town in the hundred of Branton, co. of Devon. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter, rated at £39 8s. 9d. Church, ded. to St Peter. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. John Toms. Nothing can be imagined more striking than the situation of Comb-Marten: a deep valley, surrounded on all sides with hills, except on the N.W., where there is a small cave opening into the Bristol channel. The houses, stretched in an irregular line of nearly a mile in length along one side of the valley, one-half of them in ruins, and overgrown with ivy, give to the whole scene an aspect of melancholy magnificence, but little accordant with the general character of 'Merry England.' The market, originally granted by charter to Henry Fitz-Martin, in the year 1264, is still kept in memory by the exposure of some trifles on Saturday, the market-day; although it has, in reality, been discontinued almost time out of mind. A fair is held annually on Whit-Monday, and the petty-session for the division is held here by the county-magistrates once a-month. This parish was celebrated for its mines of silver at a very early period. Between the years 1293 and 1296, they are said to have yielded 1591 lbs. weight of pure silver. During the reign of Elizabeth they were wrought apparently with considerable success under the direction of Sir Bevis Bulmer. They have been re-opened oftener than once much nearer our own times, most probably without the expected success, as they are at present unoccupied. There is here a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists. It is 4 m. E. from Ilfordcombe. Population, in 1801, 819; in 1831, 1031. Assessed property, £2,446.

brated antiquary and historian, was born in this parish, 1562. Distance from Castle-Rising, $3\frac{1}{2}$ E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 245; in 1831, 290. A. P., £2,604.

CONGLETON, a market-town in the parish of Astbury, hundred of Northwich, copalatine of Chester. Living, a curacy to the rectory of Astbury, of the certified value of £41 15s., returned at £140. Patrons, the corporation of Congleton. This town is most delightfully situated on the south bank of the Dane, in a fine valley embosomed among hills clothed with trees which give them the aspect of so many luxuriant forests. There is a handsome bridge of modern construction over the Dane. Princely mansions and elegant villas on every side diversify and enliven the beautiful windings of the river, and recent improvements have given to many portions of the town a highly respectable appearance. Congleton is of uncertain origin, but unquestionably of great antiquity though not distinguished in history by any remarkable events. It obtained from Henry de Lucy, earl of Lincoln, a free charter and the privilege of a weekly market, 1282; but its present charter was obtained from James I. in the last year of his reign. The government is by this charter vested in a mayor, a high-steward, 8 aldermen, and 16 burgesses, with the aid of a town clerk, officers, &c. The mayor, and two aldermen, who act as justices of the peace within the borough, are elected annually. The high-steward and the town clerk hold their places for life. The freedom of the borough is inherited only by the eldest sons of freemen; but it can be acquired by servitude, by purchase, and by gift. The manufactures of the place are very considerable; they consist chiefly of leather, cotton, and silk. The manufacture of gloves, and leather laces—at one time known over the whole kingdom by the name of 'Congleton points'—has much declined, but the throwing of silk and the spinning of cotton has greatly increased. For the throwing of silk alone upwards of 50 mills have been erected since 1752. The market-day is Saturday, and the fairs are the Thursday before Shrovetide, the 12th of May, 13th July, and the 3d of December. There are places of worship here for Independents, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics. John Bradshaw, who passed sentence of death upon Charles I. served his apprenticeship as an attorney in this town, of which he afterwards filled in succession the offices of mayor and high-steward. Distance from Marcellfield, 7 m. S. Pop., in 1801, 3861; in 1831, 9352. A. P., £11,189.

CONGRESBURY, a large parish in the hundred of Winterstoke, co. of Somerset. Living, a vicarage with the curacy of Week-St-Lawrence annexed, in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £42 1s. 8d. Church, ded. to St Andrew. Patrons, the corporation of Bristol as governors of St Elizabeth's hospital at Bristol. "It is reported in one of the Glastonbury chronicles that St Fagan and St Deruvian founded the see of the bishop of Somersetshire at this place, in the year 167, and that it continued here 600 years, till it was removed to Wells. But Capgrave saith that this was a very solitary place, and had its name and renown from a religious hermit, called Cungar, who, by the gift of King Ina, had the adjacent territory; and here, about the year 711, founded a collegiate church for twelve canons to the honour of the Holy Trinity, which, as is said, was further endowed by King Edgar. This village was given by King Edward the Confessor, to the bishopric of Wells." Tanner's Not. Mon.

We find, in Collinson's Somersetshire, an account of a singular custom which prevails in this parish and that of Puxton. "In these two parishes there are large pieces of common land, called East and West Dolemoors, (from the Saxon dol, which signifies a share or portion,) which are divided into single acres, each bearing a peculiar and different mark cut in the turf: such as a horn, four oxen and a mare, two oxen and a mare, a pole-axe, cross, dung-fork, oven, duck's-nest, hand-reel, and hare's-tail. On the Saturday before Old-Midsummer, several proprietors of estates in the parishes of Congresbury, Puxton, and Week-St-Lawrence, or their tenants, assemble on the commons. A number of apples are previously prepared, marked in the same manner with the before-mentioned acres, which are distributed by a young lad to each of the commoners from a bag or hat. At the close of the distribution each person repairs to his allotment, as his apple directs him, and takes possession for the ensuing year. An adjournment then takes place to the house of the overseer of Dolemoors, (an officer annually elected from the tenants,) where four acres, reserved for the purpose of paying expenses, are let by inch of candle, and the remainder of the day is spent in that sociability and hearty mirth so congenial to the soul of a Somersetshire yeoman." Distance, 6 m. N.N.E. from Axbridge. Pop., in 1801, 827; in 1831, 1327. A. P., £10,088.

Distance from Stilton, 3 m. S.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 154; in 1831, 204. A. P., £3,461.

CONISBROUGH, a parish in the upper division of the wapentake of Strassforth and Tickhill, W. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York, rated at £8 12s. 8½d. Church, ded. to St Peter. Patron, the archbishop of York. This is a place of great antiquity, and seems to have been connected particularly with all the different dynasties that have swayed the rod of authority in this end of the island. It was a royal city among the Britons; the same among the Saxons; and, what was perfectly equivalent, the seat of a civil jurisdiction under the Romans. The castle, situated on an eminence overlooking the river Don, is by some supposed to have been founded by Queen Cartismandua, by others it is affirmed to be of Roman origin, and by others it is asserted to be originally Saxon. Whatever was its origin, or whoever were the founders, it can hardly be disputed that the very interesting ruins still remaining are of a date posterior to the Conquest, and were probably erected by Earl Warrenne, who had the manor from the Conqueror himself. The keep is almost entire; the remainder is a vast mass of picturesque desolation. Distance from Rotherham, 6½ m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, 843; in 1831, 1347. A. P., £6,113.

CONISCLIFFE, a parish in the south-east division of Darlington ward, co.-palatine of Durham. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Durham, rated at £7 18s. 1½d. Church ded. to St Edmond. The bishop of Durham is patron. This parish is divided into two townships, viz.: HIGH, or CHURCH CONISCLIFFE, in which stands the church, and LOW CONISCLIFFE, both of them seated on the north bank of the Tees, the latter about a mile to the east of the former. The beautifully romantic hills, known by the name of Conistown-Fells, rise immediately behind High Coniscliffe. Pop., in 1801, of High Coniscliffe, 220; of Low Coniscliffe, 131; in 1831, of High Coniscliffe, 234; of Low Coniscliffe, 140; in all, 374. A. P., of High Coniscliffe, £2,654; of Low Coniscliffe, £1,425; in all, £4,079.

CONWAY (THE), a celebrated river of North Wales. It has its source in the small lake Llyn-Conway, among the mountains of that rugged district where the counties of Merioneth, Denbigh, and Carnarvon meet. Speedily augmented by the Mashno, the Celrw, the Llugwy, and other streams of the same mountain origin with itself, it flows with great rapidity through a beautiful and romantic valley, forming the boundary between the counties of Denbigh and Carnarvon for about 17 miles. Below Lima Hall, it descends from its mountain altitude, by a fall of about 50 feet, into the beautiful and fertile vale of Llanwrst, whence, to the sea, its course is winding and placid. From Trefriw, a mile below Llanwrst, to its junction with the sea, a mile below the town of Conway, it is a large navigable river. At Llanwrst it passes under an elegant bridge constructed by Inigo Jones; and at Conway it is crossed by a chain suspension-bridge. Its extreme length may be about 30 miles. In the early part of its course it is famous for trout, and at Conway, near its confluence with the sea, for a fishery of pearls.

CONWAY, or ABERCONWAY, a parish and town in the hundred of Isaf, co. of Carnarvon, North Wales. Living, a vicarage in the dio. of Bangor, rated at £7 7s. 6d. The situation of this parish is beautiful and commodious, on the west side of the river Conway, or rather the estuary of that river, where it meets the sea. The town, though somewhat improved, in consequence of the new line of road carried round the base of Penmaenmawr, and continued through its centre, with an elegant suspension-bridge across the Conway, is still poor and inconsiderable. It is surrounded with a wall 12 feet thick, fortified with towers and battlements, all in a state of considerable preservation. The castle, erected by Edward I., presents a striking and picturesque scene of ruins, many parts of it being still well-preserved, and calculated to give the spectator a high idea of its ancient grandeur. A few small vessels belong to the port, and ships are occasionally repaired here; but the trade is not by any means extensive. Bark, timber, corn, and slates, are the principal articles exported, and they can often be taken on board more conveniently higher up the river. The imports, also, being nothing more than necessities for the consumption of the adjoining country, are carried up the river, and unloaded at the different landing places, whence they can be most easily conveyed to the places for which they are destined. The town, though without trade, and possessed of a very limited population, has its alderman, two bailiffs, a recorder, a coroner, water-bailiff, two sergeants-at-mace, &c. &c., and joins with Carnarvon, Criccieth, Nevin, and Pwllheli, in returning a member to parliament. It is the seat of the petty session for the hundred and the one adjacent. It has a weekly-market on Friday; and it has seven annual fairs, viz. in March 26th, April 30th, June 20th, August 19th, September 16th, October 20th, and November 15th. A Cistercian abbey, founded here in 1185, by Llewellyn-ap-Jorwith, was by Edward I. transferred to Meinir, some miles to the northward. Distance from Bangor, 13 m. N.E. Pop. of the town and parish, in 1801, 889; in 1831, 1245. A. P., £1,123.

COOMBE-KEYNES, a parish in the hundred of Winfrith, co. of Dorset. Living, a discharged vicarage with the curacy of Wool in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, rated at £13 18s. 11½d., returned at £130. Church ded. to the Holy Rood. Patron, in 1829, John Bond, Esq. "The tything man of Coombe-Kaines is obliged to do suit at Winfrith court, and after repeating the following incoherent lines, pays three-pence, and goes out without saying another word:—

"With my white rod,
And I am a fourth post;
That three-pence makes three;
God bless the king and the lord of the franchise.
Our weights and our measures are lawful and true,
Good morrow, Mr Steward, I have no more to say to you."

On default of any one of these particulars, the court-leet of Coombe is forfeited.—Hutchins' Dorset, Vol. I. p. 127. Distance from Wareham, 6 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 93; in 1831, 113. A. P., £739.

COPSTON (PARVA), a depopulated hamlet in the parish of Wolvey, co. of Warwick. Distance from Nuneaton, 6½ m. E.S.E.

COPTHORNE, a hundred, situated near the centre of the county of Surrey. It reaches from Ewell to Eppingham, comprising 12 parishes with the towns of Epsom and Ewell, and, in 1831, a population of 10,727.

COQUET (THE), a river of Northumberland, which rises on the border of Scotland, and passes from Harbottle to the foot of the Simonside hills in a S.E. direction, whence flowing E. it descends through a fine vale to Warkworth, from which it flows in a direct course of about half a mile to the ocean. It is said that there are upwards of 14 feet of water upon the bar at its mouth in full sea. There is a good salmon fishery at its mouth.

COQUETDALE-WARD, a civil division of the county of Northumberland. It embraces the whole breadth of the county from the border of Scotland on the west to the German ocean on the east, comprising 15 parishes and 107 townships; and, in 1831, contained a population of 21,121.

COQUET ISLAND, in the east division of Coquetdale-ward, co. of Northumberland. It is situated in the German ocean about 2 m. from land, at the mouth of the river Coquet, whence its name. It is a narrow stripe of about a mile in length, barren, and unwholesome. It is now the resort of innumerable flocks of sea fowl, though anciently it had a castle and a convent. "This little island is said by Bede to be 'monachorum caetibus insignis' in St Cuthbert's time, about A.D. 680. Here was, till the dissolution, a small house of Benedictine monks, cell to Tynmouth, as parcel of which priory, 4th Edw. VI. this island was granted to John, Earl of Warwick." Tanner's Not. Mon.

CORBRIDGE, a parish and township in the east division of Tyndale ward, co. of Northumberland. It is about 8 m. in length by 2½ in breadth. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham, rated at £11 11s. 8d. Church, ded. to St Andrew. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Carlisle. This parish, besides the township of Corbridge, comprises the townships of Aydon, Aydon-castle, Clarewood, Dilston, Halton, Halton-Shields, Thornborough, Whittington Great, and Whittington Little. Corbridge is situated on the north bank of the Tyne, over which it has a bridge of seven arches. "This," says Hutchinson, "is an ancient borough, and sent members to parliament, but on account of the expense of representation, the privilege was disused. Roger de Clavering, baron of Warkworth, had this manor by a grant of King John, with the privilege of an annual fair on the day of St John the Baptist, and a weekly market." Both fair and market have fallen into disuse. There are, however, at Stagshaw-Bank in the parish, fairs for the sale of live-stock, held annually on Whitsun-Eve and July 4th. A tryst is also held annually at the same place on the 24th of November. The Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics, have places of worship here.

Distance from Hexham, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. E. Pop., in 1801, of the township of Corbridge, 1032, of the whole parish, 1744; in 1831, of the township of Corbridge, 1292, of the whole parish, 2102. A. P., of the parish, £19,154.

CORBY, a hundred in the co. of Northampton. It lies on the N.W. side of the county, bordering on Rutlandshire, and comprises 29 parishes. In 1831, it contained a population of 10,374.

CORBY, a parish and market-town in the wapentake of Beltsloe, parts of Kesteven, co. of Lincoln. Living, a vicarage annexed to the rectory of Irtham in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £5 12s. 1½d. Church ded. to St John the Evangelist. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. Francis Burton. The market, which has nearly gone into disuse, is held on Thursday, and it has two annual fairs for horses and cattle, August 6th and the Monday immediately preceding October 10th. Distance from Lincoln, 33 m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 436; in 1831, 654. A. P., £2,216.

CORBY, a parish in the hundred of Corby, co. of Northampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, rated at £13 16s. 3d. Church ded. to St Peter. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Cardigan. Distance from Rockingham, 3 m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 611; in 1831, 684. A. P., £1,115.

CORBY (GREAT), a township in the parish of Wetheral, Cumberland. Immediately adjoining, on the summit of a rocky cliff, stands Corby castle, which, on the authority of ancient records, is supposed to have been a gentleman's seat from the Conquest. There is a fine collection of portraits here. Distance from Carlisle, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 344; in 1831, 1285.

CORBY (LITTLE), a township in the parish of Warwick, Cumberland, at the confluence of the Eden and the Irthing. Distance from Carlisle, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 120; in 1831, 313.

CORELEY, a parish in the hundred of Stottesden, co. of Salop. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford, rated at £5 5s. 10d. Church ded. to St Peter. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. J. Corbet. Distance from Tenbury, 3 m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 458; in 1831, 553. A. P., £4,222.

CORFE, a parish in the hundred of Taunton and Taunton-Dean, co. of Somerset. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells, not in charge, rated at £11 18s. 8d. Patron, in 1829, F. G. Cooper, Esq. Distance from Taunton, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. S. Pop., in 1801, 194; in 1831, 271. A. P., £1,300.

CORFE-CASTLE, a parish and borough, formerly also a market-town in the hundred of Huistor, Blandford division, co. of Dorset. Living, a rectory with the curacy of Kingston, exempt from visitation, and rated at £40 14s. 7d. Church ded. to St Edward the martyr. Patron, in 1829, Henry Banks, Esq. This town, which stands upon an eminence nearly in the centre of the isle of Pur-beck, seems to have derived its name and all its importance from the adjoining castle, built by King Edgar. The population is mostly employed in the stone quarries and clay pits, for which the place is celebrated: the stone is exported to London, and the clay to the potteries in Staffordshire. Though for ages a borough by prescription, Corfe-castle was not incorporated till the reign of Elizabeth, when the inhabitants were invested with the same liberties as those enjoyed by the Cinque-Ports. Peculiar privileges were added to them by James I., and especially by Charles II. But the fatal schedule A of the reform bill has deprived this place of its most important privilege, that of sending two members to parliament. It is now united with Wareham in the elective franchise. It is governed by a mayor elected at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, and 8 burgesses, who are styled barons. Thursday was the market-day, but the market has been long discontinued. Two annual fairs are still held, 12th May and 29th October. The castle, seated on a steep hill to the north of the town, is joined to it by a massive bridge of four high and narrow arches, crossing a dry ditch of great depth. It was on this bridge that Edward the martyr, murdered by the orders of his stepmother, the beautiful but wicked Elfrida, fell down and expired; hence it is called, to this day, St Edward's Bridge. The castle is half a mile in circumference, and was a place of prodigious strength. In the war between Charles I. and his parliament, it was held by the lord-chief-justice Banks for Charles. In 1645, it was besieged by the parliamentary forces under general Fairfax, taken and reduced to what it still is, a huge pile of ruins. Distance from Dorchester, 23 m. E.S.E. From London, 115 m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, of the borough, 741; of the borough and parish, including the tytlings of North and South divisions, 1344; in 1831, of the borough, 960; of the whole, borough and parish, 1712. A. P. of the borough and parish, £6,596.

CORFE-MULLEN, a parish in the hundred of Cogdean, co. of Dorset. Living, a curacy to the vicarage of Sturminster-Marshall, in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, not in charge. CORNWALL,

The county which forms the S.W. extremity of Great Britain. It is surrounded on all sides by the sea, except on the east, where it borders on Devonshire, from which it is separated by the river Tamar. It is washed by the Bristol channel on the N., by the British channel on the S., and by the Atlantic or Irish sea on the W. Its extreme length from N.E. to S.W. has been calculated to be $78\frac{1}{2}$ miles, and its extreme breadth from N. to S. 43 miles. Its circumference has been taken at from 200 to 210 miles, and its contents at 1827 square miles, or 849,280 square acres,—of which not less than 200,000 acres, or nearly a fourth part of the whole, may be denominated waste lands, affording throughout the year only a coarse scanty pasturage to a few goats and sheep.

Divisions.—Civilly it is divided into 9 hundreds, viz. East and West Kerrier, Lesnewth, Penwith, Powder, Pyder, Stratton, and Trigg. It now sends four members to parliament for the shire, who are elected for the eastern division at Bodmin, and for the western at Truro. Each of its twenty boroughs—most of them being only paltry villages—formerly sent two members, viz. 40 in all. It comprises 203 parishes, of which 85 are rectories, 96 vicarages, and 22 curacies. Pop., in 1801, 188,269; in 1831, 301,000. A. P., £916,060. Cornwall is ecclesiastically within the diocese of Exeter, province of Canterbury, and with three parishes in Devonshire forms an archdeaconry.

Climate, Physical Features, &c.—This county is intersected from E. to W. by a ridge of rugged and bleak hills, and its general aspect is barren and dreary. From its vicinity to the Atlantic, the climate is extremely damp; but, except to persons of scorbutic habits, it is highly salubrious, the inhabitants being in general healthy and vigorous, and attaining many of them a remarkable longevity. The winters are more mild here than in any other part of the island; myrtles, if they are only sheltered from the salt winds that blow from the sea, will flourish in the open air the whole year round. The spring shows itself in buds and blossoms very early, but its progress is less rapid than in countries where it is later in making its appearance. The summers are not hotter in proportion as the winters are less cold, the air being always cooled by the sea-breeze.

Soil.—The soil is various, but may be comprehended generally under three kinds:—the black and gritty,—the shelly and slaty,—and the stiff reddish soil approaching to clay. The hills and higher grounds are entirely covered with the first; in less elevated situations it bears excellent crops of potatoes, and even of barley and oats. The second kind of soil predominates about the middle of the county, and bears sometimes good crops of wheat. The third is calculated for any kind of crop.

Hills and Rivers.—Some of the hills of this county are of considerable height. Brown-Willey, the highest, is calculated to be 1368 feet above the level of the sea. Carraton-Hill, Kil-Hill, Henborough, and Codenborough, are all of them upwards of 1000 feet above the level of the sea. Owing to this circumstance, to the numerous springs to which these mountains give birth, and to the constant moisture of the atmosphere, the rivers and streams here are more numerous, and, in proportion to their length of course, larger than perhaps in other quarters of the island. Of these, the principal are the Tamar, the Lynher, the Tide or Tidi, the Leaton, the East Looe, the Duloe, the Fowey, the Fal, the Heyl, and the Camel or Alan.—Of these, the largest is undoubtedly the Tamar, which, rising in the parish of Moorwinstow, in the N.E. corner of the county, within 3rd miles of the Bristol channel, runs across the neck of the peninsula, forming the boundary between this county and that of Devon, and after a course of 40 miles, during which it receives numerous accessions, falls into the sea between Mount-Edgcombe and the lands of Stonehouse and St Michael's island, in Plymouth sound.—The Lynher rises to the west of Launceston, and flowing S.S.W. by Callington to Notter bridge, becomes navigable, spreading out into the Lynher creek. Four miles farther on it meets the Tamar, and after, with it, forming the fine harbour of the Hamoaze, with the creeks on the west of St John's and Mellbrook, and of Stonehouse on the east, opens into Plymouth sound.—The Tide or Tidi, has its source on Carraton hill, and flows by St Germans, where it becomes navigable, into the Lynher creek, and by it into the sea.—The Leaton has its source to the N.E. of Liskeard, and passing near that place, falls into the sea, after a course of 12 miles.—The East Looe has its source in the parish of St Cleer, and the West Looe, or Duloe, in the parish of St Penmick. The former becomes navigable at Sandplace, the latter at Trelawn-wear, and both, after a course, the one of ten and the other of seven miles, fall into the sea by one mouth between East and West Looe.—The Fowey has its source near the mountain of Brown-Wiley in the parish of Altonon. It becomes navigable at Lostwithiel, a little below which it meets the Leryn creek, forming a wide and deep haven. Passing the town of Fowey, it falls into the sea, after a course of about 26 miles.—The Fal has its source to the west of Reach hills, and meeting with Truro and St Clement's creeks, forms, after a course of about 20 miles, the harbour of Falmouth. The Heyl, or Hele, has its source in the parish of Weudron, becomes navigable at Gweek, and, after forming Helford haven, falls into the sea about twelve miles from its source.—The Camel, or Alan, has its source about two miles to the north of Camelford. It becomes navigable at Polbrock, and flowing by Padstow, falls into the Bristol channel by an estuary of one mile broad. A bar of sand, thrown up by the winds and tides across the mouth of this haven, renders the entrance impracticable for vessels of any considerable burden, and dangerous even for small vessels except in fair weather and at full tide.

Fisheries.—Having such a number of rivers entering the sea by deep creeks and broad estuaries, the fisheries of Cornwall might naturally be expected to be extensive and profitable. At one time they not only supplied a large portion of the subsistence of the people, but formed an important article of commerce. They have been, however, for some time past on the decline. Vast quantities of turbot, sole, piper, dory, red mullet, whiting, and mackerel, are still caught; but the herrings and pilchards—the latter found no where else save on the opposite shores of Brittany and the south coast of Ireland—are the principal objects with the Cornish fishermen. Sixty thousand hogsheads of the latter have been caught in the bay of St Austell in one season. A capital of £400,000 is said to be invested in this business, and in its various processes upwards of 12,000 people find employment.

Animals and Productions.—The native cattle are small and hardy, generally black, short horned, and thick-boned. The Devonshire breed, sometimes pure and sometimes mixed in various proportions, is also common through the county. Oxen are generally used for the draught, and in the mining districts many mules are bred, and are in general request. Goats are more numerous here than perhaps in any other division of the kingdom. It does not appear that either in plants or animals there is any thing peculiar to the county if we perhaps except the pyrrhororax, a kind of crow, having a red bill with red legs and feet, called the Cornish cough, and this too is said to be becoming even here a rare bird.

Minerals.—By its mineral products Cornwall is distinguished above all other counties of England, and indeed above most places of the same extent in any quarter of the globe. Tin has been a product of this county—if we may credit Herodotus, Strabo, and other ancient historians and geographers—from the earliest ages noticed in uninspired records: the Phœnicians, the first maritime merchants, having supplied themselves with this article from hence long before the European tribes had emerged from their barbaric slumbers. Tin alone for many ages was sought after here, and it does not appear to have even been dreamed of that its hills were equally rich in copper. There are besides these, mines where copper and cobalt, tin and cobalt, antimony and manganese, are wrought at the same time. There are also mines of lead, but they are inconsiderable when compared with those of tin and copper. The tin after being separated from the ore is cast into blocks weighing from 2½ to 4 cwt. each. Of these blocks from 25,000 to 30,000 are on an average produced annually, the value of which may be taken at £350,000. The produce of the copper-mines, in 1824, was 8417 tons of copper, value £743,253; in 1825, 9144 tons of copper, value £798,790; and in 1826, 10,450 tons of copper, value £755,358. The expense of working the mines must be very great. That of Dolcoath, in the parish of Camborne alone, has been stated at £4,000 per month. Upwards of 120 steam-engines are employed in drawing water, rubbish, and ore from them. In the parish of Gwennap alone, the steam-power in operation is said to be equal to that of 2500 horses. Gold is also found here in some of the ores, but not in sufficient quantity to make its extraction a separate or particular object. These veins are chiefly met with in St Dizzey, Duge, Gwennap, Germoe, Gwinnear, Redruth, St Agnes, Stythian, and Illogan [see these articles], also along the north coast from Lelant to the Land's End. The mines are all private property, let from time to time for special considerations, varying in amount from one 30th to one 12th part of the produce. Slate, the best that has yet been discovered, is dug out of the quarries between Liskeard and the Tamar, especially from the celebrated one of Dennybal in the parish of St Teath. Immense quantities of this slate, which is of a fine grey-blue colour and so close in the texture that on being struck it sounds like metal, is shipped at Port-Isaac, about 5 m. distance from the quarry, for the continent, where it is in high request. Large quantities of granite or moor-stone have also been exported of late years for the erection of bridges and other public buildings. Potters-clay of an excellent quality is found in the parishes of Roche, St Stephen, and St Denis, vast quantities of which are shipped at the port of Charleston in the parish of St Austell, for the potteries of Staffordshire. The soap rock to the north of Kinaceo-Cove is rented exclusively by the Worcester porcelain company. Fine clay of an excellent quality is found near Lelant, which is carried into Wales for the laying the bottoms of the copper furnaces. The white topaz is found in St Michael's-mount. The asbestos, from which may be made incombustible cloth, is found in some of the mines, and a stone called the swimming-stone, from its floating upon water. Except what is connected with the smelting of its metal ores, Cornwall can scarcely be said to possess any manufacture. A few paper-mills are found on the rivers, some coarse woollen-cloth is made at Perran-ar-worthal, and there is a carpet-manufactory at Truro.

History.—The name of this county has been supposed to be derived from its shape, a horn or promontory, and its early inhabitants, called by the Saxons Wealas, or Cornweals. Previous to the descent of the Romans it was inhabited by three British tribes, the Carnabii, the Cimbri, and the Damnonii. Passing the fabulous history of King Arthur, who is said to have been born here in the castle of Tintogel and killed near Camelford, we find the Cornish men resisting vigorously, and often successfully, the encroachments of the Saxons. They were, however, finally subdued under Athelstane, since which, Cornwall has remained more quietly perhaps than any of the other divisions of the country, an integral part of the kingdom. In 1337, Cornwall was erected a dukedom in favour of Edward the Black Prince, and by act of parliament settled on the eldest sons of the kings of England, with whom it has remained ever since. It has large revenues annexed, and the government is vested in the duke who has his chancellor, attorney, and solicitor-generals, &c., his court of exchequer, and the appointment of sheriffs. Whatever is connected with the mines, belongs to a separate jurisdiction: the miners, by ancient prescription confirmed by an act of the reign of Edward III., being exempted from all civil jurisdiction other than that of the stannary courts except in cases "affecting land, life, or limb." At the head of this jurisdiction is a lord-warden, under whom is a vice-warden, who hold a court of equity once a month for all matters belonging to the mines. From this court no writ of error lies to the courts at Westminster, but there may be an appeal to the lord-warden and from him to the duke and his council. No new laws affecting the mines can be enacted without the consent of 24 persons elected out of the four stannaries of Foymore, Blackmore, Tywarnhaile, and Penwith and Kerrier, six for each district. They are called stannators, and their meetings—regulated by a speaker formally chosen and adjourned from time to time according to circumstances—are called stannary parliaments. The revenue of the duchy depends in a great measure on the prosperity of the mines. The direct tax amounts to £4 upon all tin raised in Cornwall; the restrictions and regulations of the coinage add from £1 to £2 per ton to the duty. The price of the metal is thus artificially raised from £5 to £6 per ton, while the produce itself—from £15,000 to £20,000—is almost wholly swallowed up by various sinecure offices.

Antiquities.—Rude monuments of its early inhabitants, such as large unwrought stones sometimes placed singly and sometimes in circles, tumuli, cairns, cromlechs, and rocking stones, supposed to be, a number of them at least, the remains of Druidical superstition, are abundant in Cornwall. The ruins of baronial castles belonging to the middle ages are also numerous.—Including two alien, there were 20 religious houses, a preceptory of the knights hospitallers, 11 colleges and 7 hospitals in this county before the Reformation. Excepting the priory of St Germans there are no monastic remains worthy of notice.

COTTENHAM, a parish in the hundred of Chesterton, co. of Cambridge. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Ely, rated at £36 15s. Church ded. to All Saints. Patron, the bishop of Ely. This is among the most famed parishes in England for the produce of the dairy; for excellent cheese it stands almost unrivalled. This is no doubt owing in part to the rich pasture-lands along the banks of the Ouse, but much more to the extreme care and scientific skill with which the dairies are managed. It was here, at his manor of Cottenham, that Geoffrey, abbot of Crowland, with the assistance of his monks, commenced in 1109 a course of lectures which issued in the formation of a system of academical education, and the establishment of the university of Cambridge. This was the birth-place of Archbishop Tension. Distance from Cambridge, 6½ m. N. Pop., in 1801, 1088; in 1831, 1636. A. P., £7,767.

A city and county of itself, locally situated in the county of Warwick. Pop., in 1801, 16,034; in 1831, 27,070. A. P., £57,770.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—The livings are: 1st, St Michael's, a vicarage, rated at £26 15s. 6d. The church is an ancient and splendid edifice, with a fine tower of four stages surmounted by an octagonal spire, generally thought to be among the best-proportioned in Europe, 303 ft. in height. The patron is the king. A chapel has been erected in this parish by the parliamentary commissioners, with a curacy subordinate to the vicarage.—2d, The Holy Trinity, a vicarage, rated at £10. The church is a venerable and magnificent pile of building, with a beautiful tower. The patron of this is also the king.—3d, St John's, a rectory, returned at £70. The patrons are the mayor and corporation of Coventry. In consequence of some real or affected necessity, this living has come to be annexed to the head mastership of the free-school, including also a lectureship for the second master. These livings are all in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, a diocese which includes the entire county of Derby, of Stafford—the parishes of Broom and Clent excepted—the greater proportion of Warwickshire, and nearly a moiety of the county of Salop, comprising in all 577 parishes. Besides the established churches there are here places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyan Methodists, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics.—There is a free grammar school, founded in the time of Henry VIII. by John Hales, Esq., and endowed with lands that yield annually £900. This school is under the management and in the patronage of the corporation.—The Bablake blue-coat school has an annual income of £340, upon which 26 boys are maintained, clothed, educated, and apprenticed. The sole patronage of this seminary also belongs to the corporation. Besides these there are several charity schools. There are also a National school, and a Lancasterian one, both supported by subscription, and several well-endowed hospitals and almshouses. Here is said to have been in the Saxon times a famous convent of nuns, under the government of St Osburg, which was destroyed by the Danes, A.D. 1016. But about the year 1043, the munificent earl of Mercia, Leofric, with his lady Godiva, began here a noble monastery which they endowed with 24 manors. The monks continued here to the surrender, 30th Hen. VIII., about which time their revenues were returned at £731 19s. 5d. The cathedral of this monastery, which was a most splendid edifice, has been entirely destroyed.

General Description.—Coventry is pleasantly situated—nearly in the centre of the kingdom—on a gentle declivity, bounded for a short distance on the N.E. by the Sherburn, and the Radford brook which running from north to south unites its waters with the Sherburn in the middle of the town. It is a place of very considerable antiquity, and was in the 13th century surrounded with a wall three miles in circumference. It was in 1461, by charter from Hen. VI., erected, with a district of four miles round it, into a county of itself, under the appellation of 'the city and county of the city of Coventry.' In common with all ancient towns which have not been subjected to the force of fire or some other overwhelming calamity, out of which they have risen with more than original grandeur, it presents but a dark and repulsive appearance. The streets are many of them narrow, almost closed over by projecting upper stories, but partially paved, and though gas has been introduced, not very brilliantly illuminated. The suburbs have of late years been vastly augmented with spacious streets and fine ranges of elegant buildings.

Trade.—Having the advantage of the Oxford and Coventry canals, this town is admirably situated as a place of trade, being central to the three great ports of the kingdom, London, Liverpool, and Hull. The making of caps was long almost monopolized by this city. To these succeeded the manufacture of broad-cloths, which was extensively and successfully carried on for upwards of a century. Tammies, camlets, shallons, and calimancoes, succeeded to the broad cloths; and these again gave place to the throwing of silk, the weaving of silk-gauze, broad silks, and ribands, which continue to be the staple of its traffic. The market-day is Friday, and fairs are held annually on the 21st of April, 16th of August, and 21st of October. What is called the Great show-fair continues for eight days, commencing on the Friday after Corpus-Christi day. The ridiculous fable of the lady Godiva redeeming from her husband Leofric, earl of Mercia, and first lord of the city, the forfeited privileges of the citizens, by riding naked through the city at mid-day, is kept up on the first of these eight days, if not annually, at least occasionally, by the heads of the corporation in their robes, and the several trading companies, escorting a valiant fair one, who in imitation of Godiva, rides through the city in a close flesh-coloured dress.

History, Government, &c.—Coventry has had the honour of two parliaments being held in it—one by Henry IV., from which all lawyers were excluded, called in consequence 'Parliamentum Indocorum,' and one by Henry VI., in which Richard, duke of York, and the friends of the house of York were attainted. Edward IV. deprived it of its charter. In the beginning of the 16th century the bishop of Chester condemned here seven persons for heresy, who were all burnt at stakes in the Little Park. In 1554 Mr Hopkins, sheriff of the city, was thrown into the Fleet prison on a charge of heresy, and though shortly after liberated, was happy to flee the country. Lawrence Sanders, Robert Glover, and Cornelius Bonagey, were committed to the flames here the following year. Mary, queen of Scots, during her long imprisonment was twice here, and her son, the British Solomon, with a vast retinue, paid it a visit a few years before his death. He was on this occasion presented by the corporation with a gold cup weighing 45 ounces, and containing £100. Charles I., when he unfurled the flag of defiance to his parliament at Nottingham, ordered the authorities of Coventry to attend him, but the majority of the citizens being friends to their country and the best interests of mankind, prevented them. Charles attempted to possess himself of the city, but without effect; and it was by the lord Brook secured for the parliament, for whom it was garrisoned and preserved through the war. During the time of the preparation, several quarries in the neighbourhood, which it was supposed might be places of shelter for an attacking army, were filled up by the women of the city, who assembled at the beat of a drum, and with mattocks and spades marched in military array, headed by an amazon, bearing as an ensign of command, a large club over her shoulder. At the restoration, Charles II. was proclaimed by the mayor and aldermen amidst an immense concourse of the citizens, the public conduits of the city in the mean time flowing with wine, with the most triumphant acclamations. He was shortly after waited upon by a deputation from the city, who presented him a basin and ewer, with fifty pieces of gold, and a surrender of all the king's lands, in return for all which kindness, the merry monarch—whose mirth was scarcely more remarkable than his malignity—sent next year the earl of Northampton, with a large retinue of court-gentry and a body of troops, to break down the city walls, as a punishment for the citizens having shut their gates upon his father, which orders they executed so effectually, that they left of a wall, three miles in circuit, with 32 towers, only the dismantled gates and a few fragments.—Coventry was early celebrated for its dramatic amusements. Perhaps next to the Chester mysteries, no English performances of this kind were so celebrated in early times as the Coventry plays. "Before ye suppression of the monasteries," says Dugdale, "this city was very famous for the pageants that were play'd therein upon Corpus Christi day."—By the charter of James I., the government is vested in a mayor, a warder, two sheriffs, two bailiffs, a steward, two chamberlains, a coroner, town clerk, two wardens, ten aldermen, who are justices of the peace within the city and its county, and preside over the ten wards into which it is divided, 31 superior, and 25 inferior common-councilmen, &c. &c. The jurisdiction of the corporation extends to all cases short of treason, but it has become the custom to remit all capital cases to the judges of assize. The superior council of 31 elect a mayor, sheriffs, steward, and coroner, annually, and the aldermen as vacancies occur. The city has 10 wards, with each its respective alderman, and 13 fraternities or trading companies, admission into which can be obtained only by a servitude to the trade of seven years, within the city and liberties. The city returns two members to parliament; the right of election was formerly with all freemen not receiving alms, in number about 3,500; it is now enjoyed by only 1500. The sheriffs are the returning officers. Among the privi-loges of the freemen of Coventry, there is the strange one of depasturing cattle upon a tract of land extending to about 3000 acres, from Lammas to Candlemas, hence called the 'Lammas grounds.' Coventry is 91 m. N.W. by N. from London; and 10 m. N.N.E. from Warwick.

COVERHAM, a parish in the west division of the wapentake of Hang, N. R. of the co. of York. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, returned at £80. COWES (EAST), a hamlet in the parish of Whippingham, Isle of Wight division of the co. of Southampton. It is situated on the east bank of the mouth of the Medina, or the Cowes river, and has a considerable trade. There is a custom-house here. Distance from West Cowes, $\frac{1}{4}$ m. S. S. E.

COWES (WEST), a sea-port and chapelry in the parish of Northwood, Isle of Wight division of the co. of Southampton. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Winchester, returned at £110. Patron, the vicar of Carisbrook. This, with its twin-sister East Cowes, which stands directly opposite on the east bank of the river, in all probability owe their existence to two forts built here by Henry VIII. for the purpose of defending the entrance to the river. That on the west bank is still in good repair. Here is an excellent harbour of easy access, and equally convenient for sailing to the east or to the west. Cowes has, in consequence, become a large and flourishing town, carrying on a lucrative trade with France, Spain, and the shores of the Mediterranean. The principal articles of export are wheat, flour, malt, barley, and salt, all the native products of this beautiful and very fertile island. The town is most romantically situated at the mouth of the Medina river. The streets are narrow, and the buildings in general far from being elegant; but, rising in terraces one above another from the bottom to the brow of the hill, viewed from the sea, or the opposite bank, they have a singularly picturesque appearance, at the same time the prospects which they themselves command are the most delightful that fancy, in her happiest moments, ever could conceive. Enjoying a most salubrious atmosphere, a fine beach, and a neighbourhood rich in all that constitutes rural beauty, with an easy, a safe, and a ready communication, by means of steam-boats, with the adjacent ports in the island, and on the mainland. Cowes has become a favourite sea-bathing station, and large additions of handsome houses both to the town and neighbourhood for accommodating its numerous and fashionable visitors, have, of late, been made, and are still making. There is here an excellent dock-yard in which ships are frequently built for the royal navy. Distance from Southampton, $11\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.S.E. The returns are all included in those of the parish of Northwood.

CRANBORNE, a market-town and parish in the above hundred. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, rated at £6 13s. 4d.; returned at £120. The church, formerly the conventual church of the priory, is ded. to St Bartholomew. Patron, the marquess of Salisbury. This town is most delightfully situated in the centre of a large expanse of rich champaign land, near the N. E. border of the county. It has a market on Thursday, and two annual fairs on the 24th of August and the 6th of December. It is divided into three liberties, called the tything, the priory, and the borough, to each of which a tything-man and a bailiff are appointed. The jurisdiction of the county magistrates extends over the whole. The old manor-house, called Cranborne-castle, used frequently to be the royal residence when the cares of state were laid aside for the pleasures of Cranborne-chase, an extensive woodland tract, reaching to within a small distance of Salisbury, and which is still stocked with upwards of 10,000 deer. Here the chase-courts were formerly held, and there was a room in the house called the Dungeon, used as the chase prison, "which by old presentments," says Hutchins, "seems to have been much in use." This was the birth-place of Bishop Stillingfleet, in 1635. Distance from Dorchester, 30 m. N.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, including the tythings of Alderholt, Beveridge, Blagdon, Farewood, and Moncton-up-Wimborne, 1402; in 1831, 2158. A. P., £3,973.

The church, a large and beautiful edifice, is ded. to St Dunstan. Patron, in 1829, the marquess of Salisbury. The town is situated upon a small brook called the Crane, whence its name. Here was erected by the Flemings, under the patronage of Edward III., in the 10th year of his reign, the first woollen manufactory attempted in England. This town continued for ages to be the centre of that manufacture, till it was removed into the counties of Gloucester and Somerset. The market-day is Wednesday; and here are two annual fairs, the 30th of May and the 20th of September, for horses and cattle. There are here places of worship for Calvinistic Baptists, Huntingdonians, (a particular class of Methodists, founded by the late William Huntingdon, who was a native of this parish), Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and Unitarians. Sir Richard Baker, author of the English chronicles, was a native of this parish. Distance from Maidstone, 14 m. S.S.E. Pop. of the town and parish in 1801, 2561; in 1831, 3844. A. P., £18,102.

Patron, in 1829, Thomas Austen, Esq. This village, which takes its name from a ford over the Cray, was formerly a market-town; the market has been long in desuetude, but there is still a fair held here on the 8th of September. There are here on the Cray very extensive bleaching-grounds, and large establishments for printing calicoes. Numerous caverns are met with here, some of them of a great depth, the origin of which seems to have puzzled the antiquarian brotherhood in no small degree. The most reasonable theory regarding them seems to be that which supposes them simply pits whence at some former period chalk was taken. This place was, in 457, the scene of a bloody and decisive battle between Hengist the Saxon, and the British king Vortimer who was totally defeated with the loss of the greater part of his followers. Distance from London, 13 m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 1210; in 1831, 2022. A. P., £6,248.

CREDITON, a hundred in the new northern division of the co. of Devon. It lies in the centre of the county a little to the N.W. of Exeter, and comprises 6 parishes, with the market-town of Crediton; in 1831, it contained a population of 12,237.

CREDITON, a market-town and parish in the above hundred. Living, a vicarage, a peculiar of the bishop of Exeter, rated at £30. Church ded. to the Holy Cross. Patrons, the governors of the church of Crediton. The town is delightfully situated in a rich valley between two hills on the banks of the Creden, Crede, or Creedy, at a short distance from its confluence with the Exe. The principal manufacture of the town is that of serge, which is sent into Exeter in its rude state, and there finished for the market. Flannels, long ells, and dowlas, are also made, but in small quantity. The market-day is Saturday. The Saturday preceding the last Wednesday of April is a large cattle-market, and there are fairs for cattle on May 11th, and September 21st, in the eastern division of the town, and on the 21st of August in the western division, unless the 21st happens to be Friday, Saturday, or Sabbath, in which case it is held the Tuesday following. The town is governed by a portreeve, bailiff, and constables chosen yearly at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, and is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates who hold here a petty-sessions once a month. Crediton is one of the polling places for the members for North Devon. Here is said to have been a collegiate church in Saxon times, which was made the cathedral of the bishops of Devonshire about A.D. 905. There are here places of worship for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyan Methodists, and Unitarians. The grammar school here was founded and endowed to a considerable amount by Edward VI. There are several other good schools. A dreadful fire took place here on the 12th of August, 1743, by which upwards of 1000 houses were consumed. Distance from Exeter, 8 m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, including the tythings of Bradley, Canon-Feo, Falford, Knowle, Rudge, Town, Uford, Uton, and Woodland, 4929; in 1831, 5922. A. P., £19,011.

CRICKEITH, a parish, borough, and market-town, in the hundred of Ewionydd, co. of Carnarvon, South Wales. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Merioneth and dio. of Bangor, rated at £13 8s. 11½d. The town stands upon the sea-shore, and consists only of a few cottages thinly scattered over a wide extent of ground. It is, however, a place of considerable antiquity. The government is vested in two bailiffs. The market-day is Wednesday; and it has annual fairs, May 23d, July 1st, and October 18th. Cricketh unites with Carnarvon in returning one member to parliament. Pop., in 1801, 396; in 1831, 648. A. P., £1,306.

CRICKET-MALHERBIE, a parish in the hundred of Abdick and Bulstone, co. of Somerset. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells, returned at £107 4s. 4d. Church ded. to St Mary Magdalene. Patroness, in 1829, Mrs Potts. Distance from Ilminster, 2 m. S. Pop., in 1801, 64; in 1831, 28. A. P., £1,033.

CRICKET (ST THOMAS), a parish in the hundred of South Petherton, co. of Somerset. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £9 17s. 6d. Church ded. to St Thomas. Patron, in 1829, Lord Bridport. Distance from Crewkerne, 4½ m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 69; in 1831, 86. A. P., £1,273.

CRICKHOWELL, a hundred in the co. of Brecon, South Wales. This was anciently a separate district, and was governed by its own prince. It was erected into a hundred by Henry VIII. It comprises 8 parishes; and, in 1831, contained a population of 11,176.

CRICKHOWELL, a parish and market-town in the above hundred. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Brecon and dio. of St David's, rated at £5 9s. 9d. Patron, the duke of Beaufort. The town is most delightfully situated on a rising ground which overlooks the Uske, over which there is here a bridge of 14 arches. It is neatly built, and is considered a very agreeable and healthy place of residence. During the summer season, it is a general resort for invalids, on account of the fine air, and the abundance of goats' milk; and of anglers, on account of the beautiful scenery and the numerous troutling streams in its neighbourhood. It is a borough by prescription, and the bailiff is appointed by the lord of the manor, the duke of Beaufort. It is the seat of the petty-sessions for the hundred. It has weekly markets on Thursday and Saturday, and fairs January 1st, May 21st, and August 21st, annually. Here was, in ancient times, a very strong castle, re-erected by one of the Pauncefoots—a family who held the manor for several generations—in the reign of Henry IV. Only some small remnants of it are now visible. Distance from London, 157 m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 566; in 1831, 1061. A. P., £4,106.

CRICKLADE, a borough and market-town in the hundred of Highworth, Cricklade, and Staple, co. of Wilts. It is divided into two parishes, St Samson's and St Mary's, both in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury. St Samson's is a vicarage, rated at £18 11s. 10½d. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Winchester. St Mary's is a discharged rectory, rated at £4 14s. 9½d. Patrons, alternately the king and the bishop of Salisbury. The town, which boasts a very high antiquity, is situated on the south bank of the Isis, a little below the place where its stream is augmented by the reception of the waters of the Churn and the Rey, two of its early tributaries. It is a borough by prescription, and from the time of Henry VI. till the year 1782, returned regularly two members to parliament. Since that year, being convicted of the most corrupt practices, the elective franchise, previously confined to Cricklade, was extended to the four adjoining divisions, viz., Highworth, Staple, Kingsbridge, and Malmesbury, excepting such parts of the hundred of Malmesbury as are now included in the borough of Malmesbury. The bailiff of Cricklade is the returning officer. This principal functionary of the town is appointed at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, who holds a court for the recovery of small debts every third week. The market on Saturday, though it has become almost nominal, is still kept up; but the fairs, with the exception of a pleasure one, on the 29th September, have been discontinued. There are here places of worship for the Independents and the Wesleyan Methodists. Distance from Salisbury, 44 m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, of St Samson's, including the small township of Whidhill, 957; of St Mary's, 376; in all, 1133; in 1831, the former, 1197; the latter, 445; in all, 1642. A. CROMER, a parish, formerly a market-town, in the hundred of North Erpingham, co. of Norfolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £9 4s. 9d., returned at £80. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Patron, the bishop of Ely. This place, originally called Shipdon, was formerly of greater extent than at present, having two parish churches, one of which with nearly the whole of the ancient town has been swept away by the sea which is here making daily encroachments upon the land. The modern town stands principally upon a high cliff, commanding a most enchanting view of the bay of Cromer, called by seamen, from the heavy sea generally rolling into it and the consequent danger of its navigation, 'the Devil's throat.' Cromer has an atmosphere of great salubrity, an excellent beach, and a neighbourhood remarkable for romantic and picturesque scenery, and has of late years become a watering-place of considerable celebrity. The inhabitants are mostly fishermen, who subsist a great part of the season by taking lobsters, which are here abundant and of very superior quality. There is no harbour here, but vessels of 60 to 100 tons burden unlade at ebb-tide into carts driven along side of them. There is a fair annually on Whit-Monday. A court is held by the county-magistrates once a fortnight. There is a chapel here for the Wesleyan Methodists. Distance from Norwich, 21 m. N. Pop., in 1801, 676; in 1831, 1232. A. P., £1,673.

CROMFORD, or CRUMEFORD, a township and chapelry in the parish of Wirksworth, hundred of Wirksworth, co. of Derby. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, rated at £98. This flourishing township has arisen with the cotton manufacture since the year 1780, when Sir Richard Arkwright, the father of that manufacture, purchased the manor of Cromford, and taking the benefit of the Darwent, erected here, upon a large scale, works for spinning cotton. It consists of houses for the people employed in the works, a large proportion of which are built round an open square in which a market is held every Saturday. The works employ upwards of 1000 persons with a corresponding number of children, of whom none are admitted till they have been a certain period at school supported by the proprietor of the works. There are here upon a small scale, manufactories of gingham, hats, and paper. The Cromford canal—communicating with the Erwash canal near Langley bridge—affords every facility for transporting goods to every quarter of the kingdom. Distance from Derby, 15 m. N. Pop., in 1801, 1115; in 1831, 1291. A. P., £2,409.

CROWLAND, an ancient town and parish in the wapentake of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. of Lincoln. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, returned at £64. The church—which consists of the north aisle of the nave of the partly ruinous old abbey-church neatly and commodiously fitted up—is ded. to St Bartholomew and St Guthlac. Patron, in 1829, J. Whitsed, Esq. The town of Crowland is situated among the fens on the east bank of the Welland. It consists of four streets separated by water-courses bordered by willows which give it a rural and at the same time a romantic aspect. The streets are united by a bridge over the Welland, the Nene, and a capacious drain called Catwater. The workmanship of this bridge—which is of the age of Edward II.—has been much admired. On one of the wings is a statue of King Ethelbald, supposed to be of the era of the 9th century, and a gen-wine specimen of Saxon sculpture. In olden times there was nothing but impassable marshes around the town, and the cattle they possessed were fed at a great distance from it. These marshes have now been drained and converted into rich meadows and luxuriant cornfields. In this process wind-mills have been most successfully employed, some of them lifting 40 tons of water per minute. Farming and grazing occupy the greater part of the inhabitants. They have also an extensive trade in poultry and especially in wild-ducks, which are brought to the ponds by means of tame ducks that are kept upon them for the purpose, and taken in nets to the number of thousands at a time. For the privilege of fowling and fishing in these ponds, the abbot of Crowland claimed £300 per annum from the inhabitants, which is still exacted by the crown. The market, which was held here on the Saturday, has long ago been transferred to Thorney in the county of Cambridge; but the fair—commencing on the festival of St Bartholomew—is held annually and continues for twelve days. Ethelbald, king of Mercia, built here, A.D. 716, an abbey for Black monks. After being destroyed by the Danes, rebuilt by Edred, and again ruined by fire, it was restored with increased splendour by the abbot Jofried, in 1112. At the general dissolution the manors and estates belonging to it were returned worth £1,083 15s 10d, ob. per ann. Dugd. The site was granted to Edward, Lord Clinton. The Wesleyan Methodists have here a place of worship. Distance from Lincoln, 51 m. S.S.E. Population, in 1801, 1425; in 1831, 2268. A. P., £17,339.

CROWLE, a town and parish in the west division of the wapentake of Manley, co. of Lincoln. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £14 10s. Church ded. to St Oswald. Patroness, in 1829, Mrs Egremont. The town stands in the N.W. corner of the Isle of Axholme, near the river Don, and at a short distance from the Stainforth and Keadley canal which passes it a little to the north. The market has been discontinued, but during the months of March, April, and May, there is a sheep and cattle market held every alternate Monday. The last Monday in May and the 22d of November are also held annually as fairs for the sale of cattle, flax, hemp, &c. There are here places of worship for the Independents and the Wesleyan Methodists. Distance from Thorne in the co. of York, 5 m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801 (exclusive of the township of Eastoft), 1343; in 1831, 1889. A. P., £6,854.

CROYDON. Ses CLAPTON, Cambridge, CROYDON, a market-town and parish in the first division of the hundred of Wallington, co. of Surrey. Living, a vicarage within the peculiar jurisdiction of the archbishop of Canterbury in the deanery of Croydon, rated at £21 18s. 9d. The church, begun by archbishop Courteney, and finished by archbishop Chicheley, is ded. to St John the Baptist. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. To accommodate the rapidly increasing population two new chapels have been erected,—one near Croydon-common, one at Beaulieu-hill, Norwood. The livings of both are curacies to the vicarage, and in the gift of the vicar of Croydon. The town is pleasantly situated on the edge of Bansted-Downs, not far from one of the sources of the small, but beautiful river Wandle, which, by the union of the copious springs of Beddington, Corshalton, and Mitcham, becomes a considerable stream abounding in fine trout, and falls into the Thames at Wandsworth. It consists chiefly of one long and spacious street. The houses are, many of them, modern, some of them elegant, and, generally speaking, all of them substantial and well built. It is handsomely paved, and tolerably well lighted, and watched. An iron railroad, passing through the town from Wandsworth to Mersham near Reigate, and a branch communicating with the grand Surrey canal, affords every facility to trade, which is here very considerable, especially in corn, for the supply of the city of London. An extensive brewery has flourished here upwards of a century. This town is the principal place of election for the members for East Surrey. It is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold here a petty-session weekly. A head-constable, petty-constables, and two head-boroughs are appointed at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. The assizes for the county are held here and at Guildford alternately. The market-day is Saturday, and the annual fairs are July 6th, and October 2d, for horses, cattle, and sheep.—ADDISCOMBE HOUSE, the seat of the first Lord Liverpool, about a mile to the north-east of the town, is now a military college for educating cadets for the service of the Honourable the East India Company. There are 14 professors and masters employed in the several departments of this college, and from 100 to 150 students. Besides the original mansion, the buildings, which have been added for completing the college and adapting it to the intended purposes, have cost upwards of £40,000.—Croydon is of great antiquity, and is said to have been originally a royal residence. At the Conquest it was bestowed on Lanfranc, archbishop of Canterbury, whose successors have been lords of the manor ever since. Here was for many ages an archiepiscopal palace, where the arch-primate was occasionally at least resident from 1278 to 1757, the first and the last residents being archbishops Peckham and Hutton. Here, in 1573, Archbishop Parker entertained Queen Elizabeth and all her retinue, consisting of the principal nobility, for seven days. Having fallen into decay, it was, under the authority of an act of parliament, 1780, sold to the late Abraham Pitches for £2,500. This place was soon after fitted up as a calico printing establishment, and the gardens laid down as bleaching grounds, while Addington-park, with its noble mansion, at about three miles distance, has been purchased at £25,000, as a more suitable residence for the archbishop. Besides the churches of the establishment, there are here places of worship for the Baptists, the Society of Friends, the Independents, and the Wesleyan Methodists. There is here an establishment, formerly at Islington, for the maintaining and educating 150 boys and girls belonging to the Society of Friends. Archbishop Whitgift, in 1596, founded and endowed an hospital here, the annual funds of which have now increased to upwards of £2,000. Distance from London, 9½ m. S. Pop., in 1801, 5743; in 1831, 12,447. A. P., £47,017.

CUDDINGTON, a parish in the second division of the hundred of Cuthorne, co. of Surrey. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester, rated at £7 12s. 3½d. The church, which was pulled down by Henry VIII. to make room for his palace of Nonsuch, was ded. to St. Mary. Of the royal palace of Nonsuch, Camden says, "It was erected by King Henry VIII., in a very wholesome air called before Cuddington, and designed by him for his pleasure and diversion. 'Tis so magnificent and withal so neat as even to arrive at the highest pitch of ostentation, and one would think that the whole art of architecture were crowded into this single work. So many images to the life are there upon the sides of it, so many wonders of an accomplished workmanship as may even vie with the remains of Roman antiquity, so that it may lay a just claim to the name and is able to support it; Nonsuch being in Latin Nulla ejusmodi, or as Leland expresses it in verse,

'Hunc quia non hateant similem, laudare Britannia, Sæpe solent, Nullique parem cognomine dicunt.'

Beyond the rest the English this extol,
And Nonsuch do by eminence call.

And the house too is so surrounded with parks full of deer, delicate orchards and gardens, groves adorned with arbours, little garden-beds, and walks shaded with trees, that pleasure and wholesomeness seem to have made choice of this place wherein to live together." Britannia, p. 158. This was among the last undertakings of the brutal Henry, and he did not live to finish it. His successor Mary, to save further expense, threatened to pull it down, but at last exchanged it for other possessions with Henry, earl of Arundel, who completed it, leaving it at his death to Baron Lumley, from whom it returned again to the crown. Evelyn, in his additions to Camden, thus illustrates the foregoing description. "Not far from whence is Nonsuch, so much magnified by our author for its curious structure, but now there's nothing of all this to be seen, scarce one stone being left upon another, which havoc is owing to the late civil wars."—Distance from Ewell, 1 m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 92; in 1831, 138.

CUDHAM, a parish in the hundred of Ruxley, co. of Kent. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Rochester, rated at £13 2s. 2d. Church ded. to St. Peter and St. Paul. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Distance from Bromley, 7¼ m. S.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 514; in 1831, 660. A. P., £4,508.

CUMBERLAND,

A maritime county lying on the N.W. extremity of the kingdom of England. On the N. and N.W. it is bounded by Scotland, from which it is separated by the Solway Frith, the Sark, the Esk, the Liddel, and Kershope-Burn. On the E. it is bounded by Northumberland and a small part of Durham; on the S.E. by Westmoreland and Lancaster, from the former of which it is separated by the Tees, the Eden, and the Eamont and Ullswater, and from the latter by the Duddon. On the W. it is bounded by the Irish sea. It lies between $54^{\circ} 6'$ and $55^{\circ} 7'$ N. lat., and $2^{\circ} 13'$ and $3^{\circ} 30'$ W. long. Its extreme length from Kershope-Burn on the N.E. to Millom point on the S.W., is about 72 miles, and its extreme breadth from Allonby on the Solway to Nent-head on the borders of Northumberland, from 38 to 40 miles. It contains, according to the most accurate calculations, 1478 square miles, or 945,920 statute acres, two-thirds of which are supposed to be inclosed and cultivated. Of the remaining third part, which includes 8000 acres of lakes and rivers, the greater part, though it may be considerably improved for pasturage, will, in all probability, for ever defy the powers of cultivation. Pop., in 1801, 117,230; in 1821, 156,124; and in 1831, 171,700. A. P., £705,446.

The county of Cumberland—with the exception of Allerdale ward above Darwent, which is in the deanery of Copeland, archdeaconry of Richmond, and diocese of Chester—is in the archdeaconry and diocese of Carlisle, and in the province of York. It contains 104 parishes, which are divided into five districts or wards, viz., Allerdale above Darwent, comprehending the whole tract from that river to the southern extremity of the county,—Allerdale below Darwent, comprising a considerable district on the north of that river,—Cumberland ward lying to the north-east of the former, and including the town of Carlisle,—Leath ward on the east of the county, including Penrith,—and Eskdale ward on the north-east deriving its name from the Esk.—It has one city, Carlisle; two boroughs, Whitehaven and Cockermouth; with 14 market towns, returns four members to parliament, two for the eastern, and two for the western division of the county. The principal place of election for the former is Carlisle; for the latter Cockermouth. It is in the northern circuit, the assizes being held in Carlisle, where stands the county gaol. The quarter-sessions for the spring and summer are also held there,—for autumn at Penrith,—and for the Epiphany at Cockermouth.

Surface, &c.—The surface of this county is considerably diversified, but its general aspect is that of bleak and barren sterility. The eastern division of it Camden has aptly described as “a lean, hungry, and desolate sort of country,” it being, though mountainous, uniform and devoid of beauty. On the south the mountains are broken and rugged, cut through by clear and rapid torrents, interspersed with lakes, and highly cultivated and richly wooded valleys, and presenting in every direction, sometimes singly, but oftener in combination, forms of beauty, grandeur, and sublimity. The most striking of these mountains—and they are familiar to every tourist, and to every reader of taste—are Seafell, Helvellyn, Skiddaw, Saddleback, Bowfell, Grassmerefell, Hardknot, Wrynose, Ilghpike, Pillar, Screes, &c., &c. At the foot of these mountains, which are often craggy and precipitous, lie the celebrated lakes of Cumberland, with the charmingly romantic vales of Borrowdale, St John, Keswick, &c., &c.

Lakes.—Of the lakes, the principal are Ullswater, which lies between Cumberland and Westmoreland; Thirlmere, or Leathswater, at the entrance to the vale of St John; Darwent-water, and Bassenthwaite, or Broad-water, connected by a small stream, in the vale of Keswick; Borrowdale, occupying the vale of that name; Buttermere, to the north-west of Borrowdale, surrounded by rugged mountains, and a little to the north, Crummock-water, and Lowes-water, the three latter being connected by a small stream, the Cocker, which, running north through the fine vale of Lorton, falls into the Darwent at Cockermouth.

Rivers.—The principal rivers are the Eden, which, rising in Westmoreland, enters Cumberland a little to the south of Edenhall, and flowing by Kirk-Oswald, Warwick-Bridge, and Carlisle, falls into the sea below Rowcliffe; and the Darwent, which rising in Borrowdale, flows through the lakes of Darwent and Bassenthwaite, and, after a sweep towards the north-west, turning south-west, meets the Cocker at Cockermouth, whence it flows by Ribton and Workington into the sea, after a course of about twenty miles.—The smaller streams are too numerous to be particularized. The most notable are the Petterell and the Caldew, which join the Eden,—the former to the north-east, and the latter to the north-west of Carlisle.—The Duddon forms an estuary at Millom point, between Cumberland and Lancaster.—The Esk has its sources on the south and on the north side of Seafell, and falls into the Irish sea by an estuary at Ravenglass.—The Jet, famous for pearl muscles, which has its source in Westwater lake, in Wasdale, to the south of Buttermere, falls into the sea nearly at the same place.—The Enn, which has its source in Innerdale-water, to the west of Buttermere, and the Calder, fall both into the Irish sea to the north of Ravenglass. Among the mountains are a number of delightful waterfalls, particularly Stocke-Gill-Force, Rydal waterfalls, and Lowdore cascade, near the south-east corner of Darwent-water, which has a fall of two hundred feet, and, in a wet season, is one of the most magnificent objects in Great Britain. All the rivers and brooks abound in fish of excellent quality, and some of them are almost peculiar to this county.

Soil and Agriculture.—The soil, like the surface, is various. In particular spots it is a strong rich loam, producing in great perfection all sorts of grain with very moderate care and preparation. In other places it is a heavy wet loam, upon a cold clay bottom, which also produces, with proper management and in certain seasons, excellent crops, but it is difficult to manage, and failures may now and then be certainly expected. In the lower districts, however, and sometimes extending far up the mountains, the prevailing soil is a light dry loam, of easy cultivation, yielding good crops of grain, and particularly adapted for green crops and artificial grasses. It also turns to good account as pasture-land, and is especially excellent for feeding sheep. In the mountainous districts, particularly those that border upon Durham and Northumberland, the predominating soil is a black peat earth, sometimes only a few inches deep, upon a bottom of sharp white sand, a kind of soil found everywhere to be unmanageable, and almost unimprovable. Wheat is grown in the north-west parts of the county, but the crops most generally are barley, oats, pease, potatoes, and turnips. A large portion of the county, especially in the south-south-east and eastern divisions, is appropriated to grazing, and excellent butter forms a principal item in the exports of the county.

Cattle, Fishery, &c.—The cattle are small, with long horns, and it does not appear that much care is taken to improve the breed. Along the coast of the Solway, the Galloway breed seems to predominate. The dairies are generally small, and the cream alone is subjected to the process of churning, the milk being made into cheese, which is of course poor, hard, and dry; but the butter is of the first quality. The sheep are a strong, hardy breed, with black legs and faces, and clothed with long hairy wool, their flesh being most delicious. The breed of swine is also excellent, and they are reared in great numbers.—Large quantities of excellent codfish are caught upon the coast, and at Allonby, Maryport, and Whitehaven, the latter especially; the herring-fishing is prosecuted to a considerable extent. On the Esk, the Darwent, and the Eden, the salmon-fishings are highly valuable, the produce being sent from Carlisle and Bowness to London. Considerable quantities of char are also taken in the lakes, and, being potted at Keswick, are sent by the same route to the metropolis.—While her soil, her rivers, and her shores are thus bountiful, even the most bleak and barren of her moors and mountains are not less so, almost all of them teeming with valuable minerals. Plumbago or blacklead is procured almost exclusively from a mine in Borrowdale. Iron, copper, cobalt, antimony, manganese, coal, gypsum, limestone, and slate, are all found here, and some of them procured in greater abundance than anywhere else. Copper was exported at one time to a large amount, considerable quantities of silver being extracted in the process of smelting and purifying, but the mines—from what cause we are not informed—seem not to be at present in operation. Lead, however, and coal, and lime-stone, are still as extensively exported as ever. The principal lead mines are those of Alston-moor, originally belonging to the estate of Darwent-water, and, upon the attainder of the earl for the share he took in the 1715, or 'Mar's year,' vested in Greenwich hospital. They are upwards of one hundred. There are also lead mines on Crossfell, [vide Kirkland,] and at Newlands. At this latter place they are said not to be profitable. The most extensive coal-works in Britain are carried on in the neighbourhood of Whitehaven and Workington, [vide St Bees and Workington,] from both of which places they are shipped in vast quantities for Ireland and the south of Scotland. Iron-works are carried on at Crowgarth, in the parish of Cleator, and at Bigrigy, in the parish of Egremont; and there are foundries at Carlisle, Dalston, and Seaton. The cotton manufacture has been established upon a large scale in Carlisle and its neighbourhood. Earthenware is manufactured at Dearham and Whitehaven; bottles at the Gims; coarse woollen cloths and blankets at Keswick, and sail-cloth upon a large scale at Cleator, Egremont, and Whitehaven, at which, and at Workington and Maryport, there are a number of yards for ship-building.

Antiquities, &c.—Religious houses were never at any period numerous in this county, nor much distinguished. The soil was too barren, the air too thin, and it lay too near the Scots to be coveted by the monks, who, generally, had the kingdom "all before them where to choose their place of rest;" and a shrewd, sagacious, ease and pleasure-loving spirit for their guide. The few that were in it will be noticed under the places where they were situated.

[Vide St Bees, Wetherall, Carlisle, Lanercost, Home-Cultram, &c., &c.] Ancient roads, both British and Roman, have been distinctly traced, the latter especially, in almost every quarter of the county. Stone circles, supposed to be druidical, are also in several places to be met with; but the most remarkable, as well as the most distinctly defined of its antiquities is, the great Roman wall, which can be accurately traced, it being, in many places, still in considerably good preservation across the whole county, from the Solway to Northumberland. A little to the north of the priory of Lanercost a part of it still remains, ten feet in height and fifteen in length. There are a very few mineral or medicinal springs in the county. That of Gilsland is the most celebrated, especially for the cure of cutaneous disorders. It contains sulphur, sea-salt, and a small quantity of a certain kind of earth. Anciently Cumberland gave the title of earl to the family of the Cliffords. Since the time of Charles I. it has been held as a dukedom by some one of the royal family. The present duke is Prince Ernest Augustus, brother to William IV.

DALTON-LE-DALE, a parish and township in the northern division of Easington ward, co.-palatine of Durham, comprising the townships of Dawdon, Cold-Hesleton, and East Morton. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Durham, rated at £6 0s. 7d. Church ded. to St Andrew. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Durham. Pop. of parish in 1801, 185; in 1831, 1305; of the township, in 1801, 40; in 1831, 73. A. P. of the parish, £2,980. A newly-constructed harbour at Dawdon accounts for the great increase of population in this parish since 1801.

DALTON-IN-FURNESS, a parish and township in the hundred of Lonsdale, north of the sands, co.-palatine of Lancaster, comprising the market-town of Dalton, the chapelry of Ireleth, and the townships of Haircoat and Yarlside. The living is a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, rated at £17 6s. 8d. Church ded. to St. Mary. Patron, the chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here. The town of Dalton is 25 m. N.W. by W. from Lancaster; and $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. by W. from Ulverston. It derives its name from its situation in the lower part of the district of Furness. It is pleasantly situated on the gradual ascent of a limestone rock, and consists principally of one street. There is a square tower here, erected in the reign of Edward III., upon the site, as is supposed, of a fort built by Agricola. This building is now used as a court-house for the liberty. The port of Dalton is large and commodious. A light-house has been erected at the southern extremity of the isle of Walney; and a canal, a mile and a half in length, capable of admitting ships of a large burden, cut from the sea up to the town. The trade is principally in malt. The iron mines, 2 m. E. of the town, produce annually many thousand tons of excellent ore. Fairs are held here on the 28th of April and 6th of June for horned cattle; and on the 23d of October for cattle, horses, and pedlery. The market is on Saturday. The vicinity of Dalton is favourable for the sports of the chase; but the Dalton hunt, established here in 1703, has been discontinued since 1789. In the year 1631 the plague visited Dalton and the isle of Walney, and carried off 500 persons in nine months.—About a mile to the south of the town are the remains of the magnificent abbey of FURNESS, founded in 1127 by Stephen, afterwards king of England, for monks of the Cistercian order. The revenue of this splendid establishment at its dissolution was £966 7s. 10d. It was demolished by Henry VIII. in 1537. The remains occupy a considerable portion of a park of 65 acres, in the sequestered vale of Beacon's-gill.—On a rocky island, adjacent to the isle of Walney, are the remains of an ancient castle, called the Peel of Fouldery, which is thought by Camden to have been erected in the reign of Edward III., by the abbots of Furness, to defend the approach to the harbour. The celebrated historical painter, George Romney, was born in this parish in 1734. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 2027; in 1831, 2697: of the town, in 1801, 643; in 1831, 759. A. P. of the parish, £4,577.

A religious house, founded here by Robert de Ferraris, second earl of Derby, in the reign of Henry I., had, at the dissolution, an annual revenue of £285 9s. 6½d. Pop., in 1801, 615; in 1831, 1170.

DARLINGSCOTT AND LONGDON, a hamlet in the parish of Tredington, eastern division of the co. of Worcester, locally in the Kingdon division of the hundred of Kingdon, co. of Warwick, 2¼ m. N.W. by W. from Shipston-upon-Stour. Pop., in 1831, 166.

DARLINGTON, a parochial chapelry in the S.E. division of Darlington ward, co. of Durham, 18½ m. S. from Durham, comprising the market-town of Darlington, and the townships of Archdeacon-Newton, Blackwell, and Cockerton. Living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Durham, returned at £133 3s. 10d. Patron, the duke of Cleveland. There are chapels here for Methodists, Baptists, Independents, and Quakers, also a Roman Catholic chapel, opened in 1827. A mechanics' institution was established here in 1825. Darlington is situated in a rich grazing district on the eastern declivity of an eminence, at the base of which flows the river Skerne, in its course to the Tees. It is built in the form of a square with streets leading therefrom in different directions. Within half a mile of the town is the main line of a railroad, from Wilton-Park colliery to Stockton, about 25 m. long. It was completed in September 1825, at the expense of £125,000, and is the joint-property of 60 shareholders. The government of the town is vested in a bailiff appointed by the bishop of Durham. Fairs are held here on the first Monday in March, Easter-Monday, Whit-Monday, Monday fortnight after Whit-Monday, November 22d, and a fortnight after for cattle, horses, and sheep. The market-day is Monday. Darlington is the place of election for the members for the south division of the county. About 1164, a mansion-house was erected here by Bishop Pudsey, in which several of his successors afterwards resided. In the reign of Edward III., a skirmish between Archibald, earl of Douglas, and a band of Englishmen took place here. Pop. of the parish, in 1801, 5457; in 1831, 9586. A. P., £23,124. Of the township of Darlington, in 1801, 4670; in 1831, 8574. A. P., £13,813.

Church ded. to the Holy Trinity. Tanner says that, "about A.D. 1355, Edward III. founded and endowed here a fine nunnery, of the order of St Augustine, which was endowed 26th Hen. VIII., with £380 9s. ob. per ann."—The town of Dartford is pleasantly situated on the river Darent, in a valley between two hills. The market-day is Saturday. A fair is held August 2d for horses and bullocks. This town is noted for having been the place where the insurrection commenced under Wat Tyler, in the 5th of Richard II.; and for the army of Richard, duke of York, having encamped on the neighbouring heath called Dartford-Brent, while Richard waited to obtain a conference with Henry VI., who then lay with his army at Blackheath. In 1648, Dartford-

Brent was the rendezvous of the parliamentary forces under General Fairfax. Pop., in 1801, 2406; in 1831, 4715. A. P., £12,595.

DARTINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Stanborough, Devonshire, 2 m. N. by W. from Totness. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter, rated at £36 4s. 4½d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, A. Champenowue, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 486; in 1831, 618. A. P., £6,755.

DARTMOOR-FOREST, an extensive forest between Chegford and Tavistock, in the parish of Lidford, co. of Devonshire. It is about 20 m. long, and 14 broad, including 100,000 acres chiefly rugged and mountainous, but abounding in mines. Its surface affords pasturage for vast flocks of sheep. The right of pasturage belongs to various interests, but the forest itself is an appendage to the duchy of Cornwall. The surface of Dartmoor is diversified by large masses of granite, which, springing up from various points, are distinguished by the name of tors, and are to be seen for many miles. The French prison, which was erected on this moor during the revolutionary war, has been transformed into an agricultural settlement for the poor. Dartmoor is 27 m. from Tavistock. Pop., in 1831, 353.

DARTMOUTH, a borough, sea-port, and market-town in the hundred of Coleridge, Devonshire, 31 m. S. by W. from Exeter, and 204 W.S.W. from London. It is divided into three parishes, viz., St Petrox, St Saviour, and Townstall, all in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter. The living of St Petrox is a perpetual curacy. Patron, the rector of Stoke-Fleming. The living of St Saviour is a perpetual curacy annexed to the vicarage of Townstall, and in the patronage of the mayor and corporation. The living of Townstall is rated at £12 15s. 4½d. The patronage belongs to the mayor and corporation. Church ded. to St Clement. Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here.—The houses in Dartmouth are built on the acclivity of an eminence, sloping gradually from the margin of the water, and ranged in streets rising above each other at different elevations. The bay, in several points of view, from which the town and the sea are excluded by projecting rocks, has the appearance of an inland lake. The harbour is capacious enough to receive 500 sail of vessels, and is remarkable for its security. In 1828 the number of vessels belonging to this port was 348. Formerly the trade with Newfoundland was carried on here to a considerable extent; but it has declined of late, and the chief exports at present are cider and barley. The coasting trade is extensive. The corporation of Dartmouth consists of a mayor, recorder, 12 masters, with a town-clerk and other officers. This borough sent two members to parliament since the 14th Edward III. up to the passing of the reform act, when it was deprived of one. The right of election was formerly vested in about 41 freemen; it is now enjoyed by about 422. The mayor is the returning officer. The market-day is Friday. There are no fairs of importance. John Flavel, the non-conformist divine, was the minister of a chapel here in the latter part of the 17th century, and Matthew Newcomen, by some regarded as the inventor of the steam-engine, was born here. Dartmouth gives the title of earl to the family of Legge. It takes its name from its situation on the mouth of the river Dart. It is stated by Leland to have received a charter of corporation from King John, but the first authentic document bears date Edward III., 1342. In this reign the port of Dartmouth contributed 31 ships and 757 men towards the armament fitting out against Calais. The castle is supposed to have been built in the reign of Henry VII. In the parliamentary war under Charles I., Dartmouth being considered a very important post, was warmly contested for by both parties, and surrendered in 1643, after a siege of four weeks by Prince Maurice who garrisoned it for the king; but, in 1646, it was retaken by General Fairfax. Pop., in 1801, 2398; in 1831, 4597.

DARTON, a parish and township in the lower division of the wapentake of Stainercross, W. R. of Yorkshire, 3½ m. N.W. from Barnsley. Pop., including that of the townships of Baugh and Hexborough, in 1801, 1699; in 1831, 2960. A. P., £7,775.

DARWEN (LOWER), a township in the parish of Blackburn, co.-palatine of Lancaster, 2½ m. S. by E. from Blackburn. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester, not in charge. Patron, the vicar of Blackburn. A district chapel has lately been erected here. Pop., in 1801, 1646; in 1831, 2667. A. P., £4,328.

DARWEN (OVER), a township and chapelry in the above parish, 4½ m. from Blackburn. Living, a perpetual curacy of the certified value of £9 16s. 8d. Patron, the vicar of Blackburn. Dissenters of various denominations have places of worship here. This township abounds in coal and slate, and an extensive trade is carried on in the print and bleaching works. Fairs for cattle and horses are held here on the 1st Thursday in October, and the 1st Thursday in May, and on Holy Thursday there is a pleasure fair. Pop., in 1801, 3587; in 1831, 6972. A. P., £6,629.

DARWENT, a chapelry to the parish of Hathersage, co. of Derby, 10½ m. N. by W. from Stoney-Middleton. Living, a curacy with that of All Saints, Derby. Patron, in 1829, — Denman, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 135; in 1831, 153. A. P., £628.

DARWENT (THE). See CUMBERLAND.
DASSET-AVON, or LITTLE-DASSET, a parish in the Burton-Dasset division of the hundred of Kington, co. of Warwick, 5½ m. E. by S. from Kington. Living, a rectory in the peculiar jurisdiction of the bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, rated at £13 18s. 9d. Patron, Robert Green, Esq. Church ded. to St John the Baptist. Pop., in 1801, 174; in 1831, 226. A. P., £2,523.

DASSETT-BURTON. See BURTON-DASSETT.

DATCHET, a parish in the hundred of Stoke, Bucks, 2 m. E.S.E. from Eton. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £11; returned at £85. Church ded. to St Mary. Patrons, the dean and canons of Windsor. Datchet is separated from Windsor by the river Thames. Lord Montagu has a splendid mansion in Ditton-park in this parish, and upon the banks of the river are many handsome villas. Pop., in 1801, 357; in 1831, 802. A. P., £3,709.

DATCHWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Broadwater, co. of Hertford, 3 m. N.E. by E. from Welwyn. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £14 13s. 4d. Church ded. to All Saints. Patrons, the master and fellows of Clare-hall, Cambridge. Pop., in 1801, 410; in 1831, 593. A. P., £2,224.

DAUNTSEY, or DANTSEY, a parish in the hundred of Malmesbury, Wilts, 4½ m. S.E. from Malmesbury. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £13 6s. 3d. Patron, the bishop of Salisbury. Church ded. to St James. Pop., in 1801, 357; in 1831, 561. A. P., £9,448.

DAVENHAM, or DANEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Northwich, co. of Chester, 2 m. S. from Northwich. It comprises the townships of Bostock, Davenham, Eaton, Leftwich, Moultton, Newhall, Rudheath, Shipbrook, Shurlach, Stantlornie, Wharton, and Whatecroft. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chester, rated at £23 13s. 1½d. Patron, R. W. Tomkinson, Esq. Church ded. to St Wilfred. Rudheath, in this parish, is celebrated as the scene of an action fought between the king's troops and the parliamentary forces under Sir William Brereton on the 22d February 1643. Pop., in 1801, 2891; in 1831, 4515. A. P., £19,129.

DAVENPORT, a township in the parish of Asbury, co.-palatine of Chester, 4½ m. N.W. by W. from Congleton. Pop., in 1801, 89; in 1831, 103. A. P., £1,455.

DAVENTRY, a very ancient parish and market-town having separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the hundred of Fawsley, co. of Northampton, 13 m. W. by N. from Northampton, and 72 m. N.W. from London on the road to Holyhead. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, of the certified value of £50, and is in the patronage of Christ-church, Oxford. Church ded. to the Holy Trinity. There are places of worship here for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. The town of Daventry is pleasantly situated on the summit of a hill, and consists of two principal streets intersected by several smaller ones. It derives its name from the British Dwy-avon-tre, i. e. 'town of the two Avons,' denoting its situation between two rivers of that name. It received a charter of incorporation from King John, which Elizabeth confirmed, and subsequently James I., by virtue of which charter the town is governed by a bailiff, a recorder, and town-clerk, who must be barristers-at-law, 12 burgesses, 20 common council-men, two sergeants-at-mace, and other officers. The only considerable branch of manufacture in Daventry is that of whips. There are numerous fairs, chiefly for horses and cattle. These fairs are held on the 1st Monday in January, the last Monday in February, Tuesday in Easter-week, June 6th and 7th, August 3d, the first Monday in September, October 2d, 3d, and 27th, and the last Wednesday in November. On the two next Wednesdays after Michaelmas are statute fairs for hiring servants. The market day is on Wednesday. Hugh de Leycester, the sheriff of the county, in the latter end of the Conqueror's reign, built here a priory to the honour of St Augustine. This was one of the first and largest of the monasteries dissolved by Cardinal Wolsey, its spiritualities being valued at £115 17s. 4d. per annum; and the temporalities at £120 10s. 2d. The remains of this priory are now converted into the humble dwellings of a few poor individuals. Pop., in 1801, including Drayton-Hamlet, 2582; in 1831, 3646. A. P., £10,287.

DAVIDSTOW, a parish in the hundred of Lesnewth, co. of Cornwall, 3½ m. N.E. from Camelford. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter, rated at £8. Patron, the king. Pop., in 1801, 217; in 1831, 389. A. P., £3,393.

DAVID'S (Str), or LLANFAES—part of a parish—in the county of Brecon, S.W. Living, a rectory and vicarage in the province of Canterbury and dio. of St David's, impropriate in the archd. of Brecon. The church is in the suburbs of Brecon, and the vicarage and garden are in Llanfaes; the tithes amount to £135 5s. Pop. of this division, in 1801, 193; in 1831, 155. A. P., £651.

DAVID'S (Str), a parish in the hundred of Dewsland, co. of Pembroke, South Wales, 16 m. W.N.W. from Haverford-west and 273 from London. Living, a perpetual curacy in the patronage of the precentor and chapter of St David's. This parish comprises the hamlets of Bychan, Gwylog-y-Wlad, Mawr, and Y-deo. It was to this place that St David transferred the metropolitan see of South Wales from Caerleon, in the time of Arthur, king of Britain in 519; but now it is suffragan to Canterbury. The situation of this place is so remote that Henry VIII. is said to have contemplated removing the see to Carmarthen, but changed his intention upon coming to the knowledge that his grandfather, the earl of Richmond, was interred here. The cathedral and episcopal palace—of which nothing remains but the ruins—appear to have been most magnificent edifices. A collegiate chantry was founded by John of Gaunt, and Blanche his wife. Bishop Vaughan's chapel is but little impaired, and is a fine specimen of the florid pointed style. In the cathedral is shown the monument of Giraldus Cambrensis, and those of Bishops Anselm, Jorwerth, Morgan and Gower. Chancellor Shadling is entombed beneath a monument bearing date 1539, and lying in the porch is a figure to the memory of Treasurer John Lewis, who died in 1541. In the centre of the choir is an altar-tomb erected in honour of Edmund Tudor, on the north side of which is the shrine of St David. The bishop of this diocese possessed palaces and manor-houses in Cardiganshire, Pembroke-shire, and in Brecknockshire; but these were plundered and alienated by Bishop Barrow and the learned Richard Davis. The present diocesan residence is at Abergwilly in Carmarthenshire. St David's has a market on Wednesday, and fairs are held August 9th and December 11th. The population of the parish with the four hamlets which it includes, in 1801, was 1803; in 1831, 2388. A. P., £5,274.

DAVINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Feversham, lath of Scray, co. of Kent, 2 m. N.W. from Feversham. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury, of the certified value of £20. Patron, in 1829, T. Bennett, Esq. Church ded. to St Mary Magdalene. Here was a Benedictine nunnery founded, A.D. 1153. Pop., in 1801, 146; in 1831, 157. A. P., £1,027.

DAWDON, or DALDEN. See DALTON-LE-DALE.

DAWLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Harlington, co. of Middlesex, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. from Hounslow.

DAWLEY-MAGNA, a parish in the Wellington division, south part of the hundred of Bradford, co. of Salop, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. by S. from Shifnal. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry. Church ded. to St Leonard. Patrons, in 1829, J. Oakley, Esq. and others. There are extensive coal, iron, and lime works in this parish. Pop., including Dawley-Parva and Malins, in 1801, 3869; in 1831, 6877. A. P., £11,378.

DAWLISH, or DAULISH, a parish in the hundred of Exminster, co. of Devon, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.N.E. from East Teignmouth. Living, a vicarage, with the curacy of East Teignmouth annexed to it, rated at £25 5s., in the patronage and peculiar jurisdiction of the dean and chapter of Exeter. The church, which is ded. to St Gregory, was rebuilt in 1824, and is a fine specimen of modern English architecture; it contains several handsome monuments. The Independents and Methodists have places of worship here. The town is beautifully situated in a valley open to the sea on one side, and on the other sheltered by richly cultivated rising grounds; the beauty of its environs and the mildness and salubrity of its air, make it a desirable resort for invalids, and it is now becoming fashionable as a watering-place. Several mines of cobalt have been discovered in the vicinity. A great quantity of potatoes is exported from this place to Newfoundland. A customary market for provisions is held here, and a pleasure fair takes place on Easter-Monday. This parish includes the townships of Cockwood, and Higher and Lower Hofecomb, and the hamlets of East Town, Middlewood, Shattern, Westwood, and Lithewell. Pop., in 1801, 1424; in 1831, 3151. A. P., £9,990.

DAY (St), a hamlet in the parish of Redruth, co. of Cornwall, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. E. by N. from Redruth. Here was once a chapel called Trinitye, which is said to have been the resort of pilgrims, and so much frequented by them that the country people used to bring provisions to the place for sale, and by degrees it grew to a kind of market.

DAYLESFORD, a parish in the upper division of the hundred of Oswaldslow, co. of Worcester, 4 m. E. by S. from Stow-on-the-Wold. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, rated at £7. Patron, in 1829, W. Hastings, Esq. Church ded. to St Peter. This was the birth-place of Warren Hastings. Pop., in 1801, 94; in 1831, 88. A. P., £745.

DEAL, a parish, market-town, and seaport in the hundreds of Cornilo and Bowsborough, co. of Kent, but having separate jurisdiction as a member of the cinque port of Sandwich. It is 18 m. S.E. from Canterbury, and 72 E. by S. from London. Living, a rectory and peculiar of the see of Canterbury, rated at £19 10s., and in the patronage of the archbishop. Church ded. to St Leonard, is in Upper Deal, about a mile from the sea. In the middle of the town there is a chapel-of-ease, ded. to St George the martyr. The Baptists, and some other dissenting bodies have places of worship here. There is here a good national school.—The origin of this town is not clearly known. It has been considered as the place of Julius Caesar's landing when he invaded the island, 55 B.C. but this is doubtful; Mennius says, "Caesar fought at Dola," which Camden supposes to mean Deal; however, there are no authentic records of a town existing here until centuries after the Romans quitted Britain. Perkin Warbeck, who personated the duke of York in 1495, attempted to land at Deal, but being repulsed by his enemies returned to Flanders, and in 1497 landed on the coast of Cornwall. Frequent disputes occurred with the municipal authorities, while Deal was in dependence on Sandwich, until, in 1699, the inhabitants of Deal obtained a charter, constituting the town a separate borough, under a mayor, 12 jurats, and 24 common council-men, with a town-clerk and recorder. A court of requests was established here for recovering debts under 40s. The parish of Deal has been annexed to Sandwich by 2^o William IV. c. 45. s. 6. Deal has no harbour, but the ample roadstead called the Downs, between it and the Goodwin sands, furnishes a most convenient anchorage for shipping, and is for this reason of great importance to the country. Henry VIII built Walmer-castle on the south side of the town, surrounding it by a ditch with a draw-bridge. The batteries and strong towers constructed during the late war, completely defend the town which consists of three long streets running parallel with each other along the beach. Here is a custom-house, a naval storehouse, and naval and military hospitals, the latter in Walmer parish. Boat-building and sail-making form the chief occupation of the population of Deal. The market is on Tuesday and Saturday, and fairs for cattle and pedlery are held on the 6th of April, and 12th of October. The coast extending from Deal to Dover is very rocky and precipitous. The celebrated Mrs Elizabeth Carter was born here in 1717, also the distinguished antiquary William Boys, in 1735. Pop., in 1801, 5420; in 1831, 7268. A. P., £14,066.

DEAN, a parish in the ward of Allerdale, Cumberland, comprising the townships of Branthwaite, Dean, and Ullock, with Pardsey and Dean-Scales, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. from Cockermouth. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, rated at £19 3s. 1½d. Church ded. to St Oswald. In 1829, the Rev. H. Hill was patron. There is a free grammar school here. Pop., in 1801, 678; in 1831, 866. A. P., £6,782.

DEAN, an extensive parish in the hundred of Salford, co.-palatine of Lancaster, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W.W. from Great Bolton. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chester, rated at £4, returned at £105 6s. 1d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, the lord-chancellor. In this parish are some extensive coal-mines, and several establishments in the various branches of cotton manufacture. It comprises the chapelries of Farnworth, Little Hilton, Horwick, and West-Houghton, with the townships of Heaton, Middle Hilton, Over Hilton, Halliwell, Kearsley, and Rumworth, the united population of which in 1801, was 12,546; in 1831, 22,994. A. P., £33,420.

DEAN, a hamlet in the parish of Spelsbury, co. of Oxford, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. by S. from Chipping-Norton.

DEAN, a parish in the Overton hundred, Kingsclere division of the co. of Southampton, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. by S. from Basingstoke. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester, rated at £10 8s. 1½d. Patron, in 1829, Caleb Smith, Esq. Church ded. to All Saints. This parish is within the jurisdiction of the eheyney-court held every Thursday at Westminster, for the recovery of debts to any amount. Pop., in 1801, 137; in 1831, 163. A. P., £1,427.

DEAN (THE), a river in Nottingham and Leicester, falling into the Trent at Newark.

DEAN (EAST), a parish in the hundred of Thorngate, Andover division of the county of Southampton, $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. by W. from Romsey. Living, a curacy, not in charge, annexed to the rectory of Mottisfont. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. O. D. St John. Pop., in 1801, 146; in 1831, 173. A. P., £1,079.

DEAN (EAST), a parish in the hundred of West Bourne and Singleton, rape of Chichester, co. of Sussex, 6 m. S. by E. from Martland. Living, a discharged vicarage with the rectory of Singleton, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Chichester, rated at £5 4s. 4½d. Within 1 m. of the above parish is that of DEAN WEST. Living, a rectory, rated at £14 15s. 5d. Their united population, in 1801, was 815; in 1831, 1032. A. P., £4,709.

DEAN (EAST), a parish in the hundred of Willington, rape of Pevsey, county of Sussex, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.S.W. from Eastbourne. Living, a vicarage, united to the vicarage of Friston, in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester, rated at £8. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Chichester. Pop., in 1801, 284; in 1831, 330. A. P., £1,841.

DEAN-FOREST, an extra-parochial liberty in the hundred of St Briavell's, co. of Gloucester, 5 m. S.W. by W. from Newnham. It comprehends about 30,000 acres of land, and includes six extra-parochial districts, viz. Denby-Walk, Herbert's-Walk, Little Dean-Walk, Speech-House-Walk, York-Walk, and Worcester-Walk. Until the reign of Henry II. the only houses in the forest were the six lodges for the keepers of these walks. The livings are two curacies in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, not in charge. The chapels are ded. to the Holy Trinity and St Paul. Patrons, the trustees. The earth in this part abounds in coal and iron mines. A sixth part of their produce goes to the king. The privilege of sinking mines, free liberty of pasture, access to the woods and timber, with an exemption from rates and taxes, have induced many persons to reside here. The free miners and colliers claim to be supplied with wood and timber, and to be permitted to dig for coal and ore. The dock-yards obtain great quantities of oak and beech from this forest. Charles I. made over all the coppices and waste soil of the forest, except the Lea-Bailly, with all mines and quarries, to Sir John Wynthour, for £10,600, and a fee-farm rent of £1950 12s. 8d. for ever, but in the civil war the enclosures were thrown open, and the whole reforested. The grant was renewed by Charles II. to the same person with the exception of the timber fit for naval purposes. It is said that the commander of the Spanish armada had directions, if he failed in subduing the nation and making good the conquest, to destroy every tree in the forest of Dean. The government of this district is vested in a lord warden, who is constable of St Briavell's, 6 deputy-wardens, 7 woodwards, a conservator, a chief forester in fee, and bow-bearer, which united offices are in right of inheritance held by the Wyndham family without salary, but having a claim to the left shoulder of all buccas and does killed within the forest. Besides these officers there are eight foresters in fee, a gaviller and a steward of the swainmote; they hold a court of attachment every forty days; a court of swainmote three times in the year; and once in three years they have a court called the justice seat. These courts are holden at 'Speech-house,' or King's-lodge, in the centre of the forest. New roads have been opened in several directions through the forest, which is likewise intersected by railways leading to the Severn and the Wye. Pop., in 1801, 2325; in 1831, 7014.

DEAN (LITTLE), a parish in the hundred of St Briavell's, co. of Gloucester, 2 m. N.W. by N. from Newnham. Living, with that of Newnham, is a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, valued at £18 19s. 9d. The village is situated on the verge of Dean forest, and abounds in mines of coal and iron.

The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of nails. There was formerly a market here. Fairs are held on Whit-Monday, and on the 26th of November for pedlery. Pop., in 1801, 541; in 1831, 617. A. P., £1,120.

DEAN-MITCHELL, a parish and market-town in the same hundred, 11 m. W. from Gloucester. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Hereford and dio. of Gloucester, rated at £10 16s.; returned at £130. Patron, in 1829, M. Colchester, Esq. Church ded. to St Michael, seems to have been built at different periods. The origin of this place is said to be anterior to the Conquest. The market-day is on Monday. Fairs are held on Easter Monday and October 10th, for cattle, horses, and sheep. Pop., in 1801, 563; in 1831, 601. A. P., £1,229.

DEEPING (WEST), a parish in the wapentake of Ness, co. of Lincoln, 1½ m. W.S.W. from Market-Deeping. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £9 17s. 11d. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Church ded. to St Michael. Pop., in 1801, 216; in 1831, 301. A. P., £1,535.

DEERHURST, a hundred in the eastern division of Gloucestershire, containing 11 parishes, and, in 1831, a pop. of 4045.

DEERHURST, a parish in the lower division of the above hundred, 2 m. S.W. from Tewkesbury. Living, a perpetual curacy, and a peculiar in the dio. of Gloucester, of the certified value of £6 13s. 4d. Church ded. to the Holy Trinity. Tanner says—"Doddo, the duke, or chief nobleman of Mercia, one of the founders of Tewkesbury, who became himself a monk at Pershore, is said to have built a monastery here." Tewkesbury abbey held it as a cell till the dissolution; and, as parcel of Tewkesbury, it was granted, 34th Hen. VIII., to William Trockmorton. Deerhurst confers the title of viscount on the earl of Coventry. Pop., in 1801, including the hamlets of Apperley with Whitefield, and Deerhurst-Walton, 646; in 1831, 869. A. P., £6,256.

DEFFORD, a chapelry in St Andrew's parish, co. of Worcester, 3 m. S.W. from Pershore. Living, a curacy subject to the vicarage of Pershore, and rated at £2 13s. 4d., and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Westminster. Pop., in 1801, 284; in 1831, 383. A. P., £1,906.

DEFYNOCK, or DEVYNOK, a parish in the hundred of Defynock, co. of Brecon, S.W. Living, a vicarage in the dio. of Gloucester, rated at £14 14s. 4^d. The petty sessions for the hundred are held at the village. The 'Great Forest of Defynock' is a space of about 20,000 acres, on which the tenants of the manor enjoy the privilege of pasturing their cattle at a small charge.

DEIGHTON, a chapelry in the parish of North-Allerton, N. R. of York, 5¹/₂ m. N. by E. from North-Allerton. Living, a curacy not in charge, and exempt from jurisdiction. It is in the gift of the patron of North-Allerton vicarage. Pop., in 1801, 146; in 1831, 146. A. P., £1,851.

DEIGHTON, a township in the parish of Eserick, E. R. of York, 5¹/₂ m. S. by E. from York. Pop., in 1801, 172; in 1831, 179. A. P., £2,167.

DEIGHTON-KIRK, or KIRK-DEIGHTON, a parish in the upper division of the wapentake of Claro, W. R. of Yorkshire, including the townships of Kirk-Deighton and North Deighton. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of York, rated at £15 11s. 10^d. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. Dr Geldart. Church ded. to All Saints.—In the neighbourhood of North Deighton there is a tumulus of considerable magnitude, supposed to contain the bones of Danish soldiers slain in battle; its circumference is nearly 500 feet, and its height 70 feet. The united populations of this parish and its townships amounted, in 1801, to 423; and, in 1831, to 506. A. P., £4,520.

DELAMERE, a parish in the hundred of Eddisbury, co.-palatine of Chester, 9 m. N.E. from Chester, comprising the townships of Delamere, Eddisbury, Oakmere, and Kingswood. Living, a rectory not in charge in the archd. and dio. of Chester. Here is also a chapel, the living of which is a curacy not in charge. Both are in the patronage of the crown. This parish—which includes the royal forest of Delamere—was not formed till 1812, when the forest was enclosed. Formerly it was nothing more than an extensive tract of barren land. Since that period a great part of the forest has been cultivated, and now presents to the view a variety of well-wooded hills, and rich valleys yielding abundance of pasturage. The meres supply great quantities of fish and waterfowl.—On a very high hill stood the Saxon fortress Finborrow, and near to it a city said to have been founded by Ethelfleda, daughter of Alfred the Great; the only vestige remaining is a house called the chamber in the forest, occupied by the chief forester; around it are some neatly built lodges for the keepers of the walks. When this parish was formed, Thomas Cholmondeley, Esq., received the title of Baron Delamere of Vale Royal, he being proprietor at that time of the ancient possessions of the Cistercian monks, whose magnificent abbey, completed by Edward I., in 1330, had a revenue of £540 6s. 2d. In the centre of the forest is an inn where the county-magistrates hold their monthly meetings. The division sessions are annually held on the 22d of March. Pop., in 1831, 828.

DELAPE, or DE PRATIS, a township in the parish of Hardingstone, co. of Northampton, 1¹/₄ m. S.E. from Northampton. Here was an abbey for nuns of St Cluniac's order, founded in the reign of Stephen.

DEMBLEBY, a parish in the wapentake of Aveland, co. of Lincoln, 6 m. N.W. from Folkingham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £6 11s. 8d. Patronesses, in 1829, the Misses Buckworth. Pop., in 1801, 50; in 1831, 66. A. P., £1,130.

DENBIGHSHIRE,

ONE of the six divisions of North Wales, bounded on the N. by the Irish sea; E. by Flintshire, Salop, and Cheshire; on the W. by Carnarvon; and on the S. by Montgomery and Merionethshire. From Merioneth it is separated by the Bereryn mountains; and from Carnarvon by the river Conway. From Llanrwst on the Conway, to Holt on the river Dee, Denbighshire is 36 m. in length; and from St Asaph to Yobyty-Eran, 19 m. Its narrowest breadth, over the vale of Clwyd, is 9 m. Its superficial area has been calculated by some at 387,600 acres; by others at 400,000. Pop., in 1801, 60,352; in 1821, 76,511; in 1831, 83,167. A. P., £221,783. There are 57 parishes in Denbighshire. It is partly in the diocese of St Asaph, and partly in that of Bangor, and in the province of Canterbury. It returns two members to parliament who are polled at Denbigh, Wrexham, Llanrwst, Llangollen, and Ruthin. Denbigh is divided into six hundreds, viz. Bromfield, Chirk, Isaled, Isdulas, Ruthin, and Yale. The chief towns are the boroughs of Denbigh and Ruthin, and the market-towns of Wrexham, Llanrwst, Abergelly, Ruabon, Llangollen, and Chirk.

Rivers, Mountains, &c.—The principal rivers of this county are the Conway, flowing through the vale of the same name, [see Art. The Conway], the Aled, Alwen, Elwy, Alen, Dee, Clwyd and Ceiriog, the latter of which forms a boundary between England and Wales.—The lakes are neither so numerous nor extensive as those of the other counties in Wales; the largest are Llyn-Alwen and Llyn-Elwy.—The eastern part of the county is inclosed by a range of hills, commencing near St Asaph's. The loftiest of these is Moel Famau, elevated 1845 feet above the level of the sea. A second range incloses the county on the S.W., commencing at the sea, and extending as far as the Merionethshire hills to the S. of Moelwynne-Mawr. The loftiest summit of this range is Modwl-Erthin, being 1660 feet.

Face of the Country, &c.—Denbighshire possesses a great variety in the elevation and quality of its surface and soil. Towards the N. it has the appearance of an extensive plain. The vales of Clwyd, Llangollen, and Valle Crucis, are all very extensive and very beautiful. There is not much timber in this county. The arable land has been computed at 150,000 acres, and there are upwards of 200,000 acres of pasturage. The agricultural produce consists of wheat of the finest quality, barley, and oats. Black cattle are reared on the hilly pastures. In the S.E. extremity of the county there is very rich meadow-land. Immense quantities of peat or moss are procured in the mountainous districts.

Roads, Canals, &c.—The great Holyhead road passes through Denbigh. The Ellesmere canal, commencing near Llangollen, where it is fed by the Dee, crosses that river by the aqueduct of Pont-y-Sycille, and is continued over the river Ceiriog, at Chirk, by means of a stone aqueduct. By these two modes of conveyance, trade has been greatly increased. Wool forms a considerable part of the manufactures of this county. Its mineral productions are very valuable; at Ruabon there is a cannon foundry and some iron forges. Coals and slate of excellent quality abound at Chirk. Limestone and ironstone are found in great quantities at Ruabon, and lead ore of the purest kind is raised in the vale of Llanrwst.

DENBIGH, a parish, borough, and market-town in the county of Denbigh, 205 m. W. by N. from London. Living, a rectory and vicarage with the chapel of St Hilary, in the archd. and dio. of St Asaph, rated at £23 17s. 3½d. Patron, the Hon. F. West. The church ded. to St Marcellus, is properly the parish church; but, being a full mile from the bottom of the vale of Clwyd, the service has been discontinued at this church, and is now performed in St Hilary's chapel for the convenience of the parishioners. The town of Denbigh consists of one long street from which several smaller streets diverge. It is principally inhabited by tanners, glovers, and shoemakers; but is not a place of much trade. The free school is well endowed, and its scholars enjoy several exhibitions at Oxford. By a charter of Charles II., this town is governed by an alderman, 2 bailiffs, a recorder, and 2 coroners, and 25 burgesses. In conjunction with Ruthin, Holt, and Wrexham, it sends one member to parliament. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the Friday seven-night before Easter; May 14th; July 19th; September 25th; and the second Wednesday after November 1st.—Denbigh was, at a very early period, a place of great military importance. David, brother of the last Howellyn, made it his place of rendezvous when he summoned the Welsh chieftains to form a coalition against the English. After the defeat of this unhappy prince, the place was granted to Lacy, earl of Lincoln, who built the castle and enclosed the town with a strong wall. Thomas of Lancaster marrying the daughter and heiress of Lacy, succeeded to the castle and lordship; but, upon his attainder, they were bestowed upon Hugh de Spencer, favourite of Edward II., and, upon his execution, reverted to the crown. Edward III. granted them to the Mortimer family, and, again reverting to the crown, Elizabeth bestowed them on her favourite, Dudley, earl of Leicester. In 1646, this castle was valiantly defended by William Salisbury in behalf of his royal master, but was finally surrendered to the parliamentary army. Upon the Restoration, it was totally demolished. The ruins of this venerable structure are very extensive; the prospect from them is beautiful and delightful. Near the chief entrance of the castle are the ruins of the first place of worship which was begun to be erected in Great Britain for the performance of the reformed religion. The triennial meeting of the Welsh bards, called the Eisteddfod, is occasionally held in this town. A Carmelite priory was established here about the year 1289, by J. Salisbury of Llewenni. Pop., in 1801, 2391; in 1831, 3786. A. P., £6,859.

DEPTFORD,

A large and opulent town on the banks of the Thames, at the mouth of the small river Ravensbourne, in the hundred of Blackheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. of Kent, 5 m. E. from London. Pop., in 1801, 17,548; in 1831, 19,795. A. P., £37,450.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—In 1730 this place was divided into the two parishes of St Nicholas and St Paul, both in the archd. and dio. of Rochester. The living of St Nicholas is a vicarage, rated at £12 17s. 3½d. The living of St Paul is a rectory, not in charge. Both these presentations belong to Mrs Mary Drake, and Mrs Ann Tyrwhitt Drake. A small part of the parish of St Paul's lies in the co. of Surrey. Here are several dissenting places of worship. There are several good schools.

General Description.—The town of Deptford is very irregularly built, but the houses in the upper part of the town are in general neat. The principal edifices are the two churches and the naval buildings. It is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who sit daily and hold a petty-session for the division every Saturday. A Mechanics' institution, a Dispensary, and a Saving bank have been established here. The parish workhouse now stands on the site of Sayes court, so named from its having belonged, in the 14th and 15th centuries, to the family of Sayes, and once the residence of J. Evelyn, the author of 'Sylva.' Earthenware is manufactured at Deptford to a great extent. There are also various chemical manufactures.

Docks.—The town of Deptford was not of any importance till the time of Henry VIII., who established a dock-yard here, and incorporated the society of Trinity-house, whose business is to examine the mathematical students of Christ's Hospital, and the masters in the navy, to settle the rates of pilotage, erect light-houses, &c. The chief support and consequence of Deptford is from its dock-yards, where some of the largest ships in the navy have been built. The royal dock-yard—which incloses about 31 acres—has three slips for building second and third rate ships, a double and single wet-dock, a basin, two mast-ponds, and nearly 20 forges for the manufacture of iron. Here are also various workshops and houses for the officers, the whole establishment superintended by the Navy Board. To the north of the king's yard is the victualling office, built in 1745, to which frequent additions of store-houses have been made. Near this office is Deadman's dock-yard, belonging to the Evelyn family, and there are two other private docks in the parish of St Nicholas.

DEPTFORD, a tything in the parish of Wily, co. of Herts, 8 m. N.W. from Wilton.

DEPTLING. See DETLING.

DEPWADE, a hundred on the S.W. side of the co. of Norfolk, between the hundreds of Shropham and Humbleyard, comprising 21 parishes. Pop., in 1831, 10,031.

DERBYSHIRE,

A midland county of England, bounded on the N. by Yorkshire; on the E. by Leicester and Nottingham; on the W. by Stafford and Cheshire; and on the S. by Leicester and Warwick. Its length from N.N.W. to S.S.E. is 56 m.; its breadth from E. to S.W. 33 m. The circumference of this county is about 204 miles; in area 622,080 acres. Derbyshire forms an archdeaconry in the diocese of Lichfield and Coventry and province of Canterbury, comprising the deaneries of Ashbourne, High Peak, Chesterfield, Derby, Castillee, and Repton, and containing 137 parishes, of which, 52 are rectories, 54 vicarages, and 31 perpetual curacies. There are also 60 dependent chapels within the boundaries of the county, and 182 dissenting places of worship.—The civil divisions of Derby, are: 6 hundreds, 1 borough, and 11 market-towns. The hundreds are: Appletree, High-Peak, Morleston and Litchurch, Repton and Gresley, Scarsdale and Wirksworth. The market-towns: Alfreton, Ashbourn, Bakewell, Bolsover, Belper, Chapel-in-the-Frith, Chesterfield, Dronfield, Tideswell, Winstler, and Wirksworth. Four members are returned for the shire; viz. two for the northern and two for the southern division. Those for the northern division are elected at Bakewell; those for the southern at Derby. There are 54 acting magistrates. Part of the county is in the jurisdiction of the duchy of Lancaster court, held at Tutbury; many parishes in the hundreds of High Peak, Scarsdale and Wirksworth, are within the jurisdiction of the Peveral court, held at Lenton in Lancashire, both these courts are for the recovery of small debts, determining assaults, &c. The barmote-courts for regulating the business relative to the working of the mines, &c., are held at Monyash in the Peak, and at Wirksworth. Pop., in 1801, 161,142; in 1831, 326,900. A. P., £887,659.

Physical Features.—Derbyshire is divided by the Darwent into the eastern and western districts. The surface of the country is almost level towards the south and east, where the soil is very rich and well-adapted for grain, particularly barley; northward, the hills begin gradually to rise. Among the highest points in Derbyshire, are: Kindu-Scout, 1000 feet above the level of Buxton; Holme-Moss, 1857 feet; Axedge, 1752 feet, 3 m. S.W. of Buxton; and Lord's Sent near Castleton, 1752 feet. Some of the valleys in this tract are very beautiful, but the most picturesque and romantic scenery is afforded in the remarkable diversity of dales; in the limestone district the general characteristics of which are very precipitous rocks, with mountain streams and rivulets winding through the lower parts. Matlock-dale on the Derwent, and Monsall-dale on the Wye, are the most celebrated. The banks of the Trent present a range of low well-cultivated meadows. Extending northward is the great East moor, part of which lies uncultivated; and in that part of the Peak bordering upon Yorkshire are extensive sheep walks called the Woodlands, without any fences to separate the parishes, manors, or counties.

Rivers and Canals.—The principal river in Derbyshire is the Derwent, which rises on the moors, at the northern extremity of the county, flows southward about 46 m. and falls into the Trent on the borders of Leicestershire; the rivers of less note are the Dove, the Wye, the Ervash, and the Rother.—Among the numerous canals, the most important is the Grand Trunk canal, completed in 1777; it passes through the county from Burton and forms a conspicuous part of the great communication between Liverpool, Hull, Bristol, and London. The Chesterfield canal, completed in 1776, is cut from that place to Stockwith near Gainsborough, where it enters the Trent. The Langley Bridge, or Errewash canal, navigable from Langley to the Trent. The Peak-Forest, proceeding from the Ashton-under-Lyne canal to the northern parts of Derbyshire, was finished in 1800. Cromford canal begins at Cromford, and joins the Errewash at Langley. The Ashby-de-le-Zouch canal was completed in 1799; the Derby in 1794.—The great road from London to Manchester passes through Derby and enters Staffordshire at Hanger-bridge. Another turnpike road to Manchester goes from Ashbourn by way of Buxton, and a third to Manchester passes from Derby through Matlock.

Climate, Soil, &c.—The northern parts of this county, from their great elevation, are much colder than the southern. It is not uncommon to see uncut oats here in November. The southern part is more frequently visited by rains than the other central counties of England. The winters are in general very severe. The soil may be generally characterised as thin and poor. The most common in the southern parts is a reddish clay or marl. Tillage chiefly prevails on the eastern side. An uncommon species of culture is that of chamomile, to which about 200 acres are devoted in this county.

The primary object of the Derbyshire farmer is cheese-making, of which upwards of 2000 tons are annually sent to London.

Mineralogy.—The whole of the rocks in this county are of the classes alluvial and secondary. The general dip of the rock-formation is S. E. Among the most abundant minerals are coal, iron, limestone, lead, crystallized carbonate of lime, fluor spar, sulphate of barytes, sulphuret and carbonate of zinc, and copper pyrites. The singular variety of carbonate of lime, called stalactite, is found here very abundantly; and elastic bitumen, a mineral pitch, is found in no part of the world but the neighbourhood of Castleton. It has been ascertained that the lead mines in Derbyshire were worked by the Romans and probably by the Britons. The mines and miners are governed by certain ancient customs and regulations; one of the most remarkable is that by which an adventurer discovering a vein of lead unoccupied in the king's field, has the right of working it on the land of any person without compensating the proprietor. This custom is still in force, but gardens, orchards, and highways are exempted. The principal coal district is from Dale-Abbey, northward through Scarsdale; the largest quarries are at Calver, Buxton, Ashover, and Crich.

Manufactures.—Derbyshire ranks fourth on the list of manufacturing counties. The manufacture of cotton, excepting that used for stockings, was first established in this county by Sir Richard Arkwright, in 1771. The number of cotton-mills here, in 1817, was 112, and in the same year there were 43 factories for weaving of calico. Cotton-spinning is chiefly carried on at Hayfield, Cromford, and Newmills, &c. The linen manufacture is not very extensive. The flax is spun at Darleydale; the weaving of it is carried on in the parishes of Belper and Turnditch, and in the parish of Melbourne lace is manufactured. Besides the cast-iron foundry at Chesterfield, there are many very extensive manufactories connected with the iron trade, in all its departments, scattered throughout this county. Hats and shoes are made here for exportation. There are several potteries; and porcelain is manufactured at Derby.

History.—The tract of country now forming the county of Derbyshire, was, during the heptarchy, included in the kingdom of Mercia. It is recorded that the Danes, when they invaded Mercia, fixed their head-quarters at Rebandune, (Repton.) Derbyshire was recovered from them, by Ethelfloda, countess of Mercia, in 918; but falling again into their possession, was retaken by King Edmund, in 942. In Prince Henry's rebellion against his father, Hen. II., Duffield castle was held against the king by Earl Ferrars. In 1264, Henry III. threatened to lay waste all the estates of the earl of Derby, who had been one of the most active in rebellion against him, but the earl diverted him from his purpose by a promise of a large sum of money, and renewing his oath of allegiance. Notwithstanding he had by these means made his peace with the king, he appeared again in arms in 1266, and assembling his forces at Duffield Frith, led them to Chesterfield, where they were put to the sword by the king's nephew, Henry, and the earl made prisoner. His life was spared, but he was deprived of his title, and his possessions given to the earl of Lancaster. The most remarkable circumstance connected with Derbyshire, from this period until the reign of Charles I., is the captivity of Mary, queen of Scots, who, being in the custody of the earl of Shrewsbury, resided much in this county, at the seat of that nobleman. In 1745, Prince Charles Edward Stuart entered with his army into Derby, but meeting with very little encouragement, and being informed of the near approach of the duke of Cumberland, he retreated northward. In June, 1817, an insurrection broke out at South Winfield, in this county, but was speedily quelled by the military, who met the insurgents proceeding to Nottingham. Twenty-two of the rioters were convicted of high-treason, three of whom suffered death, the rest were transported for life.

DERBY,

A borough and market-town, the capital of the above county, in the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch, 29 m. N.W. from Leicester, and 126 N.W. from London, on the high-road to Manchester.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—Derby is divided into five parishes:—1st, All Saints, the living a perpetual curacy.—2d, St Alkmund's, a vicarage, not in charge. The church is supposed to have been founded in the 9th century, in honour of Alkmund, son of Alured, the deposed king of Northumberland. Both these parishes are in the patronage of the mayor and corporation.—3d, St Peter, a discharged vicarage, rated at £8. Patron, the lord-chancellor.—4th, St Werburgh's, a discharged vicarage, rated at £5 12s. 8d.—5th, St Michael's, a vicarage, rated at £4 15s. These, also, are in the patronage of the lord-chancellor. They are all in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry. Besides the parish churches, there are places of worship for almost every class of Dissenters, and a Roman Catholic chapel. There is a well-endowed free school here.

General Description.—The town of Derby is pleasantly situated on the western banks of the Derwent. The principal buildings are the guildhall, the county-hall, the county-gaol, the infirmary, the ordnance depot, and the theatre. The Devonshire alma-house, founded in the reign of Elizabeth, by the countess of Shrewsbury, was rebuilt in 1777, at the expense of the duke of Devonshire. Eight men and four women are now supported in it. The town, in the time of Edw. the Confessor, was a royal borough. It was first chartered by Henry I. This charter was surrendered to Charles II., and a new one obtained, by which the government of the borough is vested in a mayor, high-steward, recorder, 9 aldermen, 14 brethren, 14 common-councilmen, a town-clerk, and other officers. It returns two members to parliament. The number of electors is about 1684. The mayor is the returning officer. Fairs are held Jan. 25th, March 21st and 22d, for cheese; Friday in Easter-week, Friday after May-day, Friday in Whitsun-week, St James', July 25th, and Friday before Old Mich., for horned cattle; Sept. 27th, 28th, 29th, for cheese. The market-day is Friday. Linacre, the founder of the college of physicians in London, was born here; also Samuel Richardson the novelist. Pop., in 1801, including the five parishes, 10,832; in 1831, 23,607. A. P., £39,430.

Silk and Porcelain Works.—Derby has long been famous for its silk-works, originally established in this county by John Lombe, who, returning from Italy, whither he had gone to obtain plans and models, the art of silk-throwing being at that time exclusively practised there, erected a mill on an island in the Derwent which he had purchased from the corporation of Derby, and procured a 14 years' patent; but dying a short time afterwards, his cousin, Sir T. Lombe, upon applying for a renewal of the patent, obtained in lieu of it £14,000, on condition of his allowing a model to be taken of the works. Since then, many other mills have been erected on improved plans. They are now all worked by steam, and employ about 300 hands. The porcelain manufactory was established here in 1750. It is thought to equal in fineness the French and Saxon. This manufactory employs about 200 hands.

DERBY-HAVEN, a small village in the parish of St Malew, Isle of Man, 2 m. E. by N. from Castletown.

DERBY-HILLS, an extra-parochial in the hundred of Repton and Gresley, co. of Derby, 9 m. S. from Derby.

DERBY (WEST), a chapelry in the parish of Walton-on-the-Hill, co. of Lancaster, $\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. from Dracot. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Chester, of the certified value of £43 2s. 8d. Chapel ded. to St Mary. Patron, the rector of Walton. Pop., in 1801, 2636; in 1831, 9613. A. P., £37,012.

DERBY (WEST), a hundred in the S. E. of Lancashire, containing 14 parishes, and locally the great town of Liverpool. Pop. with Liverpool, in 1821, 273,912.

DEREHAM (EAST), or MARKET-DEREHAM, a parish and market-town in the hundred of Mitford, co. of Norfolk, 17 m. W.N.W. from Norwich. Living, a vicarage with the curacy of Hoe, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £17 3s. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. There is also a rectory, rated at £41 3s. 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Patrons, in 1829, of the curacy, the rector of East Dereham; of the rectory, the Rev. T. H. Wollaston. The church, ded. to St Nicholas, was originally the conventual church of the monastery of St Withburga, the youngest daughter of King Anna, who founded a nunnery here about 750. Among the monuments in this church, is a tablet of white marble to the memory of Cowper the poet, who, for the last nine years of his life, resided in this place, and was buried in the church in the year 1800. Edmond Bonner was rector of this parish before his translation to the see of London. A national school, for children of both sexes, is supported by subscription. Dereham is pleasantly situated in the centre of the county, and may be reckoned the handsomest market-town in Norfolk. In the years 1581 and 1679, it suffered severely from fire. The market-day is on Friday. Fairs are held here for cattle, sheep, and toys, on the Thursday and Friday before Old Mid-summer, and on the Thursday and Friday before New Michaelmas. Pop., in 1801, 2505; in 1831, 3913. A. P., £9,184.

DEREHAM (WEST), a parish in the hundred of Clackclose, co. of Norfolk, 3 m. W.N.W. from Stoke-Ferry. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, not in charge, returned at £56 12s. 6d. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. C. L. Jenyns. Church ded. to St Andrew. Tanner says—"Hubert, A.D. 1188, then dean of York, afterward bishop of Salisbury, and at last archbishop of Canterbury, built at this, the place of his nativity, an abbey for Premonstratensian canons from Welbeck to the honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary. It was valued, 26th Hen. VIII., at £228 per ann." Pop., in 1801, 449; in 1831, 496. A. P., £3,244.

DERITEND, a chapelry in the parish of Aston and Birmingham, co. of Warwick. Living, a curacy subordinate to the vicarage of Aston, and of the certified value of £38. This chapelry is now included within the boundaries of Birmingham.

DERSINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Freebridge, co. of Norfolk, 4 m. N.N.E. from Castle-Rising. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Norwich, rated at £5 6s. 8d.; returned at £145. Patron, in 1829, D. Hoste, Esq. Church ded. to St Nicholas. Pop., in 1801, 457; in 1831, 606. A. P., £3,367.

DERWEN, a parish in the hundred of Ruthin, co. of Denbigh, North Wales, 6 m. from Ruthin. Living, a rectory in the dio. of Bangor and prov. of Canterbury, rated at £10 15s. Pop., in 1801, 443; in 1831, 522. A. P., £2,309.

DERWENT (THE), a river in the county of Durham, falling into the Tyne near Newcastle. There are some extensive iron-works on its banks.

DERWENT (THE), a river of Surrey, falling into the Thames. In Gale's edition of Nennius, it is called the Deragwent.

DERWENT (THE). See DERBYSHIRE.

DERWENT (THE), a river in Yorkshire, it rises in the N. R., and falls into the Ouse 5 m. from Selby. Antoninus's station of Derventu is on this river.

DERWENT-WATER, one of the lakes in Cumberland, formed by the river Derwent; it is 4 m. long and 1 m. broad. There are some small islands in it, one of which bears the same name. The form of this piece of water is irregular, but somewhat approaches to the oval. The two extremities of the lake afford prospects of a very opposite character. The waters are frequently agitated by what is called a bottom-wind, which raises them in high waves when there is a perfect calm around.

DESBOROUGH, a hundred in the S.W. end of the county of Buckingham containing 16 parishes; and in 1831, a population of 20,794.

DESBOROUGH, a parish in the hundred of Rothwell, co. of Northampton, 5½ m. N.W. from Kettering. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, rated at £8; returned at £113 16s. Patron, R. S. Cotton, Esq. Church ded. to St Giles. DETTER (THE), a river in Cardigan-shire, falling into the Tivy near Llandypill.

DETCHEM, a township in Belford parish, Northumberland, 2 m. N.N.W. from Belford. Pop., in 1801, 110; in 1831, 180. A. P., £2,998.

DETHWICK, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Ashover, co. of Derby, 2 m. S.E. by E. from Matloch. Living, a curacy with the rectory of Ashover, not in charge, returned at £58. Patron, the rector of Ashover. Dethwick is within the jurisdiction of Tutbury. Pop., including the hamlet of Holloway, in 1801, 509; in 1831, 675. Assessed property, £1,701.

DEUXHILL, a parish, locally situated in the hundred of Stottesden, but within the liberty of Wenlock borough, co. of Salop, 4 m. S.S.W. from Bridgenorth. Living, a discharged rectory with the rectories of Glazely and Chetton, in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford, rated at £4 12s. 3½d. Patron, in 1829, V. Vickers, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 30; in 1831, 55. A. P., £505.

DEVEREUX (Sr), a curacy to the vicarage of Woolhope, co. of Hereford, 8 m. E. by S. from Hereford.

DEVEREUX (Sr), with DIDLEY, a parish in the hundred of Webtree, co. of Hereford, 7½ m. S.W. from Hereford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, rated at £6 15s. 7½d. Patron, in 1829, Edward B. Clive, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 179; in 1831, 201. A. P., £1,083.

DEVERHILL-LONGBRIDGE, a parish in the hundred of South Damerham, co. of Wilts, 3 m. S. from Warminster. Living, a vicarage with the curacy of Deverhill, Monkton, in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £12. Patron, the marquess of Bath. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Pop., in 1801, 1228; in 1831, 1307. A. P., £3,921.

DEVERHILL-MONKTON, a parish in the hundred of Mere, co. of Wilts, 4½ m. N.E. by N. from Mere. Living, a curacy to the above vicarage. Pop., in 1801, 168; in 1831, 204. A. P., £1,174.

DEVIL'S-DITCH. See CAMBRIDGE-SHIRE.

DEVIL'S-DYKE (THE), a rising ground about 5 m. N.W. from Brighton, in which an immense chasm appears which vulgar tradition affirms was scooped out by the great author of evil, who, beholding with envy the numerous churches in the wold of Sussex, determined to form a channel and breach at this place so as to admit the sea, and inundate the whole tract. This notable plan, according to a writer in the 'Beauties of England and Wales,' was disconcerted by an old woman and a farthing candle!

DEVIL'S-PEAK. See CASTLETON.

DEVIZES, a borough and market-town in the hundred of Potterne and Cannings, co. of Wilts, 23½ m. N.W. by N. from Salisbury, and 89 m. W. by S. from London, comprising the parishes of St John the Baptist and St Mary the Virgin. The livings form a united rectory, not in charge, in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury, and in the patronage of the lord-chancellor. The church of St John contains several monuments of the families of Heathcote and Sutton. At the eastern extremity of the town is St James', a chapel-of-ense to the parish of Bishop Canning's. Here are various dissenting chapels. The town consists of several streets diverging from a spacious market-place. It is on the principal road from Bath to London; and the Avon canal passing near it, is of great utility in the conveyance of goods to the eastern and western parts of the kingdom. The chief manufactures are fine woollen, tobacco, and snuff, weaving of crape, and silk-throwing, and there are several extensive breweries. The market is on Thursday, chiefly for corn, horses, and cattle. Fairs are held on the 20th of April and 22d of October, for hops, cheese, cattle, sheep, &c. Devizes is a place of great antiquity, but its origin is uncertain; early writers give it the name of De Vies, and Divisio, from its having been divided between the king and the bishop of Salisbury, a wealthy prelate, who, in the reign of Henry I., erected a strong castle here, which fell into the hands of Stephen, and was ultimately demolished. During the parliamentary war a desperate battle was fought here, and a complete victory gained by the royalists. The first charter of incorporation was granted to the town's people by the empress Maud; it was suspended by Stephen, but renewed by Henry II., and its privileges extended and confirmed by his successors. The corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, 10 magistrates, and 24 common-councilmen. Devizes returns two members to parliament. The number of voters is about 409. The mayor is the returning officer. Pop., in 1801, 3,547; in 1831, 4562. A. P., £8,209.

DEVONPORT, formerly called Plymouth-Dock, from the foundation of the dockyard in the reign of William III., is a celebrated naval arsenal in the hundred of Roborough, co. of Devon, about 2 m. W.N.W. from Plymouth. It was fortified in the reign of Geo. II., and, having gradually advanced in its maritime and commercial importance, the inhabitants petitioned his majesty, Geo. IV., for a more distinguishing appellation than that which implied its dependence on Plymouth, and in 1824, its present name was conferred on it by royal permission. The royal docks here occupy 71 acres, which are four in number, separated from the town. The town itself is of an oblong shape; the streets are regularly built, nearly intersecting each other at right angles. It is situated on an eminence, and almost surrounded with fortifications. The government-house, which stands on this eminence, affords a fine view of the opening to the channel, and communications may be kept up by signals with the citadel where the lieutenant-governor is stationed. The port-admiral's house is a new and elegant building, and is the first of 32 telegraphic stations connected with the admiralty. In the dock-yard there is a chapel recently built by government, on the site of one erected in 1700 by contributions from the seamen and officers. Opposite the chapel are the military guard and navy pay-offices; farther on, is the joiners' shop. Facing these, are the basin and dock, constructed in the reign of William III.; and there are numerous storehouses and other buildings. The trades and manufactures are mostly those connected with ship-building and equipping of vessels. The principal quays are Mutton-Cove, North Combe, and Morice-town. On the S. is a ferry to Mount Edgecumbe, and on the N.W. there is one to Torpoint. The market-days are Thursday and Saturday; the markets are well supplied with provision. Pop. returned with Plymouth. By 3d William IV. the privilege of returning two members has been conferred on this borough, including the parish of Stoke-Dameril, and the township of Stonehouse. The number of electors is above 3000.

DEVONSHIRE,

A maritime county in the West of England, having the Bristol channel on the N.; Somerset and Dorset on the E.; the English channel on the S. and S.E.; and Cornwall on the W. Its figure is nearly rhomboidal. From N. to S. it is nearly 90 miles in length; and from E. to W. about 65; and in circumference 280. It is reckoned that there are 52 miles on the Bristol channel, and 32 on the English channel, in a direct line. In point of size Devonshire is the second county in England, being inferior only to Yorkshire. It is ascertained to contain about 1,600,000 acres.—It is divided into 33 hundreds, and subdivided into 432 parishes and tythings, besides 22 parishes which are contained within the boundaries of Exeter. There are in it 40 market-towns. It sends four members to parliament, namely, two for the northern division, which includes the whole of the several hundreds of Bampton, Black Torrington, Braunton, Crediton, Fremington, Halberton, Hartland, Hayridge, Hemyock, North Tawton and Winkleigh, Shebbear, Sherwill, South Molton, Tiverton, Witheridge, and West Budleigh; and two for the southern division, including the whole of the several hundreds of Axminster, Clyston, Colyton, Ottery St Mary, East Budleigh, Lifton, Exminster, Teignbridge, Haytor, Coleridge, Stanborough, Ermington, Plympton, Roborough, and Tavistock, and also the castle of Exeter, and the hundred of Wonford, except such parts of that hundred as are included in the limits of the city of Exeter. The principal places of election for the members for the northern division is South Molton; for the southern division, Exeter. Devonshire lies within the province of Canterbury and diocese of Exeter. It is included within the western circuit. Pop., in 1801, 343,001; in 1811, 383,308; in 1821, 439,040; and, in 1831, 494,168. A. P., £1,897,512.

General Features and Soil.—The soil and aspect of the country are extremely varied; the poorest soil is that covering the granite of the barren tract Dartmoor, which extends from Exeter to the borders of Cornwall. The best soil seems to owe its superiority to its contiguity to limestone, or free-stone rocks, which abound in the southern district. The valleys are remarkably rich, abounding in orchards, and producing the earliest grass and finest hay. There is also very rich meadow-land in the vales of Exeter and Otter. The waste lands here are reported to amount to one-fifth. Of the lands in cultivation the greatest portion is pasture-land. Corn is abundant in the neighbourhood of Hartland, Bideford, and Ilfracombe, from which places it is exported. Potatoes are produced here in great quantities, and exported from Dartmouth for the supply of the neighbouring tracts. Cider is likewise extensively made for exportation.

Climate.—The climate of Devonshire is remarkably varied, but is rather inclined to damp, owing to its situation. The myrtle flourishes on the shores of the southern coast. In North Devon, snow seldom lies for any length of time. The vale of Exeter, and the district of South Hams, are the mildest and most salubrious spots in England.

Minerals, &c.—The subterraneous productions of the soil are granite, slate, red-stone, and green-sand; veins of limestone are found here, and mines of lead, copper, manganese and gypsum.

Rivers and Canals.—Devonshire is watered by a great number of rivers, the most considerable of which are the Dart, the Avon, the Axe, the Plym, the Torridge, the Tamar, and the Taw: all navigable, and many of them abundantly stored with fish. The Dart, so called from the rapidity of its current, rises in Dartmoor, and flows past Totness; after which it spreads into the arm that forms Dartmouth haven.—The Avon and the Plym rise in Dartmoor, and flow towards the Bristol channel.—The Torridge rises on a high moor on the northern thern part of Cornwall. It becomes navigable for vessels at Biddeford; soon afterwards, being joined by the Taw, it proceeds N.W., and falls into the Bristol channel at Barnstaple bay.—The Tamar rises near the Torridge, flows southward, and becomes an arm of the sea at Plymouth sound.—The principal roads are the London road, entering between the 9th and 10th mile stone, and passing from Bridport through Axminster, Honiton, Exeter, Ashburton, South Brent, and Plympton, a course of 70 m., reaches Plymouth.—The road from London to Falmouth, branching off at Exeter, passes through Oakhampton; and another road to Exeter, which passes over Dartmoor and through Tavistock, enters Cornwall at New-bridge, 35 m. from Exeter.—The canals are the Stover, or Teigngrace from Bovey-Tracey to New Abbots, the expense of which was defrayed by J. Templeham, Esq.; a small canal extending from the sea-locks to Exeter; and one from Morvelham-quay to Tavistock.

Manufacture.—The principal manufacture is that of woollen-cloth and kersey, more than two-thirds of which is purchased by the East India Company.

History.—The Cornish Britons named this part of the island Dunan, from the inequality of its soil. The Welsh called it Deuffnynt, and the addition of the word scyre produced the Anglo-Saxon Devnascyre, which has been softened down into Devonshire. It is supposed to have been first inhabited by the Cimbri, most of whom emigrated to Ireland when a portion of the Belgic invaders settled in the county. In the time of the Romans it was a prominent part of Britannia prima, and in the Saxon period became part of Wessex. It is probable that at a very early period this district was a seat of warfare, as there are the vestiges of numerous fortifications indicating it to have been so, but the earliest military transaction on record is the defeat of the Britons, in 614, by Cynegils, king of the West Saxons. The Danes having made frequent descents on the coast, at last settled themselves in Exeter, but were besieged by Alfred and compelled to a truce. In the ensuing year they landed on the northern coast, and were defeated with the loss of their favourite standard of the raven. In 894 they attempted to besiege Exeter, but withdrew on the approach of Alfred. In 1001, they were equally unsuccessful in their attack upon that city, and pillaging the surrounding country retired with the spoil, subsequently however, gaining possession of Exeter and nearly destroying it. In 1067, Exeter stood a regular siege before it surrendered to William the Conqueror. On the accession of Rufus it was laid waste by the partizans of Robert, duke of Normandy. During the civil wars between the houses of York and Lancaster, Devonshire was much disturbed; though no battle was fought within its limits, yet the warmth of party-feeling was strongly evinced. In 1497, Perkin Warbeck besieged Exeter, but the siege being raised by the earl of Devon, Warbeck proceeded to Taunton. When the contest between Charles I. and his party commenced, the county was controlled by committees, and the majority of its inhabitants were attached to the parliament. Plymouth was fortified against the royalists; by the townspeople Exeter was garrisoned by parliament, and a cavalry body raised in the county was stationed at Tavistock. After the defeat of the parliamentarians a cessation of hostilities was agreed on, but the treaty was soon broken off, and the country again disturbed by internal dissensions. In 1644 the earl of Essex fixed his quarters at Tiverton, and having by this means secured Barnstable for the parliament, marched into Cornwall and was followed by the king. In October, Ilfracombe and Barnstable surrendered to the royal forces. In 1645 the club-men of Devon declared for the parliament. From this time the royalists experienced great reverses. In the midst of their disasters, Sir Thomas Fairfax, commander-in-chief of the parliament's army, entered Devonshire and reduced every town and fortress. Pursuing his victorious career he stormed the church and castle of Tiverton, December 26th; and on the 16th of February, attacked and totally defeated the army of Lord Hopeton at Torrington. This victory appears to have given the death-blow to the royalists' power in the west. The last garrison which held out for the king was Charles-fort at Salcombe-Regis. The latest event of national importance which took place in this county was the landing at Torbay, of the prince of Orange, in 1688, preparatory to the revolution which placed him on the throne.

DEWSBURY, a parish and market-town in the wapentake of Morley, W. R. of Yorkshire, 34 m. S.W. from York. It comprises the townships of Soothill, Clifton-cum-Heartshead, Dewsbury, and Ossett. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York, rated at £22 13s. 9d. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Church ded. to All Saints. In 1827 a grant was obtained from parliament for the erection of a church at Dewsbury-moor. It is ded. to St John. There are several dissenting chapels. A school-house was lately erected here by decree of chancery. There is also an infant school, and a school endowed with £108 per ann. The principal manufactures carried on here are woollen-cloth, carpets, and blankets. The town, from its situation, has many commercial advantages and commands an excellent inland navigation, being seated on the river Calder which with the canals afford communication with Liverpool, Manchester, and several other manufacturing towns. The market is on Wednesday. Fairs for horned cattle and sheep are held on the Wednesday before Old May-day, on New Michaelmas-day, and on the 6th of October. Dewsbury is a place of great antiquity, supposed to take its name from Dui, a deity of the Brigantines. Edwin, king of Northumbria, had a mansion here, where his queen Ethelburga, who had embraced the Christian faith, was attended by Paulinus the first archbishop of York, by whom Edwin and all his court were subsequently converted. Thus from the early preaching of Paulinus, Dewsbury became the mother-church of the west, and several parishes still acknowledge their original dependence by certain payments to the vicar of Dewsbury. DIRHAM AND HINTON, a parish in the hundred of Grumbald's-ash, co. of Gloucester, 4½ m. S. by E. from Chipping-Sodbury. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, rated at £14 12s. 6½d. Patron, in 1829, W. Raithway, Esq. Church ded. to St Peter. In the vicinity are some traces of what has been supposed to have been a Saxon camp. Near this spot the Britons and Saxons fought a most sanguinary battle, in which the Saxons were victorious. But a writer in the 39th volume of the Monthly magazine, struck with the resemblance of the spot to a Grecian stadium, conceives it might have been a circus annexed in Roman times to the city of Bath. It is a flat artificially levelled valley, skirted by hills, the sides of which next the valley only are cut into steps or terraces. On the tops of the hills are no earthworks or banks, so that this writer conceives fortifications to have been out of the question. Pop., in 1801, 437; in 1831, 516. A. P., £4,994.

Living, a rectory in the dio. of Bangor and prov. of Canterbury, rated at £13 1s. 8d. Patron, the lord-chancellor. It is situated in a wide and well-cultivated valley, on the river Avon, at the foot of the lofty Cader Idris, and almost surrounded by mountains. Five miles from the town is the cataract of Doll-y-melynlyn, which, falling from a height of 35 feet into a basin, is thence precipitated 20 feet lower. The summer assizes are held at Dolgelly; and the county gaol is at a short distance from the town. The trade consists principally in the sale of flannels, stockings, kerseymeres, and a manufacture—peculiar to this town—called webbing or white plains. This place is generally crowded with tourists, who resort hither for the purpose of ascending the Cader Idris. That 'fiery rebel,' Owen Glendwr, summoned his parliament here, when he sought alliance with Charles of France, in 1404. In the wars of Charles I. this town was fortified by 100 of his partizans, but they were dislodged by Edward Vaughan. It was the scene of much bloodshed during this struggle. Fairs are held here, May 11, July 4, Sept. 20, Oct. 9, Nov. 22, and Dec. 16. Market-days Tuesday and Saturday. Pop., including the township, in 1801, 2949; in 1831, 4087. A. P., £8,844.

DOL-GWDEN, a township in the parish of Tref-Eglwys, co. of Montgomery, South Wales. It stands on the river Tiraunon. Pop., in 1831, 219.

DOLTON, a parish in the hundred of North Tawton, co. of Devon, 6 m. N.N.E. from Hatherleigh. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter, rated at £20 16s. 8d. Patron, in 1829, J. Cleaveland, Esq. Church ded. to St Edmund.

DOLTON, a hamlet in the parish of Emborough, county of Somerset.

DOLWATH. See CAMBORE.

DOL-WYDELLAN, a parish and hamlet in the co. of Carnarvon, North Wales. Living, a curacy in the dio. of Bangor and prov. of Canterbury, not in charge, valued at £77 per ann. Patron, Lord Willoughby D'Eresby. This parish is situated at the foot of the stupendous hill, called Moel-Siabod. At a little distance are the ruins of Dolwydellan castle, in which Llewellyn the Great was born. Pop., in 1801, 492; in 1831, 601. A. P., £909.

DOMINICK (Sr), a parish in the middle division of the hundred of East, co. of Cornwall, 3 m. S.E. from Callington. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter, rated at £23 11s. 0½d. Patron, in 1829, Edward Bluett, Esq. This was the birth-place of Rous, the provost of Eton-college, and speaker of the house of parliament in Cromwell's time. Pop., in 1801, 538; in 1831, 726. A. P., £4,149.

DOMMET. See BUCKLAND-ST-MARY.

DON (THE), a river of Yorkshire, which, rising at Penistone, passes Sheffield, Rotherham, and Doncaster, and falls into the Ouse below the influx of the Aire.

DONATT'S (Sr), a parish in the hundred of Ogmere, co. of Glamorgan, South Wales, about 6 m. from Cowbridge. Living, a discharged vicarage in the dio. of St David's and prov. of Canterbury, returned at £99 15s. 3d. Patrons, the family of Drake. The church—which stands in a sequestered glen—contains many curious monuments, the most remarkable of which are those to the memory of the Stradlings, whose ancestors for a period of seven centuries were the proprietors of the ancient castle, now occupied by the Drakes. Pop., in 1801, 198; in 1831, 151. A. P., £1,141.

DONATT'S-ST-WELSH, a parish in the hundred of Cowbridge, co. of Glamorgan-shire, 2 m. N.E. from Cowbridge. Living, a chapelry to the vicarage of Llan-bleddan, not in charge, rated at £15. Patron, the dean and chapter of Gloucester. This village is more remarkable than any other in Wales for the close conformity of its inhabitants to Welsh customs and the original language. Pop., in 1801, 222; in 1831, 304. A. P., £1,557.

DONCASTER, a parish, comprising the borough and market-town of Doncaster, which has a separate jurisdiction, the townships of Sandal-Long with Wheatley, Balby with Hexthorp, and Lanthwaite with Tilts, in the N. division of the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, W. R. of the co. of York, 37 m. S. by W. from York, and 162 N.N.W. from London. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York, rated at £32 19s. 9d. Patron, the archbishop of York. The church ded. to St George, is an ancient and noble Gothic edifice, erected about the year 1071. Its tower is remarkably beautiful, but probably was not added until the reign of Henry III. Another church, called Christ's-church, remarkable for its lightness and elegance, was erected here a short time since. The Independents and other dissenting bodies have chapels here. The public charities and institutions are numerous. The town of Doncaster is pleasantly situated on the river Don, and was formerly a Roman station. It was chartered by Richard I., in whose reign it seems to have received its present appellation. The corporation consists of a mayor, 12 aldermen, 24 common-council-men, a recorder, and town-clerk. They hold quarter-sessions in the town-hall, and sessions for the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, every January. A court of requests for debts under £2, is held the first Thursday in each month, and a quarterly court of record under the charter of Hen. VIII., for recovery of any amount of debt. Doncaster is one of the polling places for the members for the west riding. About a mile from the town is a celebrated race ground, on which the St Leger stakes are run, and which has for many years been increasing in its attractions. Doncaster is not considerable for its trade or manufactures: there are two or three iron founderies, and a manufactory for twist and sacking. The principal commerce of the town arises from its being a thoroughfare on the great road from London to Edinburgh. The High-street, for length, width, and beauty, is generally allowed to be the best on the road betwixt the capitals of South and North Britain. The weekly market is for corn; and in June, July, and August, great sales of wool take place. The market-day for corn and provisions is Saturday, fairs are held February 2d, April 5th, August 5th, for cattle, horses, &c., and there is a statute fair for hiring servants on Nov. 16th. Pop., in 1801, 6122; in 1831, 11,572. A. P., £36,466.

DONHEAD-ST-ANDREW, a parish in the hundred of Dunworth, co. of Wilts, 5½ m. S.E. from Hindon. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £13 6s. 8d. Patron, in 1829, Thomas Warburton, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 607; in 1831, 804.

DONHEAD-ST-MARY, a parish in the above hundred, co. of Wilts, 5½ m. S. from Hindon. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £30 14s. 4½d., in the patronage of New-college, Oxford. Its population with that of the chapelry of Charlton, and tythings of Dognell and Haystone, was in 1831, 1520. A. P. of the two parishes, £11,614.

DONINGTON-CASTLE, a parish in the W. division of the hundred of Goscoat, co. of Leicester, 9½ m. N.E. from Ashby-de-la-Zouch. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £8 2s. 3½d. Patron, in 1829, the marquess of Hastings. Church ded. to St Edward. There is also a chapel belonging to the Independents. Castle-Donington is in the honour of Tutbury. Fairs are held here on the 18th of March, on Whit-Thursdays, and on Michaelmas day. Pop., in 1801, 1959; in 1831, 3182. A. P., £10,154.

DONINGTON-UPON-BAIN, a parish in the wapentake of Gartree, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln, 6½ m. S.W. by W. from Louth. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, returned at £110. Patron, Lord Monsoy. Church ded. to St Andrew. Pop., in 1801, 188; in 1831, 300. A. P., £1,539.

DONISTHORPE WITH OAKTHORPE, hamlets, partly in the parish of Nether Seal, co. of Leicester, and partly in the parish of Church Gresley, co. of Derby,

4 m. S.W. from Ashby-de-la-Zouch. Pop., in 1801, 281; in 1831, 757.

DONNIFORD, a hamlet in the hundred of Williton and Freemauers, co. of Somerset, 6 m. E. from Dunster.

DONNINGTON, a market-town and parish in the wapentake of Kirton and parts of Holland, co. of Lincoln, 32 m. S.E. by E. from Lincoln. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £13 17s. 3d., returned at £137. Patron, the Rev. J. Wilson. Church ded. to St Mary and the Holy Rood. The Wesleyan Methodists and the Baptists have chapels here. There is a port for barges here which convey goods to Boston. Hammond-beck and Blacksluice canals also pass through the parish. Fairs are held Aug. 17th for horses and cattle, May 26th, Sept 4th, and Oct. 17th, for cattle, flax, and hemp, the latter being extensively cultivated in the neighbourhood for the London market. Market-day, Saturday. Pop., in 1801, 1321; in 1831, 1759. A. P., £11,384.

DONNINGTON, a parish in Shiffnall division, in the hundred of Brimstree, co. of Salop, 5½ m. S.E. by E. from Shiffnall. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, rated at £13 6s. 8d. Patron, the marquess of Stafford. There is a good free grammar school here which was founded in 1627. A priory of White nuns formerly existed here; part of the chapel is remaining, and is used as a burial-place by the neighbouring Roman Catholics. Pop., including that of Boscobel, in 1801, 289; in 1831, 318. A. P., £5,418.

DONNINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Stow-on-the-Wold, co. of Gloucester, 1½ m. N. from Stow-on-the-Wold. At this place the royalists were defeated by Colonel Morgan in 1645. Pop., in 1801, 162; in 1831, 200. A. P., £1,501.

DONNINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Box and Stockbridge, rape of Chichester, co. of Sussex, 2 m. S.S.W. from Chichester. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chichester, rated at £9 10s. 5d. Patron, the bishop of Chichester. Pop., in 1801, 183; in 1831, 228. A. P., £2,011.

DONNINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Radlow, co. of Hereford, 2½ m. S. by W. from Ludbury. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and diocese of Hereford, rated at £3 9s. 9d. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. E. Freeman. Church ded. to St Mary. Pop., in 1801, 121; in 1831, 124. A. P., £1,155.

DONNINGTON-WOOD, a chapelry in the parish of Lilleshall, south part of the hundred of Bradford, co. of Salop, 3½ m. E.N.E. from Wellington. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry. Patron, the marquess of Stafford.

DONYATT, a parish in the hundred of Abddick and Bulstone, co. of Somerset, 2½ m. W.S.W. from Ilminster. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £15 15s. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, R. T. Coombe, Esq. At Crooksted, in this parish, there are three potteries. Pop., in 1801, 417; in 1831, 557. A. P., £2,410.

DONYLAND (EAST), a parish in Lenden hundred, co. of Essex, 2 m. S. from Colchester. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, rated at £10. Church ded. to St Lawrence. In 1801, the pop. amounted to 370; in 1831, 692. A. P., £1,570.

DONYLAND (WEST). See BAERE-CHURCH.

DORCHESTER, a borough and market-town, with separate jurisdiction, in the hundred of Uggescombe, Dorchester division of the co. of Dorset, 15 m. W. from Blandford, and 119 S.W. by W. from London.—It is divided into three parishes: viz. All Saints, Holy Trinity, and St Peter's. The living of All Saints is a discharged rectory, rated at £4 4s. 7d. Patrons, the mayor and corporation of Dorchester. The living of Trinity parish is a rectory annexed to that of St Peter's. It is rated at £17 8s. 6d., and is also in the patronage of the mayor and corporation. St Peter's is an elegant structure, built in 1831, on the site of the original church, which had fallen completely into decay. It contains many ancient tombs and statues. St Peter's is, in all legal respects, a distinct parish, supporting its own poor, and having its own parish officers. The living is now a perpetual curacy, endowed in A.D. 1823 with £1200 private benefaction, £1500 royal bounty, and £2000 parliamentary grant. The Independents, Unitarians, Baptists, and Wesleyan Methodists, have places of worship here.—The ancient religious foundations here were—"The hospital of St John Baptist, commonly called St John's-house, founded before 17° Edw. II., and granted 29° Hen. VI., to Eaton college, which grant was confirmed 7° Edw. IV.; but 1° Richard III. it was given to the friers minors of Dorchester; also another hospital or house for lepers, and a house of Grey friers."—Tanner's Not. Mon.—The town of Dorchester is pleasantly situated a few miles from the sea, on an eminence, bordered on the S. and W. by open downs, and on the N. by the river Frome. By charter of Edw. II., this town was governed by two bailiffs and burgesses; their number was augmented by James II., and under a charter granted by Charles I. The present corporation consists of a mayor, 2 bailiffs, 6 aldermen, 6 capital burgesses, a governor, and 24 common-councillmen, with other officers. It has returned two members to parliament since the 23d of Edw. I. The new principle of franchise has rather reduced the number of voters. The number under the old franchise, which vested the right of election in the tenants paying church and poor-rates, was 550; it is now about 423. The town-hall was erected at the expense of the corporation in 1791; beneath it is the market-house. The shire-hall is a plain neat building, fronted with Portland stone. The new gaol is on the plan recommended by the philanthropist Howard. It was built on the site of an ancient castle; the exterior is handsome, and its interior admirably arranged for the classification of prisoners. A tread mill was added to this establishment a few years ago. Cavalry barracks were erected here in 1795. Dorchester has no considerable manufactures, but is noted for its ale, which is brewed in great quantities, and sent to all parts of the kingdom. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs for cattle and sheep are held on Feb. 14th and on Trinity Monday. July 6th for cattle, sheep, and lambs; and Aug. 6th for cattle, wool, and leather. Its antiquity may be calculated from the etymology of its Roman names, Durnovaria and Durnun signifying a place near the Varia—now the Frome.—It was strongly fortified by the Romans, and was to them a place of great importance; nor was it less so to the Saxons, whose king, Athelstan, established two mints here. Sweyn, king of Denmark, besieged the town in 1003, in revenge for Ethelred's attempt to stir up the Danes. In 1595 the plague raged so terribly here, that the town was nearly depopulated; and in the 17th century it sustained great damage from two different fires. In the reign of Elizabeth, several Roman Catholic priests suffered death at this place, by the hands of the executioner. Lord Clarendon tells us, that during the civil war, Dorchester was considered one of the strongest holds of the parliament, but that on the approach of the earl of Carnarvon, with only 2000 men, it immediately surrendered; the earl of Essex afterwards took possession of it. An action took place here in 1645, between Cromwell and General Goring, in which the former sustained a defeat, but kept possession of the town. On the occasion of the duke of Monmouth's rebellion in 1685, the assizes were held here by Judge Jeffries, when 29 out of 30 of the insurgents, tried in one day, were found guilty and condemned, and 292 pleading guilty on the following day, were also condemned. Pop., in 1801, 2402; in 1831, 3033. A. P., £8,044.

DORCHESTER, a hundred in Oxfordshire, on the borders of Berkshire, containing 9 parishes. Pop., in 1831, 3,257.

DORCHESTER, a parish in the above hundred, about 8 m. S.E. by S. from Oxford. Living, a curacy, exempt from visitation, in the dio. of Oxford. Patrons, in 1829, the trustees of Mr Fettiplace. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. The windows display some singular tracery. This church was originally a cathedral, and has the tomb of its founder, St Birinus, on the S. side of the altar. There are also many extremely ancient monuments. Tanner says—"Upon the first invasion of the Saxons to the christian faith, Oswald, king of the Northumbrians, and Kynegis, king of the West Saxons, gave this city to St Birine, the apostle of these parts, who, about A.D. 635, built a church—wherein, as some say, he placed secular canons—and fixed here the seat of his bishopric, which then comprised the two large kingdoms of the West Saxons and Mercians. But, though in after-times it was mightily abridged in its extent—the bishopricks of Winchester, Salisbury, Exeter, Bath and Wells, Lichfield, Worcester, and Hereford being taken out of it—yet the diocese still remained the largest in England, and the bishop's cathedral was in this small village situated at the extremity of his jurisdiction, till Bishop Remigius translated the episcopal seat to the city of Lincoln, about A.D. 1086. The abbey of Black canons here was built by Alexander, bishop of Lincoln, about A.D. 1140, to the honour of St Peter, St Paul, and St Birnie, and was found, 26th Hen. VIII., to be endowed with £319 12s. ob. q. per ann. The site was granted, 36th Hen. VIII., to Edmund Aynshfield."—The town is situated on the banks of the Thames, near its confluence with the Isis. It is supposed to have been the Roman station which Richard of Cirencester designated Dorocina. At a short distance from the town are the remains of an ancient camp, now called Dike-hill. From the middle of the 12th century this town rapidly decayed in its importance, and is now an almost inconsiderable village. The market has long been discontinued; but there is still an annual pleasure-fair on Easter-Tuesday. Pop., in 1801, 777; in 1831, 866. A. P., £3,646.

DORE, a hamlet in the parish of Dronfield, co. of Derby, 6 m. S.W. from Chesterfield. Living, a curacy annexed to the vicarage of Dronfield, in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, returned at £70. Patron, Earl Fitzwilliam. The chapel has been lately erected, and there is an endowed school here. Pop., in 1801, 375; in 1831, 527. A. P., £1,684.

DORE-ABBEY, or ABBEY-DORE, a parish in Webtree hundred, co. of Hereford, 12 m. S. by W. from Hereford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, rated at £8. Patrons, in 1829, Sir E. Stanhope and General Burr, alternately. Church ded. to the Holy Trinity and St Mary. The following is from Tanner's Not. Mon.—"Robert the Ewyas, youngest son to Harold, lord of Ewyas, built here, temp. K. Steph., an abbey of White monks, to the honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary, which consisted of an abbot and eight religious, about the time of the dissolution, when its revenues were worth £101 5s. 2d. per ann. Dugd.: £118 2s. Speed. This monastery was granted, 31st Hen. VIII., to John Scudamore." Pop., in 1801, 567; in 1831, 533. A. P., £4,204.

DORKING, or DARKING, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Wootton, co. of Surrey, 23 m. S.S.W. from London, and 12½ m. E. from Guildford. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester, rated at £14 13s. 11½d. Patron, the duke of Norfolk. Church ded. to St Martin. Abraham Tucker, author of 'the Light of Nature,' Jeremiah Markland, the learned critic, and J. Hoole, the translator of Tasso, were buried in the church-yard of this place. The old Roman causeway, from Arundel to Dorking, called Stone-street, passes through this church-yard. The town, consisting of three wide streets, is seated on a rock, in a vale, near the river Mole, sheltered on the N. by a ridge of chalky downs. The surrounding heights command magnificent views, and there are several stately mansions and handsome villas in the vicinity. The manor belongs principally to Howards, dukes of Norfolk. The custom of Borough English prevails in this manor, by which the youngest son is heir to a copyhold estate. A great traffic is carried on here in meal and lime, the latter being reckoned superior to any other made in the country. Large quantities of poultry are sold here for the supply of the London markets. The market is on Thursday, and a fair for cattle, sheep, &c., is held annually on the day preceding Ascension day. The county magistrates hold petty sessions here for the division, and the lord of the manor holds a court-leet and a court-baron, in the month of October. Here is a national school, and an infant school, in which 150 children are supported.—A little to the right of Dorchester, is the Deepdene, the estate of the late Mr Thomas Hope, author of 'Anastasius.' The romantic scenery of this spot abounds with the endless varieties of hill and dale, interspersed with well-wooded retirements, the pleasant features of landscape-gardening, the quiet of echoing dells, and the refreshing coolness of caves and subterranean passages, and terraces overlooking a vast extent of country. The decorative elegance of casts and sculpture, and the rusticity of grottoes and hermitages, diversify its winding walks and plantations, mingling the aspect of trim neatness, with rude, uncultivated nature.—The vale beneath Box Hill—about 1 m. from the town—called Holmwood, was the retreat of the ancient Britons, in their contests with the Romans, and subsequently of the Saxons, when the country was harassed by the Danes, for which reason it has been made the subject of a distich, proclaiming its unconquerableness. Pop., in 1801, 3058; in 1831, 4711. A. P., 13,425.

DORMINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Greytree, co. of Hereford, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. E. by S. from Hereford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, rated at £4 6s. 8d. Church ded. to St Peter, and in the patronage of E. T. Foley, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 107; in 1831, 98. A. P., £1,468.

DORMSDEN, a parish in the hundred of Bosmere and Claydon, co. of Suffolk, 2 m. S. by E. from Needham. Living, a curacy not in charge, subordinate to the rectory of Barking, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich. Pop., in 1801, 82; in 1831, 73. A. P., £548.

DORMSTON, a parish locally situated in the middle division of Oswaldslow hundred, co. of Worcester, 7 m. W. by N. from Alcester. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, not in charge, returned at £41 10s. Patron, the rector of Kingston. Pop., in 1801, 85; in 1831, 157. A. P., £670.

DORNE, a hamlet in Blockley parish, co.

of Worcester, 3 m. N.W. from Moreton-in-the-Marsh. Pop., in 1831, 45.

DORNEY, a parish in the hundred of Burnham, co. of Bucks, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.N.W. from Eton. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £8 10s. 5d., returned at £56 2s. 10d. Patron, in 1829, Sir C. Palmer, Bart. Church ded. to St James. Pop., in 1801, 190; in 1831, 268. A. P., £1,954.

DORNFORD, a hamlet in the parish of Chesterton, co. of Huntingdon, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.N.W. from Stilton. There is considerable reason to suppose that this place was the city Durobrivæ of Antoninus.

DORRINGTON, a parish in the wapentake of Flaxwell, parts of Kesteven, co. of Lincoln, 4 m. N. from Sleaford. Living, a discharged vicarage with Shefford, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £6 3s. 9d. Patron, Sir G. Heathcote, Bart. Church ded. to St James. Pop., in 1801, 225; in 1831, 371. A. P., £1,846.

DORRINGTON, a township in Drayton division of the hundred of Bradford, co. of Salop, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. by N. from Drayton in Hales.

DORSETSHIRE,

A maritime county in the west of England; bounded on the N. by Somerset and Wilts; on the E. by Southampton; on the W. by Devon and part of Somerset; and on the S. by the British channel. It extends from north to south, measured across the centre, 36 miles; and from east to west 50 miles. Its superficial area has been estimated at 512,154 acres. This shire was successively subject to the sees of Dorchester in Oxford, of Winchester, and of Sherborne; and when the latter was annexed to Sarum, it remained part of that diocese till the 31st Hen. VIII., in which year it was transferred by patent to the newly constituted bishopric of Bristol. The archdeaconry of Dorset is co-extensive with the diocese of Bristol and comprises the whole county. The bishop holds a triennial, and the archdeacon an annual visitation at Bridport, Blandford, Dorchester, Shaftesbury, Whitechurch, or Cerne Abbas. The civil division of the county consists of 9 boroughs, and 13 market-towns, comprising 258 parishes. It returns three members to parliament, who are polled for at Dorchester, Wimborne, Wareham, Beaminster, Sherborne, Shaftesbury, Blandford, and Chesilton. Dorsetshire is included in the Western circuit. The assizes were originally held at Sherborne, but now they are uniformly held at Dorchester. The Epiphany quarter-sessions are held at Blandford; the Easter, at Sherborne; the Midsummer, at Shaftesbury; and the Michaelmas, at Bridport. There are 63 sitting magistrates. Pop., in 1801, 115,319; in 1831, 150,400. A. P., £698, 395.

Physical Features, &c.—The general outline of this county is extremely irregular. Towards the north it is mostly level, and consists of good arable and pasture land. The southwestern side abounds in luxuriant vales, while in the S.E. there is a considerable portion of barren land. A ridge of chalk hills crosses the middle of the county, on which vast flocks of sheep are fed. The arable land amounts to about 160,000 acres; the pasture land to 170,000. Upwards of 30,000 are heath lands; and 13,000 are covered with wood.—The climate is salubrious; but not so bland and mild as some other of the western counties. The prevalent winds are the W. and S.W.

Manufactures, &c.]—There are numerous manufactories in this county. Among these are several for a particular kind of baize, and for the manufacture of shirt-buttons. The latter affords employment to a great many women and children. There are a few silk-spinning establishments and about 9000 people are employed in the neighbourhood of Bridport and Beaminster, in the making of twine, netting, ropes, sail-cloth, and other hemp goods, for the supply of which a great deal of hemp and flax is grown in this county. The principal foreign trade is carried on from Poole. The chief natural productions of this county are corn, timber, flax, hemp, &c. The stone-quarries of Purbeck and Portland have long been celebrated.

Rivers.]—The chief rivers are the Frome and the Stour, the former rises in the county, passes Dorchester, and falls into Poole-bay. The latter, rising in Somersetshire, crosses the county, and taking a S.S.E. direction falls into the English channel at Christchurch. There are many other rivers in this county, as the Char, the Iveloe, the Piddle, and the Yeo, but none of these are very important. A portion of this county is intersected by the Dorset and Somerset canal, the principal utility of which is its conveying supply of coal, &c., to the various manufacturing towns and districts through which it passes, and opening a communication between the Bristol channel, the Severn, the Thames, and the southern coast.

History.]—Previous to the landing of Cæsar, this county was occupied by the Durotriges and Morini. Under the Roman government it was included in Britannia Prima; but when the Saxons established themselves in South Britain it was made part of the kingdom of Wessex by Cerdic, who completed his conquest by seizing the Isle of Wight. In 1001, Sweyn, king of Denmark, in his march from Exeter to Wilton, destroyed Dorchester, Clifton, Sherborne, and Shaston. This was the first time that Dorchester severely felt the miseries inflicted by that people. Great preparations were made here to fortify the coast on the approach of the Spanish armada. Portland in particular was strongly guarded. During the parliamentary war the majority of the higher order was attached to the king, but the working classes were generally disaffected.—Before the reformation there were 29 religious houses in this county, of which many vestiges are yet to be seen.

DORSINGTON, a parish in the upper division of Kiftgate hundred, co. of Gloucester, 6½ m. N. by W. from Chipping-Campden. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, rated at £12 9s. 2d. Patron, in 1829, W. Rawlins, Esq. Charch ded. to St Peter. The whole village was nearly reduced to ashes in 1754. Pop., in 1801, 100; in 1831, 122. A. P., £375.

DORSINGTON (LITTLE), a hamlet in the parish of Welford, co. of Warwick, 6½ m. S.E.S. from Alcester. Pop. with that of the hamlet of Bickmarsh, in 1831, 65.

DORSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Webtree, co. of Hereford, 8 m. E. by S. from Hay. The townships of Upper and Lower Dorstone are comprised in this parish. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, rated at £7 11s. 10d. Church ded. to St Peter, and in the joint patronage of S. Rosser and J. Maddy, Esqrs. Pop., in 1831, 571. A. P., £2,161.

DORTON, or DOVATON, a parish in the hundred of Ashendon, co. of Buckingham, 5½ m. N.N.W. from Thame. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Bucks and dio. of Lincoln returned at £123. Patronage, with the curacy of Ashendon. Church ded. to St John the Baptist. Pop., in 1801, 105; in 1831, 158. A. P., £2,558.

DOSTHILL WITH WILNECOTE, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Tamworth, co. of Warwick, 2½ m. S. from Tamworth. Living, a curacy subordinate to the vicarage of Kingsbury. Pop., in 1801, 475; in 1831, 688. A. P., £2,394.

DOTHIE-CAMDWR, a township in the parish of Blaen-y-penal, parish of Llan ddewr-Brefi, co. of Cardigan, South Wales. Pop., in 1801, 116; in 1831, 150.

DOTHIE-PISCOTTWR, a township in the above parish and hundred. Pop., in 1801, 105; in 1831, 132.

DOTLAND, in the southern division of Tynedale ward, co. of Northumberland, 3 m. S. by W. from Hexham.

DOTTON, an extra-parochial liberty in the eastern division of Budleigh hundred, co. of Devon.

DOUGHTON. See DUNTON, Norfolk.

DOUGLAS, a chapelry in the parish of Eccleston, co.-palatine of Lancaster, 6½ m. N.W. by W. from Wigan. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester, returned at £109. Patron, the rector of Eccleston.

DOUGLAS, the principal town in the isle of Man. It is situated on the S.E. part of the island, 11 m. from Castletown. It has a handsome church independent of the parish church of Kirkbradden, which is 2 m. from the town. There are also places of worship for Catholics, Methodists, and Independents. The harbour is reckoned the finest dry one in the English channel. The pier is 520 ft. in length, by 50 in breadth. The custom-house is a very handsome building. The general post-office for the island is in Douglas, to which letters are forwarded from Whitehaven. Douglas has a Lancasterian school and various charities, and a good public library. On the whole, however, this town upon landing, disappoints the expectations which the approach to it by sea is calculated to raise, for the internal arrangements are by no means equal to the external appearance. The bay is 2 m. across and sheltered from all winds except the N.E. The population is about 6054.

DOULTING, a parish in the hundred of Whitestone, co. of Somerset, 2 m. E. from Shepton-Mallet. Living, a vicarage with the curacies of East and West Cranmore, Stoke-lane, and Downhead annexed, in the archd. of Wells, and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £39 12s. 6d. Patron, in 1829, J. Tussell, Esq. The church, ded. to St Aldhelm, stands on the site of a chapel erected by the monks of Glastonbury. Pop., in 1801, 539; in 1831, 630. A. P., £3,200.

DOVE (THE), a river which rises in the Peak of Derbyshire, and flowing between that county and Staffordshire, falls into the Trent below Burton.

DOVEDALE, a singular valley, or rather chasm, about 5 m. from Ashbourne, in Derby. On entering it by Thorp-Cloud, a high, bare, limestone-hill of all colours, the traveller proceeds about 200 yards along the river, the hills on either side appearing nearly to meet overhead and shut up the glen. Further on, the river flows through an immense fissure between perpendicular cliffs, with just sufficient room for one person to walk along the stream. This place is called 'the Straits,' and is about 200 yards in length. On clearing it, the hills are seen to fall back, and admit of room for a small piece of soft pasturage, through which the Dove winds in a reedy bed. It soon after enters another dell, much inferior in wildness and sublimity to that which it has just left.

DOVEHOLE, a hamlet in the hundred of High Peak, co. of Derby, parish of Hope.

DOVELL, a hamlet in the hundred of Longtree, co. of Gloucester, parish of Shipton-Moigne.

DOVENBY, a township in the parish of Bride-kirk, Cumberland, 3 m. N.W. by W. from Cockermouth. Pop., in 1801, 153; in 1831, 247. A. P., £1,746.

DOVER, *

One of the cinque ports, also a borough and market-town. It is locally situate in the lower half-hundred of Besborough and lathe of St Augustine, co. of Kent, 72 m. E.S.E. from London, and 40 m. E. by S. from Maidstone. It lies in a valley, between lofty chalk cliffs, from the summit of which the coast of France is seen to considerable advantage, at the distance of about 2½ m. It is a great thoroughfare for passengers to and from Calais, steamboats sailing daily, and the voyage being frequently made in one tide. The ancient Britons named this town Dwyr, from Dwyfyrha, signifying 'a steep place.' The Romans called it Dubris, and the Saxons Dofra or Dofris. The Romans attached great importance to this station, and probably constructed the Pharos or watch-tower, some remains of which are still visible here. Dover is celebrated in history as having been a very considerable place before the Conquest, furnishing 20 ships, with 21 men each, to serve the king.

Dover Castle.—Its ancient castle is supposed by some to have been built by Julius Cæsar; other authorities warrant our attributing it to Claudius. It stands on a chalk-cliff, from 360 to 400 feet in height, 1½ m. N. of the town, and occupies about 35 acres. The fortifications are of different epochs, Roman, Saxon, Norman, and of later date. The castle consists of an upper and lower court, the former surrounded by a strong wall and towers; the latter encompassed on all sides,*except next the sea, by an irregular wall flanked by numerous towers. The entrance to the castle is on the S. side of the principal tower, by a flight of steps, leading by the E. side to the house of the governor, who is the lord-warden of the Cinque-ports. Among the curiosities shown here is 'Queen Elizabeth's pocket-pistol,' a beautiful piece of brass ordnance, 24 ft. in length, affirmed to be capable of carrying a 12 pound shot, 7 miles. It was cast at Utrecht, and presented to Queen Elizabeth by the States of Holland. On the 21st of August, 1625, the castle was captured through the daring intrepidity of one Blake, a zealous republican, who, with ten men and the assistance of scaling-ladders, reached the top of the cliff, and forced open the gates, when the garrison supposing by so bold an attempt that the number of the assailants must be too strong for resistance, surrendered to these desperadoes. The subterraneous passages leading to the castle, are supposed to have been formed in the reign of John, and to have been the road through which the reinforcement was led to the assistance of Hubert de Burgh against the dauphin. Lyon's History of Dover, in 2 vols. 4to, or a smaller work by W. Batcheller, may be consulted for the detailed history of this castle.—To the W. of Dover, opposite the castle, is the celebrated Shakspeare cliff, described in the tragedy of King Lear. It is 350 ft. high, and almost perpendicular. Its form is somewhat remarkable, but it is by no means so sublime an object as might be supposed, after reading King Lear.

Ecclesiastical affairs.—Dover originally contained five parishes, but at present there are only two: those of St James and St Mary.—The living of St James is a discharged rectory in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury, rated at £4 17s. 6d., returned at £13. The living of St Mary is a perpetual curacy, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the archbishop of Canterbury, rated at £4, and in the patronage of the parishioners. The Roman Catholics, as well as various dissenting bodies, have places of worship here.—The free school in this town was established in 1771; and a charity school for maintaining and educating 45 boys and 34 girls, was founded in 1789. It is now conducted on the national system. There are likewise an infant school, a school of industry, a dispensary, and a savings-bank. The public buildings are—a town-hall, theatre, custom-house, gaol, and military hospital. The barracks are built on an eminence in the vicinity. The remains of a priory of canons regular are still to be seen near the entrance of the town.

Harbour, Trade, &c.—As a sea-port, Dover derives its greatest importance from its proximity to the continent, and, at a considerable annual expense defrayed out of a revenue applicable to the improvement of the harbour, it receives and protects vessels of 500 tons. It was famous for privateers during the war, and supplied the service with cutters and transports. The docks, store-houses, and custom-house, are all admirably constructed. The foreign trade is very trifling; but the coasting is considerable, and many vessels are employed in fishing. Ship-building, sail, and rope-making, are carried on to a great extent, and there are several paper-mills in the neighbourhood. A large quantity of grain is shipped at this port for the London market. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday, and there is an annual fair on the 23d of November. Pop., in 1801, 7084; in 1831, 11,924. A. P., £16,478.

Government and Franchise.—Dover received its first royal charter from Edw. I., by whom it was divided into 21 wards, but now it comprises only 13. The corporation consists of a mayor, 12 jurats, 36 common-councilmen, a recorder, town-clerk, and other officers. The mayor is coroner for Dover. A court of record was granted in the 20th Charles II. to this, and all the Cinque-ports. A court of requests was established by act, 24th Geo. III. for recovering debts under £2. The offices of lord-warden of the Cinque-ports and constable of Dover-castle are now invariably united. This officer has the execution of King's writs within the Cinque-ports—a jurisdiction extending from Margate to Seaford—independently of the sheriffs of Kent and Sussex. The office has been usually given to the first lord of the treasury. Dover has returned two members to parliament since 2^o Edw. III. The present electors are about 1743 in number. The mayor is the returning officer.

DOVER-COURT, a parish in Tendring hundred, co. of Essex, 1 m. from Harwich. Living, a vicarage, with the chapelry of Harwich annexed. Pop., in 1801, 390; in 1831, 926. A. P., £2,724.

DRAYTON-IN-HALES, a market-town and parish in Drayton division, north hundred of Bradford, co. of Salop, 159½ m. N.W. by N. from London, and 19½ m. N.E. by N. from Shrewsbury. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, rated at £12 10s. 7½d., returned at £130. Patron, in 1829, H. C. Cotton, Esq. Church ded. to St Mary. A free grammar school was founded here in 1554. This town is pleasantly situated on the N.W. bank of the river Tern. It is supposed to have been one of the principal cities of the ancient Britons. The trade has much decreased since the introduction of canals; previously its market was the most considerable in the district. There is a manufactory for hair-cloth and also one for paper, and a little business is carried on in the malting-line. The market-day is Wednesday. Fairs for cattle, horses, sheep, swine, and woollen and hempen cloth are held the Wednesday before Palm-Sunday, Wednesday before the 22d of June, 19th of September, and 24th of October. The petty-sessions for Drayton division of the hundred are held here. The manor belonged to the abbot of St Ebrulph, in Normandy, and subsequently to the abbot of Combermere in Cheshire. In 1459, the earl of Salisbury, on his way to Ludlow to join the duke of York, was overtaken by the Lancastrians, at Bloreheath, a place about 2 m. from this town, and finding that his forces were inferior in number to those of his opponents, he feigned a retreat, but turning suddenly on his pursuers put the royal army to the route, and gaining the victory, proceeded to Ludlow. In this town also prince Rupert encountered and defeated the troops commanded by Lord Fairfax, in 1643. Pop., in 1801, 3162; in 1831, 3882. A. P., £16,777. Drayton-in-Hales is partly in Staffordshire. The entire parish contains 4619 inhabitants.

Patron, in 1829, J. E. Rush, Esq. Church ded. to All Saints. There is a well-endowed school here. Pop., in 1801, 369; in 1831, 469. A. P., £2,673.

DRIMPLOR, a township in Bridport division, county of Dorset.

DROITWICH, a borough and market town, having separate jurisdiction, but located in the hundred of Halfshire, co. of Worcester, $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. by N. from Worcester, and 118 m. N.W. from London. It comprises the parishes of St Andrew and St Mary, St Nicholas, St Peter, and part of Dodderhill, all in the archd. and dio. of Worcester. The parishes of St Andrew and St Mary were united in the reign of Edw. VI. Living, a discharged rector, rated at £7 12s. 1d. Patron, the lord-chancellor. The living of St Nicholas is a rectory, rated at £4 9s. 7d. Patron, the lord-chancellor. St Peter's is a discharged vicarage, rated at £6. Patron, in 1829, Earl Somers. Here was a house of Friars Hermits of the order of St Austin. The Coventry hospital—in St Peter's parish—contains 19 tenements, occupied by 38 individuals above 60 years of age; it was founded in consequence of a bequest of H. Coventry, in 1686. Here is also a charity school for 40 boys and 40 girls, who in addition to receiving education are apprenticed.—The town of Droitwich is pleasantly situated on the river Salwarp, upon which there are several corn-mills. It is nearly in the centre of the county, and has always been famed for the saline springs which abound in the neighbourhood. So early as the year 816, incidental mention is made of salt-furnaces at Droitwich. The brine-pits are in the centre of the town. The spring is 22 inches deep, and doubtless runs over a bed of rock-salt by which it is impregnated. The quantity of salt annually made here is about 700,000 bushels. The market day is on Friday. Fairs for cattle, cheese, wool, &c., are held on Friday in Easter week, 18th of June, 22d of September, and 21st December. A fair for hiring servants is held 23d of September. King John granted a charter to this town which Henry III. confirmed. James I. conferred on it the charter of Insuperimus under which it is governed, the body-corporate consisting of 2 bailiffs, a recorder, 2 justices, a town-clerk, burgesses, &c. The bailiffs, recorder, and bailiff of the preceding year being justices of the peace, they hold a quarterly court of session, and a court-leet twice a year before the town-clerk. This borough formerly returned 2 members to parliament. It now, in conjunction with the several parishes of Dodderhill, Hampton-Lovett, Doverdale, Salwarp, Martin-Hussington, Oddingley, Hadsor, Hindlip, Himbleton, Elmbridge, the Moreway end division, and the Broughton division of Hanbury, and the extra-parochial places called Crutch and Westwood park, returns one member. The franchise, formerly confined to 28, is now enjoyed by about 311. The bailiff is the returning officer. Sergeant Wilde, an eminent republican lawyer, was a native of Droitwich, and likewise Richard de Wich, bishop of Chichester, who was canonized by Urban IV. Pop., in 1801, 1815; in 1831, 2487. A. P., £6,702.

DRONFIELD, a township and parish in the hundred of Scarsdale, co. of Derby, 155 m. N.N.W. from London, and 6 m. N.W. by N. from Chesterfield, comprising the townships of Little-Barlow, Coal-Aston, Holmesfield, and Unstone, with the hamlets of Dore and Totley. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, returned at £99 3s. 2d. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Church ded. to St John the Baptist. Most of the dissenting bodies have places of worship here. The grammar-school here was founded in the reign of Elizabeth. About 2 m. from Dronfield are the remains of Beauchief abbey. Formerly this town had a market, but it was discontinued long ago, on account of its proximity to Chesterfield and Sheffield markets. Its manufactures are chiefly those of cast-ware, cutlery, scythes, and all descriptions of ironmongery. A considerable quantity of coal is found in the neighbourhood. At Cawley, in the vicinity, there is a sulphureous spring, with a bath annexed. The fairs are held on April 25th, and August 11th. Pop. of this parish, including its townships and hamlets, in 1801, 2841; in 1831, 3974. A. P., £14,042.

DUDDOE, or DUDHOWE, a township in Northam parish, co. palatine of Durham, $10\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.N.W. from Wooler. On an eminence called Grindon-Rigg, are the remains of Duddoe Tower, near which are six stones, placed there in commemoration of the victory gained by the English over the Scots, in 1558. Pop., in 1801, 231; in 1831, 356. A. P., £1,725.

DUDDOES, in the parish of Stanington, Northumberland, 5 m. S.W. from Morpeth.

DUDLESTON, a chapelry in the parish of Ellesmere, co. of Salop, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. by W. from Ellesmere. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry. Patron, the vicar of Ellesmere.

DUDLEY, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Halfshire, co. of Worcester, 119 m. N.W. from London, and 26 m. N.N.E. from Worcester. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, rated at £7 18s. 6½d., and in the patronage of the earl of Dudley. The church, dedicated to St Thomas, was rebuilt in 1819. It is a fine edifice. There is also a chapel-of-ease ded. to St Edmund. Several denominations of Methodists, Baptists, Independents, Unitarians, and Society of Friends, have places of worship here.—Ger-vase Parnell, lord of the manor, founded a monastery near his castle here, before the year 1161. Dudley derives its name from the Saxon prince, Dudo, or Dodo, to whom it belonged at the time of the heptarchy, and who built a castle here in the year 700, which was demolished in the 20th year of King Hen. II.'s reign. It consists of one long street, and is pleasantly situated in that part of the county which is insulated in Staffordshire. Its principal manufactures are nails, hardware, and glass. A canal, which was lately cut, communicating with the Birmingham and Worcester canal, has greatly improved the trade of this place. The castle, built by Roger de Somery, in the reign of Henry III., was garrisoned by the royalists at the commencement of the parliamentary war, and, in 1644, bravely defended by Col. Beaumont against the parliamentarians. It was destroyed by fire in 1750. The gateway tower remains, and part of the postern tower. Dudley possesses three charity schools, several Sabbath schools, and a well-endowed free grammar school, founded in 1562. The family of Ward derive the title of earl from this town, which was a borough, and sent members to parliament in the reign of Edw. I., but had lost the privilege, until it was renewed by the late act, 3rd Will. IV. The number of electors is about 800. It is within the jurisdiction of the county magistrates. The market-day is Saturday. The fairs, which are chiefly for cattle, wool, and cheese, are held on the 8th of May, 5th of Aug., and 2d of Oct. Pop., in 1801, 10,107; in 1831, 23,043. A. P., £20,833.

DUDSTONE and KING'S-BARTON, a hundred, comprising three divisions in the vicinity of the city of Gloucester, which is locally included in it, together with 26 parishes. Pop., in 1831, 12,331.

N. from Derby, comprising the chapelries of Belper and Turnditch, with the townships of Hazlewood, Heaze, Holbrook, Shottle and Postern, and Windley. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, rated at £8 4s., returned at £100. Patron, the bishop of the diocese. Church ded. to St Alkmund. There are chapels here belonging to different dissenting bodies, and a free-school. This was formerly part of the demesne of Henry de Ferrars, earl of Derby, who, in 1096, had a castle at the N.W. end of the village, which was forfeited by his turbulent descendant, Robert de Ferrars, who joined the rebels in the reign of Henry III. In 1330, Henry, earl of Lancaster, claimed several parks in Duffield Frith, and it continued a portion of the duchy of Lancaster till the reign of Charles I., when it was granted to several persons. Fairs for cattle are held here on the first Thursday in the year, and on March 1st. Pop., in 1801, 9010; in 1831, 14,683. A. P., £26,364.

DUFFIELD (NORTH), a township in the parish of Skipwith, E. R. of the co. of York, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. from Selby. Pop., in 1801, 313; in 1831, 344. A. P., £4,269. There is a neat chapel for Primitive Methodists in this village. At this place formerly was a castle, the residence of Lord Hussey; but it has long since been destroyed.

DUFFIELD (SOUTH), a township in the parish of Hemingborough, E. R. of the co. of York, 5 m. E. by N. from Selby. Pop., in 1801, 160; in 1831, 202. A. P., £1,274.

In 1736 a school was founded here, which is now conducted on the national system. Several individuals concerned in the rebellion of 1745, were executed in the market-place of this town. The chief manufactures are woollen-cloths and blankets. A silk manufactory was recently established here. The market-day is Friday. Fairs are held here on the 10th of July, and the 8th of November. Courts leet and baron are held annually. Pop., in 1801, 1049; in 1831, 1285. A. P., £3,046.

DULWICH, anciently DILWYSHE, a hamlet in the parish of Camberwell, and E. division of the hundred of Brixton, co. of Surrey, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. S. from London. Its chief attraction is the college at the eastern extremity of the village, founded in 1619 by Edward Alleyn—the celebrated dramatic performer in Shakspeare's time—who endowed it with the manor of Dulwich and various tenements in the co. of Middlesex, producing at present an income of about £14,000. By the regulations of the founder, it is necessary that the master and the warden of the college should bear the name of Alleyn, or Allen, and that 4 fellows, 6 poor brethren, 6 poor sisters, 12 poor scholars, 6 assistants, and 30 non-resident members, be selected from the parishes of St Botolph, St Saviour's (Southwark), St Luke and St Giles, Camberwell. On the death of the master, the warden succeeds him, and a new warden is immediately elected. The poor brethren and sisters are chosen as vacancies occur, from the out-members who are taken from the parishes of St Botolph's, Bishopsgate, St Giles, Cripplegate, and St Saviour's (Southwark), ten from each parish. Apartments in the college are allotted them, and a considerable pecuniary allowance. The buildings of the college are in various and discrepant styles of architecture; the hall and west wing are of the style which prevailed in the reign of Elizabeth, the east wing is in the Vanbrugh style, and the gallery different from each. The chapel is open to the inhabitants of the village. The altar-piece has a fine painting of the Ascension. At the south end of the college a noble picture-gallery was recently erected, for the reception of a valuable collection of paintings by Italian, Flemish, and English masters, which was left to the college by Sir F. Bourgeois, who died in 1811, bequeathing also the sum of £12,000 to complete the establishment. A free school was founded here in 1741, by the master of the college, and endowed by him with property producing a rental of £200 per ann., for the education of poor children belonging to the hamlet or living within a mile of it. The school-house is a handsome building facing the college. A medicinal spring was discovered here in 1739, besides which, there are several others in the neighbourhood, similar in properties to those of Sydenham. Pop. included in that of Camberwell parish.

R. Toke, Esq. Church dedicated to St Mary. It is the remains of a priory, which Tanner says—"The Lady Juga, sister to Ralph Baynard, built here, A.D. 1104, to the honour of the blessed Virgin Mary, wherein her son, Jeffry, two years after, placed canon, who shortly after observed the rule of St Austin. This priory consisted of a prior and 10 or 11 religious, whose maintenance was valued, 26th Hen. VIII., at £150 3s. 4d. per ann., Dugd.; £173 2s. 4d., Speed. The site was granted, 28th Hen. VIII., to Robert, earl of Sussex." Under a recess in the south wall is a tomb, supposed to be that of the Lady Juga; near it is a monument with the figures of a knight and lady, said to have been erected by Sir W. Fitz-Walter, who died in 1198; and on the opposite side of the church is an alabaster figure, on a gray altar tomb, intended to represent Matilda, daughter of Baron Fitz-Walter of Castle-Baynard, and famous in legendary story as the wife or mistress of Robin Hood, the outlawed earl of Huntingdon. It is said that one of this family instituted the jocular custom of delivering a fitch, or gammon of bacon, to any married couple, who, having been united a year and a day, could swear that neither party has repented, and that no quarrel has arisen between them since they entered wedlock. The first recorded instance of the bacon being won, is in the 23d of Henry VI.; and the latest in 1751, when Mr Shakeshanks, wool-comber, and his worthy helpmate, claimed and received it. A similar custom was observed in the manor of Winchenor, in Staffordshire, where corn as well as bacon was given to the happy pair. In 1801, the pop. of Little Dunmow was 272; in 1831, 376. A. Dugd.; £402 14s. 7d. ob. Speed. The site of this monastery was granted, 1^o Mary, to Sir Leonard Chambedorpe.—Here was also an hospital for poor leprous persons; and a house of 'Black friers.' The origin of the town of Dunstable is traced to the time of the ancient Britons. According to Hearne and Bishop Gibson, it takes its name from dunum or dun, 'a hill,' and staple, 'a commercial mart;' others suppose it to be derived from Dun, a notorious robber in the reign of Hen. I., who infested the neighbourhood. It is pleasantly situated near the Chiltern hills, and consists of four principal streets running nearly in the direction of the four cardinal points. Here is an extensive manufacture of various articles in straw, especially the well-known 'Dunstable hats;' here is also one of the largest manufactories for whitening, in the kingdom. Dunstable is proverbially famed for its larks, which are of a remarkably large size, and are sent to the London market in great quantities. The government of the town is now vested in 4 constables, a church-warden, and 2 overseers; formerly it had a mayor. The market is on Wednesday; and fairs are held on Ash-Wednesday, May 22, Aug. 12, and Nov. 12, the last being the largest fair for sheep in the county. Among the several charitable establishments in this place, the most considerable is a school for 40 boys and 15 girls, who are clothed, educated, and apprenticed. It is said that the first representation of a play in England took place here, under the superintendence of a priest or friar. Pop., in 1801, 1296; in 1831, 2117. A. P., £2,204.

DUNSTABURGH, or DUNSTANBROUGH CASTLE, a noble relic of antiquity, about 2 m. E.S.E. from Embleton, and 6 m. N.E. from Alnwick in Northumberland. It was probably a British fort, but is not mentioned in history until the beginning of the 14th century, when it was founded, or rather rebuilt, by Thomas, earl of Lancaster. The heavy seas which break upon the rocks here, have torn them much, and it appears that the area or platform on which the castle is built had been originally of greater extent than at present. Immediately below one of the towers is a gully or passage in the rock, about 60 yards in length, 510 ft. deep, through which the sea breaks with tremendous noise.

DUNSTALL, a township in the parish of Tamworth, co. of Stafford, 2 m. from Tamworth.

DUNSTALL, a township in the parish of Tatenhill, co. of Stafford, on the borders of Needwood forest. Pop., in 1801, 177; in 1831, 204. A. P., £2,897.

DUNSTAN (St.), a parish in the hundred of Westgate, lath of St Augustine, co. of Kent, $\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. from Canterbury. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury, rated at £5, returned at £145. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. Here is a national school. Pop., in 1801, 707; in 1831, 809. A. P., £1,768.

DUNSTER, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Carhampton, co. of Somerset, $\frac{3}{8}$ m. W.N.W. from Somerton, and 162 W. by S. from London. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £4 13s. 4d., returned at £110. Patron, in 1829, F. T. Luttrell, Esq. Church ded. to St George. Tanner says—"Sir William de Mohun the Elder, temp. Will. Conq., built a priory of Benedictine monks on the north-west side of the castle here, to the honour of St George, and annexed it as a cell to the abbey of St Peter, at Bath. About the time of the suppression it consisted but of three monks, whose maintenance was valued at £37 4s. 8d. per ann., Dugd. Speed. The site of this house was granted, 34th Hen. VIII., to Humfry Colles." This De Mohun was a Norman baron, on whom William the conqueror bestowed some considerable estates in this part of the kingdom. He built a castle here, which was held by his family till the reign of Edward III.; from that time it was the residence of the Luttrell family, and during the parliamentary war it was taken possession of by General Blake under Oliver Cromwell. The town of Dunster is situated on a pleasant eminence about a mile from the Bristol channel, and consists chiefly of two streets. The market is on Friday; and a fair—chiefly for pedlery—is held on Whitmonday. In the reign of Edw. III. this town enjoyed the privileges of a borough, and returned members to parliament. It afterwards held the elective franchise conjointly with Minehead, but both of these places have been disfranchised by the reform act. Pop., in 1801, 772; in 1831, 983. A. P., £2,589.

DUNSTEW, a parish in the hundred of Wootton, co. of Oxford, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.S.W. from Deddington. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, rated at £8 2s. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Patron, Sir H. W. Dashwood, Bart. Church ded. to St Mary. Pop., in 1801, 318; in 1831, 450. A. P., £2,924.

DUNSTON, a parish in the second division of the hundred of Langoe, parts of Keesteven, co. of Lincoln, $8\frac{1}{4}$ m. S.E. by S. from Lincoln. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £7 0s. 10d., returned at £96. Patron, the bishop of Lincoln. Church ded. to St Peter. Pop., in 1801, 279; in 1831, 423. A. P., £2,647.

DUNSTON, a parish in the hundred of Humbleyard, co. of Norfolk, 4 m. S. from Norwich. Living, a perpetual curacy, in the archd. and dio. of Norwich. Patronesses, in 1829, Misses S. & S. Long. Church ded. to St Remigius. Pop., in 1801, 86; in 1831, 102. A. P., £637.

DUNSTON, a township in the parish of Embleton, southern division of Bambrough ward, co. of Northumberland, $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. from Alnwick. Pop. of Dunston, in 1801, 177; in 1831, 185. A. P., £2,069.

DUNSTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Penkridge, co. of Stafford, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. N. by E. from Penkridge. Living, a perpetual curacy, annexed to that of Penkridge. Patronage with Penkridge curacy. Pop., in 1801, 208; in 1831, 272. A. P., £1,621.

DUNTERTON, a parish in the hundred of Liffon, co. of Devon, 5 m., S.E. by S. from Launceston. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter, rated at £8 7s.

Id. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. William Royce. Church ded. to All Saints. Pop., in 1801, 129; in 1831, 207. A. P., £1,538.

DUNTHORPE, or DUNTHORP, a hamlet in the parish of Haythrop, co. of Oxford, 3 m. E. N.E. from Chipping-Norton.

DUNTISH, a tything in the parish and hundred of Buckland-Newton, co. of Dorset, 11½ m. N. by W. from Dorchester. Here is a circular camp of 10 acres, in which arms and Roman coins have been found.

DUNTON WITH MILLO, a parish in the hundred of Biggleswade, co. of Bedford, 3½ m. E. by S. from Biggleswade. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £10. Patron, Earl Spencer. Church ded. to St Mary, Pop., in 1801, 336; in 1831, 413. A. P., 2,428.

DUNTON, a parish in the hundred of Cottesloe, co. of Bucks, 5 m. S.E. by E. from Winslow. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £9 9s. 7d. Patron, Earl Spencer. Church ded. to St Martin. Pop., in 1801, 85; in 1831, 116. A. P., £1,660.

DUNTON, a parish in the hundred of Barstable, co. of Essex, 4 m. N.N.W. from Horndon-on-the-Hill. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, rated at £14 13s. 4d., and in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge. Church ded. to St Mary. Pop., in 1801, 121; in 1831, 133. A. P., £3,176.

DUNTON, a hamlet in the hundred of Codsheath, lath of Sutton-at-Hone, co. of Kent, 2 m. N.W. by N. from Seven-Oaks.

DUNTON, a parish united to that of DOUGHTON, in the hundred of Gallow, co. of Norfolk, 3 m. W. by N. from Fakenham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £5 6s. 8d., returned at £111. Patron, in 1829, T. W. Coke, Esq. Church ded. to St Mary. Pop., in 1801, 121; in 1831, 126. A. P., £1,773.

DUNTON-BASSETT, a parish in the hundred of Guthlaxton, co. of Leicester, 4 m. N. from Lutterworth. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £6 0s. 10d., returned at £75. Patron, in 1829, George Payne, Esq. Church ded. to All Saints. Pop., in 1801, 407; in 1831, 514. A. P., £1,983.

DUNWICH, a borough and parish, and anciently a market-town, possessing separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the hundred of Blything, co. of Suffolk, 98 m. N.E. from London, and 29 m. from Suffolk. It is supposed to have been a town of the Britons, or a Roman station; it is also said to have possessed a mint; and William Newburgh, who wrote in the reign of Hen. II., styles it a wealthy and famous sea-port. During the heptarchy, it was the metropolis of East Anglia, and the episcopal seat for that kingdom "was placed here upon the consecration of Felix, the first bishop, about A. D. 630. Upon the division of this diocese, A. D. 673, the bishops of Suffolk continued their residence here, till the whole kingdom was reunited under the bishops of Elinham, in the 10th century. After which, here was a cell of monks, who were subordinate to Ely; but this, with many other churches and religious houses, was some ages since swallowed up by the sea." Such was the original importance, opulence, and extent of this place, that it contained 6 parishes and upwards of 50 religious foundations; but being situated on a hill, composed of loose sand and loam, it has suffered so repeatedly from inundations of the sea that it is now reduced to a small village and parish, the living of which is a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Norwich. Patrons, Lord Huntingfield and Col. Baine. This town sent two members to parliament ever since the 23d of Edward I. until disfranchised by the reform act. The corporation consists of a recorder, two bailiffs, and 12 burgesses, a coroner, town-clerk, and sergeant-at-mace, with other subordinate officers. They hold courts of assize and session, also a court of requests for the recovery of debts under £2. within the borough. The market is on Monday: there is an annual fair on the 25th of July. Pop., in 1801, 184; in 1831, 232. A. P., £522.

DUNWORTH, a hundred at the S.W. extremity of Wilts, on the borders of Dorsetshire, containing 10 parishes. Pop., in 1831, 6,747.

DURBOROUGH, in the hundred of Cannington, co. of Somerset, 8½ m. N.W. by W. from Bridgewater.

COUNTY-PALATINE OF DURHAM,

A maritime county, bounded on the E. by the German ocean; on the N. by Northumberland, from which it is separated by the Derwent and the Tyne; on the W. by Cumberland; and on the S. by Yorkshire. It extends 36 m. from N. to S., and 45 m. from E. to W., measures 180 m. in circumference, and comprises about 610,000 acres. This county is within the diocese of Durham and province of York, and forms an archdeaconry, comprehending the deaneries of Chester-le-Street, Darlington, Easington, and Stockton, and containing 75 parishes, of which 32 are rectories, 23 vicarages, and 20 perpetual curacies: there are also 21 independent and 177 dissenting chapels. The market-towns are—Sunderland, Darlington, Barnard-Castle, Bishop-Auckland, Gateshead, Hartlepool, Sedgefield, South-Shields, Staindrop, Stanhope, Stockton-upon-Tees, and Walsingham. There are 74 acting magistrates. Durham is divided into 4 wards, viz. Chester ward, Darlington ward, Easington ward, and Stockton ward. But, besides these divisions, there is a detached portion of the county, consisting of Islandshire, and Northamshire, separated from the county by Northumberland, and containing 73 square miles of excellent and well-cultivated land. Pop., in 1801, 160,561; in 1831, 253,700. A. P., £791,359.

General Features.—The general aspect of the sea coast is flat and barren compared with the western and central parts of the country, which abound with fertile valleys, and a pleasing variety of hill and dale.

Rivers.—The principal rivers are the Derwent, the Wear, and the Tees. The Derwent, rising near Northumberland, and crossing an angle of Durham, falls into the Tyne by Newcastle. The Wear rises in the moors between Yorkshire and Durham, and flowing in a circuitous direction, falls into the sea at Sunderland. The Tees also has its source in the moors, and falls into the sea below Stockton. These rivers do not afford any great facility to the internal navigation of the county.

Soil, &c.—The soil, towards the S.E. is of a fertile, clayey loam; westward, and bordering upon Sunderland, it is very poor; in the vicinity of the rivers a deep and dry loam abounds; and a clayey soil of intermediate quality is to be found in different parts of the county. From the variety of the soil it is not easy to estimate the agricultural produce. The best lands here are supposed to yield no more than 20 or 30 bushels of wheat per acre, barley from 30 to 40, and oats from 20 to 40. The produce of the hay lands is generally less than a ton, and the woodlands are very inconsiderable. The climate is so variable that the harvest, which commences sometimes in August, is often protracted till the beginning of November, particularly in the western parts. Cattle are abundant, and of a superior kind, particularly the Durham short-horns, as they are called. Tees-water was long celebrated for its breed of sheep, but these have been replaced by the Leicester-shire breed. The S.E. part of the county is famous for draught horses, known by the name of Cleveland bays.

Mineral Productions.—The mineral productions are coal, iron, lead, limestone, &c. The coal district occupies a space 22 m. long, and 11½ broad, the strata varying in thickness and quality; that in the western part of the county is considered the best, and is worked for land sale only, whilst most of the collieries in the northern parts are wrought for exportation. The quantity of coal annually obtained here, has been estimated in the water-sale collieries, to be 1,333,000 chaldrons, employing 7011 pitmen; and in the land-sale collieries, 147,080 chaldrons, employing 380 pitmen; but the coal trade is very variable here, and, through the operation of railways, is likely to be more so. The coals are drawn out of the pits on machines worked by steam. Iron-ore abounds in the western parts of the coal district, and is reported by tradition to have been wrought by the Danes. At the termination of the coal district, the lead-mines begin, some of which have been worked from the reign of Edward VI. The number of lead-mines working in this county is about 86; the rent paid to the proprietor is about one-fifth of the ore; 32 cwt. of clean ore usually produces 20 cwt. of lead. The adjoining strata consists of limestone, one vein of which, in Weardale near Frosterly, is so beautifully variegated, and capable of receiving so high a polish, as to be frequently used instead of marble. The magnesian limestone district commences at South

Shields, goes along the coast to near Hartlepool, south of which the red sand-stone district begins, and extends to above Croft Bridge. All this is a very fine loam, containing rich arable and pasture. The magnesian westerly line passes by Ferry Hill, and out of the county into Yorkshire, about Pierce bridge. This is generally a cold, and not particularly fertile, district. West of this line, from South Shields to Shorley Bridge (North), the coal district extends diagonally across the county, by Pontoss, Hamstorsly, &c. to Staindrop. West of this line is the lead district, under the blue or metalliferous limestone, which is much used for agricultural purposes, for which the magnesian limestone is less fit, being distinguished from the other by the name of hot lime.

Manufactures, Railways, &c.—The principal manufactures are those of woollen, linen, paper, glass, and iron. Ship-building is extensively carried on at Sunderland and South Shields, which, with Stockton, are the most important ports; for the county, considering its extent, is by no means amply supplied with harbours. The great road from London to Berwick enters the county from Croft in Yorkshire, and passing through Darlington, Durham, and Chester-le-Street, quits it at the passage of the Tyne for Newcastle. The Darlington and Stockton railway, completed in 1825, at an expense of £125,000, advanced by sixty shareholders, extends 25 m., and has various branches diverging from it; the line is worked by two fixed locomotive engines, working four inclined planes ½ m. in length; coal, lime, &c., are conveyed along it at the rate of three-half-pence per ton, per mile, merchandize at three-pence per ton, and coaches drawn by two horses are charged three-pence per mile. Among other railways, are those connected with the harbour of Seaham and the renovated port of Hartlepool; also the Clarence railway, intended to connect Durham and the districts west of Ranshyford with Stockton.

Franchise.—Till 1832, this county returned two members; and the only place within it separately represented, was the city of Durham, which also returned two. The county is now divided into two parts, the northern division containing the wards of Chester and Eastington, and the southern those of Darlington and Stockton. Each division is represented by two members,—nominated, for the northern, at Durham, and for the southern, at Darlington. The other polling-places for the first are Sunderland, Lanchester, Wickham, Chester-le-Street, South Shields; and for the second, Stockton, Bishop-Auckland, Stanhope, Middleton, Barnard-Castle, Sedgely. In the north division, Durham and Sunderland return each two members; Gateshead and South Shields one each; in the south there is no town with parliamentary representation.—At the general election in December, 1832, one of the members chosen for South Durham, was a quaker. On giving his affirmation, in place of swearing the oaths, he was allowed to take his seat in the House of Commons. North Durham, including two of the wards, must not be confounded with the detached portions of the county, to which the name used to be applied—the districts of Holy Island, Norham, and Bedlington; these are now, in respect of representation, joined with the northern division of Northumberland. There is another insulated part of the county—Craik—30 miles to the south of the Tees; in representation it is now joined with the N. R. of Yorkshire.

History.—The territory of the co.-palatine of Durham, between the rivers Tees and Tyne, belonged to the province of Maxima Caesariensis, and constituted part of the extensive territories of the Brigantes, a British tribe before the invasion by the Romans. When the Anglo-Saxons established themselves in S. Britain, this county formed part of the southern portion of the kingdom of Bernicia, taking that appellation in its widest extent, subsequently contained in that of Northumbria, and under Alfred and his successors it was called Doorham, signifying Forest land. Christianity was introduced here in the 7th century, and many religious and monastic foundations had taken place previously to the incursions of the Danes, who, notwithstanding the victories gained over them by Alfred and other Saxon princes, preserved their own laws, customs, and languages, till the accession of Canute the Dane, the events of whose reign and of those who succeeded him, gradually led to the amalgamation of the Danes and Saxons into one people. When Oswald, king of Northumbria, had embraced Christianity, the task of converting the Northumbrians was undertaken by Aidan, a Scottish monk, who chose for the residence of himself and brethren, the island of Lindisfarne, where, it is said, his successor built a church and covered it with reeds after the manner of those in Scotland. At this time the Scottish church had not admitted the ecclesiastical superiority of the bishops of the Romish church, but disputed its supremacy with Wilfred, afterwards archbishop of York, in whose favour, however, the dispute was decided by a synod held in the abbey of Whitby in 664. The Danish conquests in England towards the close of the 8th century, occasioned the cathedral and monastery of Lindisfarne to be abandoned, and when Alfred's exertions had subdued the invaders, Chester-le-Street was fixed on as a place of greater security for the residence of the ecclesiastics, and the whole county was included in the patrimony of St Cuthbert, who had been the second bishop of Lindisfarne, and being canonized after his death was considered the patron saint of the diocese. The Danish invasion in the reign of Ethelred, in 995, compelled the bishop and his clergy to seek refuge in the monastery of Ripon, and upon the restoration of peace it was thought expedient to remove the bishop's see from Chester to Dunholme. "Upon the removal of the bishop's see hither, by Bishop Aldwin, about the year 995, Bishop W. de Carilepho, with consent of the pope and king, was expelled; a prior and convent of Benedictine monks were placed herein, who continued till the general dissolution in the time of Hen. VIII., when the bishopric was valued at £3,138 9s. 8d. per ann. in the whole, and £2,821 1s. 5d. clear, and the revenues of the church at £1,366 10s. 9d. per ann., Dugd.; £1,615 14s. 10d. ob. Speed; £2,215 Comp. Comp. The tutelar saint of this cathedral and county was St Cuthbert, whose body was magnificently enshrined behind the high altar. But King Hen. VIII. named it, the Cathedral Church of Christ, and the Blessed Virgin, upon his refounding and endowing it, ann. reg. 33, for a dean, 12 prebendaries, 12 minor canons, 16 lay singing-men, and other officers and ministers."—Tanner's Not. Mon. The gifts and oblations of the wealthy flowed in profusely, and this was the origin of the present city of Durham. In the 20th year of Bishop Edmund, the Scots made an irruption as far as Durham, but were defeated, and lost nearly all their troops. At the time of the Norman conquest, Bishop Egelwin, with the Earls Edwin and Morcar, swore allegiance to William at York. The possession of the northern part of Northumbria being thought insecure, the entire subjugation of it was soon after entrusted by William, to one Comyn, a Norman nobleman, who, though warned by Egelwin of the turbulent spirit of the people, pursued his march to Durham with 700 troops, where he and his followers were put to death by the inhabitants, against whom William immediately sallied forth, and devastating the whole country, devoted its inhabitants to military execution. His troops were scarcely withdrawn, when Malcolm, king of Scotland, penetrated through Cumberland, into Cleveland to the bishopric, laid waste Teesdale, and burned the towns and monasteries of Wearmouth and Hartlepool. Under the Normans, the patrimony of the church was compelled, with the possessions of the laity, to provide soldiers and military aid: and Bishop Egelwin, having again taken part in the enterprise of the Earls Edwin and Morcar, was taken—through treachery—with the other heads of his party, in the Isle of Ely, from whence he was sent prisoner to Abingdon, where he died in confinement; his successor was shortly after put to death in an insurrection at Gateshead. After the establishment of the Norman rule over all the provinces of England, the most serious calamities of this county were the frequent incursions of the Scots, to whose devastations it was more particularly exposed, by its vicinity to the border. The most remarkable military transaction within the county, seems to have been the battle of Nevill's Cross, fought on the Red-hills on the 17th of Oct., 1346, between David, king of Scotland, and Philippa, queen of Edward III., assisted by Ralph, Lord Nevill, in which the Scots lost from 15,000 to 20,000 men, and their king was taken prisoner.

During the parliamentary war, in 1640, the Scottish army, entering Newcastle on the 28th of August, took possession of Northumberland and Durham. An accommodation was shortly after entered into with Scotland, and the first parliamentary article was, that Durham, Northumberland, and Newcastle, should be charged with £850 per day, to be paid weekly, for the maintenance of the Scottish troops; under which burden they laboured until the conclusion of the definitive treaty with Scotland, which took place on the 7th of Aug., 1641, when the British debt to the bishopric of Durham was £25,663 13s. 10. The day following the defeat at Newburn, Bishop Morton fled from Durham to Stockton, from thence to York and London, and never returned to his diocese. The majority of the clergy at this time deserted the cathedral, and the see and episcopal government of Durham were virtually dissolved. In 1642, the earl of Newcastle having been ordered to lead his forces towards York, commenced his march from Newcastle, and the next day passed the Tyne at Pier's-bridge. No subsequent act of any importance occurred here until the Scottish army entered Sunderland on the 4th of March, 1644. The marquess of Newcastle, with the Yorkshire cavalry, commanded by Sir G. Lucas, being in possession of the city of Durham, kept them in check until the dilemmas in Yorkshire recalled the marquess from the North. On the 20th of April, the parliamentary troops, under Fairfax, were joined at Tadcaster by Col. Lesley. Newcastle was captured on the 19th of Oct. following, which placed the bishopric of Durham under the power of parliament. In 1646, when the Scots had determined to deliver up King Charles to the English parliament, he was removed from Newcastle to Durham, and from thence to Richmond. In 1651, and 1652, two acts were passed for the sale of the estates of some royalists, who would not compound for them. In 1653, the county of Durham, or a committee so styling themselves, addressed Lord General Cromwell and his council, expressing adherence to his person and government, but it was signed by only one individual of considerable family or connexions. This county, which in consequence of its palatine privileges had never sent knights or burgesses to parliament, was represented in 1553-4 and 56. The restoration caused the restitution of the see of Durham, December 14th, 1660.

DURHAM, the capital of the county-palatine of Durham, is in the ward of Easington, 259 m. N. from London, and 16 m. S. from Newcastle. Its situation is particularly striking and picturesque. It is built on a rocky eminence rising near the centre of the county, and almost surrounded by the river Wear, the banks of which are here finely wooded. The city descends in steep winding streets to its three bridges, which terminate in long suburbs. Pop., in 1801, 7,530; in 1831, 10,125. A. P., £26,076.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—It comprises the following parishes, all in the archd. and dio. of Durham: viz. St Giles, a perpetual curacy of the certified value of £20 6s., but returned at £50. Patron, the marquess of Londonderry. St Mary-le-Bow, a perpetual curacy of the certified value of £15, returned at £150. Patron, the archdeacon of Northumberland. St Mary-the-Less, a rectory, not in charge. Patron, the lord-chancellor. St Nicholas, a perpetual curacy of the certified value of £13

19s. 4d., returned at £80. Patron, the marquess of Londonderry. St Oswald's, a vicarage rated at £17, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham. St Margaret's, or Crossgate, a perpetual curacy annexed to the vicarage of Oswald, under the same patronage. The Independents, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, Society of Friends, and Roman Catholics, have each places of worship here. The charitable institutions are very numerous. During the protectorate an attempt was made to establish a university here, but the design was checked at the Restoration. It has been brought forward again very recently, and will probably be carried into execution soon. The bishopric of Durham is one of the most wealthy benefices in the kingdom. It is rated in the king's books at £2821 1s. 5d., but its real annual revenue is supposed to exceed £20,000. It includes the county of Durham, the parish of Alston in Cumberland, and all Northumberland,—with the exception of the peculiar jurisdiction of Hexhamshire,—making a total of 135 parishes, whereof 87 are impropriate; there are 2 archdeaconries and 9 deaneries. The dignity attached to this see is very great. The bishop being count palatine and custos rotulorum of the county, and till his privileges were abridged by Hen. VIII., he had the power to create barons, appoint judges, convoke parliaments, raise taxes, and coin money; the court of justice were held in his name, and he could grant pardons for any offences or felonies; he granted markets and fairs, and was lord-admiral within the county-palatine. The judges and officers of the court still receive their ancient salaries from the bishop who even now has the right of pre-iding at the assizes, and appointing the high-sheriff, who accounts to the bishop and is not responsible to his majesty's exchequer. The number of children receiving gratuitous education in this city and its suburbs amounts to 1072.

History.—The origin of this city is attributed to the monks of Lindisfarne, or Holy Island, who had been compelled to flight by the Danes, and, after occupying some intermediate stations, were returning to their church at Chester-le-Street, bearing with them the disinterred body of their founder, St Cuthbert, who had been buried at Lindisfarne in 687, when the carriage which contained the body and other relics, being obstructed by some accident, they superstitiously interpreted the incident to be an interposition of Providence prohibiting the return of St Cuthbert's remains to their former resting place, and therefore they halted and fixed their residence on the eminence then called Dunholme, and the buildings they erected formed the nucleus of the infant city.

The Cathedral.—Towards the close of the 11th century the magnificent cathedral was commenced. Its situation is extremely imposing, extending along an elevation 80 ft. perpendicular from the river which flows at its base. The length of the edifice is 480 ft.; the height of the central tower 212, and that of the two western, each 143 ft. It is principally of Norman architecture with an intermixture of all the English styles, affording a most instructive series of examples illustrating the gradual change of style which took place during the reigns of the three first Henries, till 6 degrees, the pointed had completely superseded the semicircular arch, and the heavy clusters of the Norman pillars were polished into the light shafts of the early English. The spacious transept, called the chapel of the Nine Altars, is 130 ft. long, and 51 ft. wide; and the gallery at the west end measures 80 ft. from N. to S. and 50 from E. to W. The bishop's throne is erected over the magnificent tomb of Bishop Hatfield. The organ-screen is elaborately carved in oak; but it is of Italian character and does not perfectly harmonise with that of the cathedral. Behind this screen is the chapel called the Feretory, where stood the shrine of St Cuthbert, anciently one of the richest in the kingdom, but at the Reformation despoiled of its costly and gorgeous ornaments. During the progress of some alterations immediately behind this shrine, in the year 1827, the vault supposed to contain these holy relics was opened, and an oak chest was discovered in which lay the perfect skeleton of the saint wrapped in silk and linen; after having been some time open for inspection, the chest was covered and the vault closed. The north aisle of this cathedral was for a long time used as a register office for wills, but in 1822 it was re-united to the fabric, and divine service is performed in it every Sunday evening during summer. The library attached to the cathedral contains five books of Ecclesiastical history, written by Bede, and a copy of the Bible, both in manuscript, and supposed to be 600 years old.

The Castle.—The castle, now used as the occasional residence of the bishop, is situated to the north of the cathedral in a large open area, called the Palace-green. Its erection is attributed to William the Conqueror, and is in many portions of it, in a ruinous state. The habitable part consists of a mass of buildings of various dates, from the Norman to the present time. The interior is fitted up in a style subsequent to the reign of Elizabeth. The keep or tower is the most ancient part. From the Palace-green is an avenue leading to the public walks on the banks of the river.

Government.—The government of Durham—according to the charter granted in 1780—is vested in a mayor, recorder, 12 aldermen, 24 common-council-men, town-clerk, two sergeants-at-mace, and other inferior officers. This corporation is designated "the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of Durham and Framwellgate;" they hold a court leet and a court baron, as lessees of the manor under the bishop, for the recovery of debts under £2. A court of pleas for the county-palatine is held by prescription every three weeks, with trial twice a year before the judges, going their northern circuit; it is a superior court of record, in which sums to any amount are recoverable; the assizes for the county are also held here. In the market-place is the guildhall, erected by Bishop Tunstall, in 1555, and repaired by

G. Bowes, Esq., in 1752. The exchequer—built in 1450 by Bishop Neville—is on the Palace-green, it contains offices for the auditor, cursor, prothonotary, treasurer, and clerk of the county, registrar, &c. In 1809 a house of correction, county-courts, and a new gaol were erected at the expense of £120,000, the prisoners are divided into 13 classes, there are 48 wards, 3 work-rooms, 18 day-rooms, and 13 airing-yards, a chapel, school-room, &c. The prisoners are chiefly employed weaving linen-cloth and woollen.—The elective franchise was first conferred in 1673, since which time the city has returned two members to parliament. The present number of electors is about 673. The mayor is the returning officer.

Trade, &c.]—The trade of Durham is not so extensive as it formerly was. There are manufactories for hats, stuffs, and carpets, and for spinning and combing wool, also a brass-foundry, and two iron-foundries. A market for corn and provisions is held on Saturday. Fairs for horned cattle, sheep, and horses, are held on the 29th, 30th, and 31st of March, Whit-Tuesday, Saturday before the 13th of May, September 15th, and Saturday before the 23d of November; the March fair is considered the best on account of the superior breed of horses which are then brought to sale. The neighbourhood of the city is famous for large crops of mustard.—Among the most eminent literary natives of this city, may be mentioned Dr Richard Gray, author of the 'Memoria Technica' and other works, who died in 1771. John Hall, an English poet, and the translator of Eugenius; and William Eden, Lord Auckland. Durham gives the title of earl to the Lambton family.—About one mile westward from the city, are the remains of a magnificent cross, erected by Ralph, Lord Neville, to commemorate a battle fought between the English and the Scots in 1346, in which David Bruce, the Scottish king, was defeated and taken prisoner, with the loss of 15,000 men.

DURLEIGH, a parish in the hundred of Andersfield, co. of Somerset, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.S.W. from Bridgewater. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells, returned at £20. Patron, in 1829, Mr Dunning. Pop., in 1801, 104; in 1831, 139. A. P., £746.

DURLEY, a parish in the lower half-hundred of Bishop's Waltham, Portsdown division, co. of Southampton, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. by S. from Bishop's Waltham. Living, a curacy, not in charge, subordinate to the rectory of Upham, and within the jurisdiction of the Cheyney-court held at Winchester. Pop., in 1801, 304; in 1831, 361. A. P., £1263.

DURLEY, a tything in the parish of Eling, county of Southampton.

DURNFORD, a hamlet in the hundred of Rowbarrow, Blandford division of the county of Dorset.

DURNFORD (GREAT), a parish in the hundred of Amesbury, though locally in the hundred of Underditch, co. of Wilts, $2\frac{3}{4}$ m.

S.S.W. from Amesbury, comprising Little Durnford, Nitton, Satterton, and Newtown. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury, returned at £145 8s., and in the patronage of the prebendary of Durnford, in the cathedral of Salisbury. Church ded. to St Andrew. On the brow of a hill in this parish is an extensive earthen work, called Ogbury camp, but resembling an ancient residence of the Britons more than a military station; it has not any fosse and is intersected by numerous small banks. Near this spot is a seat called Durnford-house. This parish is included within the boundaries of Wilton borough by the new boundaries act. Pop., in 1801, 399; in 1831, 481. A. P., £3,996.

DURRINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Bradford, co. of Sussex, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. from Worthing. The church is in ruins, and the inhabitants attend divine service at Tarring. Pop., in 1801, 140; in 1831, 162. A. P., £823.

DURRINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Amesbury, co. of Wilts, 3 m. N. from Amesbury. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury, returned at £43 3s. 6d., and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Winchester. In this neighbourhood are the remains of the ancient British town of Durrington, or Long Walls. Pop., in 1801, 394; in 1831, 467. A. P., £2,041.

DURSLEY, a market-town and parish, in the upper division of the hundred of Berkeley, co. of Gloucester, 108 m. W. by N. from London, and 15 m. S.W. by S. from Gloucester. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, rated at £10 14s. 4d., and annexed to the archdeaconry of Gloucester in 1447. Patron, the bishop of the diocese. Church ded. to St James. Here are places of worship for dissenters, and also a school for the children of the poor. This town is agreeably situated at the source of a small stream called the Carn. Dursley was one of the boroughs included in the return made by the sheriff of Gloucestershire in the reign of Edward I., but it does not appear that it ever sent members to parliament. At any rate, if it ever had, it has long since lost the privilege. It is the principal place of election for the members for the western division of the county. The local authorities are a bailiff and 4 constables, appointed annually, but their power is limited to the superintendence of the police, and the examination of weights and measures. Near the centre of the town is a market-house built in 1738. The market was chartered by Edward IV., in 1471. It is held on Thursday, and there are fairs for the sale of cattle and pedlery on the 6th of May, and on the 4th of December. Pop., in 1801, 279; in 1831, 3226. A. P., £5,565.

DURSTON, a parish in the hundred of North Rotherton, co. of Somerset, 4 m. N.E. by N. from Taunton. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells, of the certified value of £26. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. R. Gray. Church ded. to St John. The priory of Buckland-Sorum was founded here in 1167, but it was suppressed and gave way to an establishment of the Knights Hospitallers. Pop., in 1801, 169; in 1831, 226. A. P., £2,376.

DURWESTON, a parish in the hundred of Pimperne, North Blandford division of the co. of Dorset, 3 m. N.W. from Blandford-Forum. Living, consolidated with the rectory of Bryanston. Patron, in 1829, E. B. Portman, Esq. Church ded. to St Nicholas. The parish of Knighton is united to that of Durweston. Pop., in 1801, 332; in 1831, 418. A. P., £1,808.

Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, returned at £93 5s. 5d. Patron, in 1829, Viscount Melville. Church ded. to St Mary. About the year 1112, a monastery for Black canons was founded here by William Peverel, natural son of William the Conqueror, it was styled St James' abbey, and some remains of it are still visible. Pop., in 1801, 386; in 1831, 603. A. P., £3,071.

DUTTON, a township in the parish of Great Budworth, co.-palatine of Chester, 5 m. E. from Frodsham, near the river Wever and on the banks of the Grand Trunk canal. It gives the title of baron to the duke of Hamilton, and was, in former times, the seat of the ancient family of Dutton, who were lords of the manor. The remains of Dutton-hall exhibit a remarkably fine specimen of the domestic architecture of the 16th century. Pop., in 1801, 301; in 1831, 329. A. P., £2,279.

DUTTON, a township in the parish of Ribchester, hundred of Blackburn, co.-palatine of Lancaster, $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. N. by W. from Blackburn. Pop., in 1801, 388; in 1831, 490. A. P., £1,961.

DUTTON-CACCA, a township in the hundred of Bromfield and parish of Holt, co. of Denbigh, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. from Wrexham, upon the river Dee. Pop., in 1801, 99; in 1831, 103. A. P., £1,025.

EATON-HALL. This exquisitely beautiful mansion is situated about 3 m. to the south of Chester, on the edge of an extensive park, abounding with large and venerable timber. The level of the park is considerably above the banks of the river Dee, which flows through a great extent of fertile meadows, about 200 yards to the east. The house is of the Gothic style of architecture, built on the site of the old mansion, erected by Sir Thomas Grosvenor, in the reign of King William. The style of architecture is cathedral Gothic of the age of Edward III. The same style prevails in the interior, but more or less embellished to suit the uses of the apartments respectively. The windows—which are rich in tracery—are of iron. The park is flat, but the distant country is elevated. To the west the mountains of Wales rise directly in front; and to the south and east the hills of Shropshire and Cheshire, with that remarkable knoll on which Beeston-castle is situated. The city of Chester lies on the north. The principal approach to the house is from the west, through a triple avenue formed by four rows of majestic limes, and terminated by a noble lodge in the same style as the house, called Belgrave lodge, from a large district in the domain of Eaton that gives the third title of viscount to the Grosvenor family. The entrance to the house is in the middle of the west front, under a vaulted portico, which admits a carriage to the steps that lead to the hall, a spacious and lofty room, occupying the height of two stories, with a vaulted ceiling. The ground staircase is highly ornamented with niches and canopies. The saloon is a square of 30 feet, formed into an octagon by arches across the angles. The windows of these rooms are glazed with a light mosaic tracery, and exhibit the portraits of the six earls of Chester, who, after Hugh Lupus, governed Cheshire as a co-palatine, till Henry III. bestowed the title on his son Edward. The dining-room, situated at the northern extremity of the east front, is about 50 feet long and 30 feet wide, exclusive of a bow containing five arched windows, the opening of which is 30 feet. The drawing-room, which is at the southern extremity of the east front, is of the same form and dimensions as the dining-room. The library is in the centre of the south front. The middle window of the saloon opens to a vaulted cloister occupying the space between the dining and drawing-rooms in the east front, which affords a sheltered walk in all weathers. A flight of steps leads from the cloister to a spacious terrace 350 feet long, laid out in gravel-walks and beds of flowers, from whence other steps at each end, and in the middle, descend to the gardens and pleasure-grounds. Eaton-hall was designed by and executed under the direction of Mr Porden.

EDDYSTONE LIGHTHOUSE. This celebrated pharos is erected on one of the rocks of that name, which lie in the English channel about 14 m. S.S.W. from Plymouth. The nearest land to the Eddystone rocks is the point to the west of Plymouth called the Ram Head, from which they are about 10 m. almost directly S. As these rocks—called the Eddystone, in all probability, from the whirl or eddy which is occasioned by the waters striking against them—were not very much elevated above the sea at any time, and at high water were quite covered by it, they formed a most dangerous obstacle to navigation, and several vessels were every season lost upon them. It was therefore very desirable that the spot should, if possible, be pointed out by a warning light. But the same circumstances which made the Eddystone rocks so formidable to the mariner, rendered the attempt to erect a lighthouse upon them a peculiarly difficult enterprise. The task, however, was at last undertaken by a Mr Henry Winstanley, of Littlebury in Essex. He began to erect his lighthouse on the Eddystone rocks in 1696, and it was finished about four years after. It appears to have been a polygonal building of stone, and, when it had received its last additions, of about 100 feet in height. Still the sea in stormy weather ascended far above this elevation. On the 26th Nov. 1703, there came on the most terrible tempest which was ever known in England. Next morning not a vestige of the lighthouse was to be seen. The next lighthouse was begun in July, 1706; and in 1709 it was completed in all its parts. It differed from its predecessor in two important respects,—being not of stone, but of wood; and not angular, but perfectly round. Its entire height was 92 feet. This building stood till 21 Dec. 1755, when it was consumed by an accidental fire. On the 5th of August, 1756, Mr Smeaton, the celebrated civil engineer, commenced preparations for erecting the present lighthouse. On the 12th of June, 1757, the first stone was laid; on the 26th of August, 1759, all the stone-work was completed; on the 9th of October following, the building was finished in every part; and on the 16th of the same month the saving light was again streaming from its summit over the waves. Thus the whole undertaking was accomplished within a space of little more than three years, “without the loss of life or limb,” says Mr Smeaton, “to any one concerned in it, or accident by which the work could be said to be materially retarded.” During all this time there had been only 421 days, comprising 2674 hours, which it had been possible for the men to spend upon the rock; and the whole time which they had been at work there was only 111 days 10 hours, or scarcely 16 weeks. Smeaton’s lighthouse has stood ever since, and promises yet to stand for many centuries. It is, as has been mentioned, of stone, and is a round building, gradually decreasing in circumference from the base up to a certain height, like the trunk of an oak, from which the architect states that he took the idea of it. Among many other tempests which it has endured unshaken, was one of extraordinary fury, which occurred in the beginning of the year 1762.

ELSDON, an extensive parish, forming the whole S. division of Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 18 m. W.N.W. from Morpeth. It comprises the townships of Elsdon ward, Monkridge ward, Otterburn ward, Rochester ward, Troughend ward, and Woodside ward. It extends nearly 18 m. in a line E. by S., its breadth is about 6 m. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham, rated at £20, though its real value is little short of £2000. Patron, the Duke of Northumberland. Church ded. to St Cuthbert. This parish, which was formerly covered by Redesdale forest, and even within these few years presented little more than large heaths and extensive morasses, contains some fine seams of coal. Lime-stone and iron-stone also abound here. A fair for cattle, sheep, linen, and woollen-cloth, is held on the 26th of August. Elsdon castle, now the rectory-house, was built in the reign of Hen. III. by David, king of Scotland. The town of Elsdon is supposed to have belonged to the Romans in the time of M. Aurelius Antoninus, and was probably the first of a chain of forts between Watling-street and its eastern branch called the Devil's causeway. At a short distance, N.E. of the village, is an entrenchment, designated Meat-hill; it is surrounded by a ditch, and is supposed to have been used by the Romans as a place of sepulture. About 2 m. N.W. of the village is Tod-law, an eminence on which are three stone columns, set up to the memory of some Danish chiefs. The entire pop. of the parish, in 1801, amounted to 1694; in 1831, to 1724. A. P., £19,508. The population of the township, in 1801, was 267; in 1831, 308.

Living, a discharged vicarage, in the archd. and dio. of Rochester, rated at £3 2s. 6d. Patrons, the trustees of Sir Gregory Page Turner. Church ded. to St John the Baptist. It consists of a nave, aisles, and chancel, with a western tower and lofty spire, and is the depository of the remains of the learned and pious Bishop Horne. Among the celebrated persons buried in the church-yard, we may mention John Philipott, Somerset herald; John Lilbourn, a noted republican of the 17th century; Dogget, the actor, cotemporary with Colley Cibber; and Dr Sherard, the celebrated botanist. Here is a place of worship for Independents, and a free school. The village is irregularly built, but contains several good houses, and the environs abound with noble mansions and elegant seats. At the N.E. extremity of the parish is Shooter's-hill—so named from its having been used for the practice of archery—it is celebrated for the beauty of its situation, and the extent of its prospects. The parish is within the jurisdiction of a court of requests, held once a week at Greenwich, under an act passed in 47^o Geo.

III., for the recovery of debts not exceeding £5. Eltham is chiefly celebrated as having been anciently the site of one of the most magnificent English palaces. The property is ascertained to have belonged to the crown in the time of the Saxons. The Conqueror granted it to one of his Norman followers; but having again been forfeited to the crown, it was given by Edward I. to one of the most powerful barons of those times, John de Vesci. Soon after this it came into the possession of Anthony Bec, the famous military bishop of Durham, who built a large and splendid mansion, which appears to have been completed soon after the middle of the 13th century, King Henry III., accompanied by his queen, and all the principal nobility, having kept his Christmas here in 1269. On the death of the bishop, which took place here in 1310, the manor of Eltham fell again to the crown, in the possession of which it has ever since remained. For the next two centuries the place was a favourite residence of our monarchs. Edward II.'s son, John, was born here in 1315, and was thence called John of Eltham. In the reign of Edward III. the parliament was on several occasions assembled at Eltham; and here that prince, in 1365, entertained his captive, John, King of France, with sumptuous hospitality. The palace was almost entirely rebuilt by Edward IV. Large additions were afterwards made to the building by Henry VII., who, like his predecessors, generally lived here, and was wont to dine every day in the hall, surrounded by his barons. At this time the royal palace of Eltham consisted of four quadrangles enclosed within a high wall, beyond which was a moat of great width; the whole formed an irregular area, approaching to a square in shape. To the palace were attached a garden and three parks, comprehending together above 1300 acres, besides the demesne lands of 400 acres more. These parks were stocked with deer, and many fine old trees that still remain testify how richly wooded the place must have formerly been. Of all this magnificence but little now remains; and many parts of the buildings can scarcely be traced even in their foundations. Henry VIII. deserted Eltham for the new palace of Greenwich, which, as being nearer to London, was probably found to be a more convenient residence. After this Eltham was only occasionally visited by the sovereign; which sometimes was even in the time of James I. On the establishment of the Commonwealth the place was seized by the parliament and sold; and at the same time the parks were broken into, and the deer dispersed and killed by the soldiers and the common people. The work of devastation, thus begun, was continued until the greater part of the palace, also, was first reduced to a heap of ruins, and then swept away altogether; and although the property was recovered by the crown at the restoration, no pains seem to have been taken to save the remnant of the pile from spoliation and destruction. On the contrary, the business of demolition was now carried on upon system: the old palace was turned into a quarry; and stone after stone was carried away as it was wanted for even the meanest purposes, until scarcely anything remained which it was thought worth while to remove. Fortunately, it was considered that the hall would make a good barn; and to this ignoble appropriation, which so well hit the economical humour of the times, we owe the preservation, in a state of comparative entireness, of this principal and most interesting portion of the noble old palace of Eltham. According to Mr Buckler, who published a valuable account of this palace a few years ago, the length of the hall in the inside is above 101 feet by about $36\frac{1}{2}$ in width. "The interior," says this writer, "is magnificent. The taste and talent of ages are concentrated in its design; and it is scarcely possible to imagine proportions more just and noble, a plan more perfect, ornaments more appropriate and beautiful; in a word, a whole more harmonious than this regal banquetting room." The windows, which, however, have been long built up, are ranged in couples along both sides; and each series is terminated by a bay window at the west or upper end of the hall. But the most conspicuous ornament of this fine room is its splendid roof. "The main beams of the roof," says Mr Buckler, "are full 17 inches square and 28 feet long, perfectly straight and sound throughout, and are the produce of trees of the most stately growth. A forest must have yielded its choicest timber for the supply of this building; and it is evident that the material has been wrought with incredible labour and admirable skill." About four years ago the public attention was called to the state of this beautiful remnant of our ancient architecture, which it was understood there was an intention of levelling with the ground, on the pretext that the roof threatened to fall if not taken down. By the exertions, however, of some individuals of taste and influence, a reconsideration of the subject was obtained; and eventually it was determined by the government to advance a small sum, in order to effect such a partial repair of the hall as might at least secure its stability for the present. The work was committed to the superintendence of Mr Smirke, by whom it was executed with much ability; and the roof is now once more restored as far as was practicable, to its original strength and beauty. Pop., in 1801, 1627; in 1831, 2005. A. P., £11,553.

ELWY (THE), a river of Glamorganshire, South Wales, which falls into the Severn at Pennarth.

ELWY (THE), a river in Denbighshire, North Wales, falling into the Clwyd at St Asaph.

ELY (ISLE OF), a large district comprising four hundreds and formerly a great portion of the co. of Cambridge. It extends from the bridge of Tyd on the N. to Upmere on the S., a distance of about 28 m., and from Abbots on the E. to the river Mere, near Peterborough, on the W., about 25 m. On the W. it is bounded by the counties of Northampton and Huntingdon; on the N. by Lincolnshire; and on the E. by Norfolk and part of Suffolk.

ELY, an ancient city and the capital of the above named district in the co. of Cambridge, 66 m. N.E. from London, and 15 N.E. from Cambridge. Its situation is on elevated ground at the northern extremity of the Isle, and on the river Ouse which is navigable from Lynn for barges. It consists of one principal street well-paved and lighted, with smaller streets branching off in various directions of the town, in the centre of which there is a spacious market-place. Many of the houses are built of stone and have an antiquated appearance, but, with the exception of the cathedral, the town has few architectural ornaments. The ground in the vicinity, though flat and marshy, is very fertile, and a considerable portion of it is cultivated by market-gardeners. Exclusive of the extra-parochial liberty of the college, this city comprises the parishes of St Mary, and the Holy Trinity, in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the dean and chapter. The living of St Mary's is a perpetual curacy returned at £87. The living of the Holy Trinity is a perpetual curacy returned at £95 11s. There are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and other dissenting bodies. The king's grammar school, founded in 1541 by Henry VIII., is now conducted as a national school. The municipal government of the city is vested in magistrates appointed by the bishop, and their jurisdiction extends over the Isle of Ely. It is divided into three wards, each having a separate constable. This city sent members to parliament in the 23^d of Edward I., but not on any subsequent occasion. The spring assizes for the Isle of Ely, and the Easter and Michaelmas quarter-sessions are held here. This place is supposed to have derived its name from Helgy, the Saxon for a willow, which tree abounded here, or from Elye,—signifying an eel—these fish being very abundant on account of the marshy nature of the soil. Tanner says that—"the tradition about King Ethelbert's founding, at the instance of St Augustine, a church or monastery here, or at a place about a mile from hence called Cradindene, seeming not to be well grounded; Etheldreda, one of the daughters of King Anna, and wife first to Tombert prince of this country, and afterwards to Egrifd king of Northumberland, may more justly be accounted the first beginner of a very famous religious society here, about

A.D. 673. This first church was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary, and in it the service of God was performed both by monks and nuns, who lived together under the government of an abbess, according to the usage in those early times, at Coludesbergh (where the royal foundress and first abbess made her profession of a monastic life,) and other Saxon monasteries; and in this state probably it continued near two hundred years, till this country was over-run, and all the houses of religion destroyed by the heathen Danes, about A.D. 870. Some few years after, a small number of the religious men that had escaped the massacre, returned hither, and repairing some part of the church and buildings, lived here as secular priests under the government of provosts or arch-priests for about one hundred years. But in the year 970, Ethelwold, bishop of Winchester, introduced abbot and regulars, nobly re-edified the monastery, and amply endowed the same, partly by his own purchases, and partly by the munificence of King Edga, and other benefactors. A.D. 1108, the see of a new bishoprick, taken out of the diocese of Lincoln, was established here, which occasioned a division of the lands of this rich abbey between the bishop—who was in place of the abbot—and the prior and monks; the share of the bishop was valued 26^o Hen. VIII., at £2134 18s. 6d. ob., and what remained to the convent was reckoned at £1081 6s. 9d. ob. per ann. Dugd.; £1301 8s. 2d. Speed. This monastery was dedicated to St Peter and St Etheldroda, commonly called St Aubrey, and in it were a prior and between thirty and forty monks of the order of St Benedict. Upon their surrender, King Henry VIII. placed here, A.D. 1541, a dean and eight secular canons or prebendaries, with vicars, lay clerks, choristers, a schoolmaster and usher, and twenty-four king's scholars, &c., and endowed them with the site and greatest part of the lands belonging to the priory.—An ancient hospital here, founded probably by some of the bishops, and partly maintained out of the revenues of the bishopric, occurs 16^o Hen. II., in the account of the vacancy upon the death of Bishop Nigell. But it is not evident whether the hospital of Ely, there mentioned, was that of St John Baptist or that of St Mary Magdalene, two hospitals, both in Ely, which were united by Bishop Hugh Norwold, about A.D. 1240, and managed by some of the monks of the priory till the year 1158, when Bishop William Gray made one of his secular chaplains master or warden. It was valued, 26^o Hen. VIII., at £25 5s. 3d. ob. q. per ann.; and, 4^o Eliz. settled on the master and fellows of Clare-hall in Cambridge." The cathedral is a noble structure, begun in 1081, completed in 1534. The north and south transepts are the most ancient parts of the building. The great west tower was re-built about the middle of the 14th century, the original tower having fallen down in 1322. The interior of this cathedral derives a simple grandeur of effect from the harmonious arrangement of the various styles of architecture. The choir consists of a range of six arches and is lighted by a double range of windows, the roof is remarkably elegant. Over the altar is a fine painting descriptive of Peter's delivery from prison by an angel. There are several interesting monuments, among which is the tomb and effigies of Bishop Alcock, the tomb of Tiptoft, earl of Worcester, and his two wives, also the monuments of several bishops. The entire length of the edifice from E. to W. is 535 ft.; from N. to S. 190 ft.; the height of the lantern over the dome 170 ft.; the height of the western tower 270 ft.; the length of the nave 203 ft.; the height of its roof 104 ft.; the breadth of the nave and aisles 76 ft.

ENFIELD, a parish and town in the hundred of Edmonton, co. of Middlesex, 10 m. N.E. from London. It is divided into three districts, viz. Town quarter, Green-street quarter, and Bull-cross quarter, each having a separate church-warden and overseer. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, rated at £26. Patrons, the master and fellows of Trinity college, Cambridge. Church ded. to St Andrew. Here are places of worship for various bodies of protestant dissenters. The free grammar school was founded in 1507. The town consists of two streets, in which are several very good houses. The manor of Enfield belonged to Walden abbey, and was a royal residence in the 16th century, when Edward VI. held his court here. When queen of England, Elizabeth made this her chief residence, and in the early part of her reign held her court here. James I., when he resided at Theobalds, made frequent excursions to this forest, which at that time was well-stocked with deer. In 1777 it was completely disforested by act of parliament. Edward I. and James I. granted charters for a market to this place, but they have long been disused; fairs, however, are held here on Sept. 23d—which is a statute fair,—St Andrew's day, and Nov. 3d, for horses, cattle, and cheese. The magistrates for the county hold a petty session here every second Wednesday: courts-leet and baron are held on the Wednesday in Whitsun-week. Enfield is one of the polling-places for the members for Middlesex. The inhabitants appoint their own coroner. Pop., in 1804, 5881; in 1831, 8812. A. P., £33,033.

ENFIELD. See ENVILLE.

ENGLEFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Theale, co. of Berks, 6 m. W. from Reading. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £11 12s. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Patron, R. C. W. Benyon, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 336; in 1831, 411. A. P., £1,893.

ENGLEWOOD, in the parish of Kintbury, co. of Berks, $\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. from Hungerford.

ENGLEWOOD-FOREST stood near Carlisle, in the co. of Cumberland. It is now but a dreary moor, having been disforested by Henry VIII.

ENHAM (KNIGHTS), a parish in the hundred of Andover, co. of Southampton, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. N. from Andover. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Winchester, rated at £10. Patrons, the provost and fellows of Queen's college, Oxford. Church ded. to St Michael. Pop., in 1801, 89; in 1831, 123. A. P., £770.

ENHAM (King's), a hamlet in the parish of Andover, co. of Southampton, 2 m. N. from Andover. It is within the jurisdiction of the Cheyney-court held at Winchester.

ENIAN (THE), a river of Cornwall, which falls into the Tamar near Brownwally.

ENMORE, a parish in the hundred of Andersfield, co. of Somerset, 4 m. W.S.W. from Bridgewater. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £8 4s. 2d. Patron, the earl of Egremont, who enjoys the inferior title of Lord Lovel and Holland of Enmore. Enmore castle—the seat of this nobleman—is a large quadrangular building, embattled on each side, and surrounded by a dry ditch 16 ft. deep and 40 ft. wide; the approach to it is by a curiously constructed drawbridge. Pop. of this parish, in 1801, 254; in 1831, 294. A. P., £1,912.

ENNERDALE, or ENDERDALE, a parochial chapelry in the parish of St Bees, Cumberland, 5 m. N.E. from Egremont, on the banks of the Eden. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, returned at £43. Patron, in 1829, S. C. Curwen, Esq. There is a school here. The earl of Lonsdale, as lord of the manor, holds a court here at Michaelmas. A sheep fair is held on the 2d Tuesday in September. Pop., in 1801, 190; in 1831, 192. A. P., £2,559.

ENODER (Sr.), a parish in the hundred of Pyder, co. of Cornwall, 3 m. N.E. from St Michael. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter, rated at £26 13s. 4d. Patron, the bishop of Exeter. Fairs for cattle, sheep, &c., are held at Summer Court in this parish on the 28th of July and 25th of September. Pop., in 1801, 869; in 1831, 1124. A. P., £5,303.

ENODOCK (Sr.), a chapelry in the parish of St Minver, co. of Cornwall, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. from Padston. Pop. returned with the parish.

ENSIAM, or EYNESHAM, a parish in the hundred of Wootton, co. of Oxford, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. E. by S. from Witney. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, rated at £15 14s. The church, ded. to St Leonard, is a fine Gothic structure; near it is a singular cross of great age. There are an Independent chapel here, and a well-endowed school. Here was a Benedictine abbey, built and endowed by Athelmaire, or Ailmer, earl of Cornwall and Devonshire. This monastery was valued, 26th Henry VIII., at £421 16s. 1d. Till within the last century, a custom prevailed in this parish, by which the town's people were allowed, on Whit Monday, to cut down and carry away as much timber as could be drawn by men's hands into the abbey-yard, the churchwardens previously marking such timber, by giving the first chop. This place is of great antiquity, and derives its name from the Saxon Egonesham. Pop., in 1801, 1166; in 1831, 1858. A. P., £8,016.

ENSON, a joint township with Salt, in the parish of St Mary, co. of Stafford, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. from the town of Stafford. Pop., in 1801, 370; in 1831, 533. A. P., £2,303.

ENSTONE-CHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Chadlington, co. of Oxford, $\frac{3}{4}$ m. N.E. from Neat-Enstone, containing the hamlets of Cleaveley, Enstone-Church, Enstone-Neat, Gagingwell, Lidstone, and Radford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, rated at £9 14s. 4d. Patron, C. D. Lea, Esq. Church ded. to St Kenelm. Here is a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists. Pop., in 1801, 912; in 1831, 742. A. P., £6,856.

ENTWISLE, a township in the parish of Bolton, co.-palatine of Lancaster, $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. from Great-Bolton. Pop., in 1801, 447; in 1831, 701. A. P., £1,684.

ENVILLE, or ENFIELD, a parish in the S. division of the hundred of Seisdon, co. of Stafford, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.N.W. from Stourbridge. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, rated at £27 2s. 11d. Patron, the executors of the Rev. R. Wilkes. Church ded. to St Mary. There is a charity school here. The elegant mansion of Lord Stafford forms one of the principal ornaments of this place. It appears to have been built at different periods, and consists of a centre and two wings, the former lying in a recess formed by the latter. In the front is a fine lawn sloping down to a beautiful lake, over which is a little rustic bridge adding much to the picturesque appearance of the whole. Pop. of this parish, in 1801, 799; in 1831, 766. A. P., £7,076.

ENWORTH, or YANWORTH, a chapel-ry in the parish of Hazleton, co. of Gloucester, 4 m. from North Leach. Pop., in 1801, 97; in 1831, 123. A. P., £1,465.

EPITON. See BATTLE, Sussex.

EPPING, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Harlow, co. of Essex, $16\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. by N. from London, and $17\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. by S. from Chelmsford, comprising the hamlet of Ryhill, and the chapelry of Epping-Upland. Living, a vicarage in the peculiar jurisdiction of the court of the commissary of London, concurrently with the consistorial Episcopal court, rated at £17 13s. 4d. Patron, H. J. Conyers, Esq. Church ded. to All Saints. Here are also a chapel-of-ease, which formerly belonged to the monks and abbot of Waltham, vested in trustees for the use of the inhabitants, and a Quaker's meeting-house, and a chapel for Independents. A national school, and a Sunday school, are supported by subscription. This town was originally a hamlet of Waltham-abbey, and has long been celebrated for its royal chase, extending from Epping to the vicinity of London. This forest is still the scene of an annual festival, called the Epping-hunt, which has been long established. A little to the S.E. of this, is the forest of Hainault, where stood the venerable Fairlop-oak, which flourished for many centuries, and around it an annual fair was kept. This tree was lately cut down, and furnished timber for the pulpit of St Pancras new church. The forest is under the jurisdiction of a lord-warden, whose office is hereditary, and four verdurers elected by the county freeholders. The forest rights vary according to the tenure prevailing in the different manors in the district. Its original limits have been gradually contracted, and several thousand acres have been thrown into cultivation, and many elegant villas built here. The town of Epping is small and irregularly built. It is celebrated for its butter, pork, and sausages. The market is on Friday. The fairs are on Whit-Tuesday and the 13th of November. A statute fair for hiring servants is held on the 11th of October. The lord of the manor holds courts leet and baron annually. Pop., in 1801, 1779; in 1831, 2313. A. P., £7,991; of these, Epping-Upland, and Ryhill, contained, in 1801, 256; in 1831, 427. A. P., £4,741.

EPPLEBY, a township in the parish of Gilling, N. R. of the co. of York, 9 m. N.E. from Richmond. Pop., in 1801, 168; in 1831, 206. A. P., £1,224.

EPPLETON (GREAT), a township in the parish of Houghton-le-Spring, co.-palatine of Durham, $7\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.N.E. from Durham. Pop., in 1801, 35; in 1831, 47. A. P., £727.

EPSOM, a parish, formerly a market-town, in the lower half-hundred of Cophorne and Eppingham, co. of Surrey, 16 m. E.N.E. from Guildford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester.

ter, rated at £8 9s. 9^d. Patron, in 1829, Col. Rowls. Church ded. to St Martin. Among the incumbents of Epsom was the Rev. J. Boucher who made some valuable collections for an improved edition of Johnson's Dictionary. Here is a place of worship for Independents. This place, to which the Saxons gave the name of Elusham, does not appear to have been of any great extent until the discovery in 1618, of a medicinal spa, when it became a fashionable resort and rapidly increased in buildings and population. Another source of attraction was the institution of annual races on the downs. These commence on Tuesday and continue till the end of the week preceding Whitsuntide. The grand stand, lately erected at an expense of £13,890, accommodates 5000 persons. A fair for toys is held on the 5th of August. The county-magistrates hold a petty-session here for the division once a month, and the town is within the jurisdiction of a court held at Kingston for the recovery of debts. A court-baron is held in April, and a court-leet in October. Pop., in 1801, 2404; in 1831, 3231. A. P., £13,056.

EPWELL, a chapelry in the parish of Swalcliffe, co. of Oxford, 7 m. W. from Banbury. Living, a perpetual curacy, subordinate to the vicarage of Swalcliffe, in the archd. and dio. of Oxford. Chapel ded. to St Anne. Patronage with Swalcliffe rectory. Pop., in 1801, 234; in 1831, 367. A. P., £1,528.

EPWORTH, a market-town and parish in the west division of the wapentake of Manley, co. of Lincoln, 10 m. N.W. from Gainsborough, and 160 m. N.W. from London. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £28 16s. 8d. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Church ded. to St Andrew. Here are places of worship for Baptists, Quakers, and other dissenting bodies; and a school founded in 1711. John Wesley, the celebrated founder of the sect of Arminian Methodists, was born in this parish in 1703, during the incumbency of his father who held the rectory 59 years. Mr Alexander Kilham, founder of a class of seceders from that sect, called Kilhamites, was also a native of this place. This town is of considerable extent, but narrow and irregularly built; the surrounding lands are flat. Great quantities of flax are grown in the neighbourhood, the dressing of which forms the chief branch of trade. There is also a considerable manufacture of sacking and canvass. The market is on Tuesday, the fairs are on the first Thursday after May 1st, September 29th for cattle, hemp, and flax. The lord of the manor holds a court-leet twice in the year. Pop., in 1801, 1434; in 1831, 1825. A. P., £8,312.

ESSEX,

A maritime county on the east coast of England, bounded on the N. by Suffolk and part of Cambridgeshire; on the W. by Hertford and Middlesex; on the S. by the Thames, which separates it from Kent; and on the E. by the German ocean. It is about 60 miles long and 50 broad, and its superficial surface is about 942,720 statute acres. This county is in the dio. of London and prov. of Canterbury. It comprises the archdeaconries of Essex, Colchester, and part of Middlesex. That of Essex contains the deaneries of Barnstable, Barking, Chafford, Chelmsford, Dengie, Ongar, and Rochford; that of Colchester, the deaneries of Colchester, Lexdon, Newport, Sampford, Tendring, and Witham, and that portion of the archdeaconry in Middlesex which is in this county, those of Dunmow, Harlow, and Hedingham. The number of parishes is 400, of which 250 are rectories, 134 vicarages, and the remainder perpetual curacies. Before the dissolution, Essex contained 47 religious houses. Its civil divisions are the following 14 hundreds, viz. Barstable, Becontree, Chafford, Chelmsford, Clovering, Dengie, Dunmow, Freshwell, Harlow, Hinchford, Lexdon, Ongar, Rochford, Tendring, Thurstable, Uttlesford, Waltham, Winstree, and Witham, and the royal liberty of Havering-athe-Bower. The borough and market-towns of Colchester, Chelmsford, and Maldon; the borough, market-town, and port of Harwich; and the market-towns of Barking, Billericay, Braintree, Brentwood, Chipping-Ongar, Coggeshall, Dunmow, Epping, Grays-Thurrock, Halstead, Malden, Manningtree, Rayleigh, Rochford, Romford, Thaxted, Saffron-Walden, Waltham-Abbey, and Witham; besides Bradfield, Dedham, and Horndon, the markets of which are disused, are in this county. It sends four members to parliament for the shire. The two for the northern division are elected at Braintree; the two for the southern at Chelmsford.

Rivers.]—Its principal rivers are the Thames, the Crouch, the Lea, the Coln, the Blackwater, the Chelmer, the Stort, and the Rodden. The Thames forms the S. boundary of the county, from the influx of the Lea to the German ocean, with the exception of about 2 miles, where a slip of land on the Essex side, forming part of the parish of Woolwich, is included in the county of Kent. The Crouch flows eastward, and falls into the German ocean. The Lea rises in Hertfordshire, and falls into the Thames at Blackwall. The Blackwater, Chelmer, and the Coln, rise among the hills N. W. of the county. The Blackwater has its source near Saffron-Walden, and flowing by Braintree, Coggeshall, and Witham, joins the Chelmer near the Malden. The Coln, flowing E. by Halstead and Colchester, falls into the German ocean opposite Mersea island. The Stort, which rises near Haverhill on the borders of Suffolk, is navigable up to Sudbury, and falls into the German ocean at Harwich. The Rodden rises N. W. of the county, and flowing southward, falls into the Thames 2 miles below Barking. The London and Cambridge canal passes on the N. W. of the county.

General Features.—Essex forms the southern part of that tract of country on the eastern coast, which forms the most extensive level in the island. It is, however, dry and arable, and the climate mild. There is great diversity in the soil and face of this county. The south-west abounds with wood and pasture. The north is more open and hilly; but towards the sea-coast becomes marshy, and being deeply indented by arms of the sea, is often overflowed. Every species of loam is to be found here, besides a portion of light gravelly sand. Very extensive agricultural improvements have been made in this county. The chief productions of the soil are wheat and other grain, beans, peas, tares, rape, mustard, rye-grass, hops, and saffron. The annual quantity of grain sent from hence to London is estimated at 250,000 quarters of wheat, and 150,000 quarters of malt, besides large quantities of beans, peas, &c. Essex is proverbially famed for its breed of calves. Its principal manufactures are baizes and other coarse woollens. Calico-printing is also established here; and on the banks of the Lea are some mills for making sheet-lead.

History.—Essex, at the time of Cæsar's invasion, formed part of the territorial possessions of the Trinobantes, and in the subdivision of Great Britain by Constantine, this county was included in the province termed Flavia Cesariensis. Its present name is coeval with the foundation of the East Saxon kingdom about the year 530, when it was called East Saxa, from its relative situation to the other Saxon kingdoms. From the year 787 to the division of England between Canute and Edmund, Essex was frequently harassed by the Danes. The most memorable events, during that period, were the recovery of Colchester from the Danes in 921, by Edward the Confessor, and a battle between Canute and Edmund Ironside. The next important event on record, connected with Essex, is Wat Tyler's rebellion, in the reign of Richard II. The Norman conquest, which occasioned a general revolution of property, brought extensive domains here to the family of Bohun, earls of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton. These possessions, in 1421, were divided between King Henry V. and Anne, countess of Stafford, they being co-heirs of that distinguished family. At Tilbury, in 1588, Queen Elizabeth reviewed her troops, assembled to oppose the Spanish invasion. In 1642, at the beginning of the civil war, the popular feeling seems to have been in favour of the parliamentarians. The last important transaction connected with this place was the sea-fight off Harwich, 3d of June, 1665, in which the Dutch were defeated by the duke of York, and had 14 vessels destroyed and 18 captured. The population of Essex, in 1801, was 226,437; in 1831, 317,000. A. P., £1,556,836.

ESSINGTON, a township in the parish of Bushbury, co. of Stafford, 4 m. N.E. by N. from Wolverhampton. Pop., in 1801, 369; in 1831, 598. A. P., £3,619.

Living, a perpetual curacy to the vicarage of Ormsby, in the archd. of Cleaveland and dio. of York. Patronage with Ormsby vicarage. This village stands on the ascent of a detached hill called Barnaby, or Eston-moor, the summit of which is called Eston-Mab. Pop., in 1801, 288; in 1831, 334. A. P., £2,152.

ESTON, a hamlet, formerly a distinct parish, in the parish of Arthurst, Cumberland.

ETAL, a township in the parish of Ford, Northumberland, 9 m. N.N.W. from Wooler. Here are two schools and a Presbyterian chapel. Etal-house belongs to Lord Viscount Kilburne. At the west end of the village are the ruins of Etal castle, built in the reign of Edward I., by Sir Robert Manners, and captured by James IV. before the battle of Flodden.

ETCHELLS, a township, partly in the parish of Northern and partly in that of Stockport, hundred of Macclesfield, co.-palatine of Chester, 4 m. W.S.W. from Stockport. It contains a free school. Pop., in 1801, 1,269; in 1831, 742. A. P., £6,421.

ETCHILHAMPTON, a parish in the hundred of Swanborough, co. of Wilts, 3 m. E.S.E. from Devizes. Living, a perpetual curacy subordinate to the rectory of All-Cannings. Chapel ded. to St Andrew. Pop., in 1801, 206; in 1831, 270. A. P., £2,035.

ETCHINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Henhurst, co. of Sussex, 6 m. S.E. from Wadhurst. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester, rated at £11. Patroness, in 1829, Dame A. Lade. Pop., in 1801, 414; in 1831, 631. A. P., £2,815.

ETLOE, a tything in the parish of Awre, co. of Gloucester, 6 m. S. from Newnham.

ETON, a parish in the first division of the hundred of Stoke, and deanery of Burnham, co. of Buckingham, 1 m. N. from Windsor, and 23 m. W. by S. from London. Living, a rectory in the peculiar jurisdiction and incumbency of the provost of Eton college. The church having fallen to decay, public worship is performed in the college-chapel. There is also a chapel-of-ease in the town. Tanner informs us—"The Kyng's college of our Lady by Eton besyde Wyndesore, was founded by King Henry VI., ann. reg. 19, (1446) for a provost, 10 priests, 4 clerks, 6 choristers, 25 poor grammar scholars, with a master to teach them, and 25 poor old men; and, though some of its endowment was taken away by King Edward IV., yet it still continues—being particularly excepted in the acts of dissolution—in a flourishing state, with some small alteration in the number of the foundations, which now consists of a provost, 7 fellows, 2 schoolmasters, 2 conductors, an organist, 7 clerks, 70 king's scholars, and 10 choristers, besides officers and servants. It was valued, 26th Hen. VIII., as having in spiritualities £547 7s. 1d., in temporalities £554 5s. 6d., in all £1101 12s. 7d.; but clear, after reprises and deductions, only £886 12s." The school is divided into upper and lower, and these are subdivided into three classes. Besides the scholars on the foundation, there are a great number of stipendiary pupils, the sons of noblemen. The former are entitled to fellowships and scholarships in King's college, Cambridge, for which there is an annual election, though they are only removed as vacancies occur, which are about 9 in two years. They succeed according to seniority, and on three years' residence at college obtain a fellowship. For the unsuccessful candidates, there are two scholarships in Merton college, Oxford. There are several other bequests and endowments connected with this establishment.—The building comprises two courts or quadrangles, communicating by a beautiful ancient gateway. In the centre of the outer court is a statue of Hen. VI. The chapel, formerly called Christopher-hall, is an elegant Gothic structure resembling in its style and decorations the chapel of King's college, Cambridge. The inner court contains apartments for the provost and fellows and the splendid college library, supposed to be one of the most valuable collections in Europe. The pleasure grounds on the north-west of the college are very extensive.—The peculiar custom designated the Montem, takes place here triennially, on Whit-Tuesday. The object of this ceremony is to collect 'salt-money' from those whom curiosity may have led to the spot. The sum collected has often exceeded £1000, which—deducting the expenses of the day—is given to the senior scholar on his removal to Cambridge. The scholars appointed to collect the money are called 'salt-bearers,' who array themselves in fustian dresses, and take their stations on all the neighbouring roads, and in acknowledgment of the contributions they receive, give the donors a ticket with a Latin motto, which exempts them from further importunity. The origin of this custom is uncertain, though it has been traced as far back as the reign of Elizabeth, being included in the list presented to her majesty when on a visit here.—Among the provosts of Eton, were Sir Henry Saville and Sir Henry Wotton, both these celebrated individuals are interred in the college chapel. A fair of horses and cattle is held on Ash-Wednesday. Formerly this town had a market, but it is discontinued. By acts of parliament passed in the 25th Hen. VI., any person letting or engaging lodgings within this place without leave of the provost, is liable to be fined £10. Pop., in 1801, 2026; in 1831, 3232. A. P., £9,095.

ETRURIA, a hamlet in the parish of Stoke-upon-Trent, co. of Stafford, 1½ m. E. from Newcastle-under-Lyne. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here. This village derives its name from its being the seat of Josias Wedgewood the ingenious imitator of Etruscan vases, &c. The potteries here are very extensive.

ETTERBY, a township in the parish of Stanwix, Cumberland, 1 m. W. from Carlisle. Pop., in 1801, 49; in 1831, 110.

ETTINGSHALL, a hamlet in the parish of Sedgeley, co. of Stafford, 3 m. S.S.E. from Wolverhampton.

EVESHAM, a borough and market town in the lower division of the hundred of Blackenhurst, co. of Worcester, 95 m. N.W. from London, and 16 S.E. from Worcester. It has separate jurisdiction, and comprises three parishes—All Saints, St Lawrence, and St Peter-Bengworth, in the archd. and dio. of Worcester. The living of All Saints is a discharged vicarage, rated at £10 16s. 0½d. Patron, the lord-chancellor. The living of St Lawrence is a perpetual curacy to the vicarage of All Saints, also in the patronage of the lord-chancellor. Here are places of worship for Baptists, Wesleyan Methodists, Quakers, and Unitarians. This town was formerly celebrated for an abbey, relative to which Tanner gives us the following information,—“Egwin, the third bishop of Worcester, by the help of Ethelred and Kenred, kings of Mercia, built and endowed this abbey, A.D. 701, to the honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary, for monks of the order of St Benedict, who continued here till they were displaced and secular canons put in their room, A.D. 941. The monks were restored A.D. 960, dispersed a second time A.D. 977, restored once more A.D. 1114, from which time they kept their footing here till the general dissolution by King Henry VIII., when their possessions were valued at £1183 12s. 9d. per ann. Dugd.; £1268 9s. 9d. Speed. The site was granted 3½ Hen. VIII., to Philip Hobby, Esq.” The abbots of this monastery had seats in the house of peers. The principal fragment of this once magnificent pile is an elliptical gateway 17 ft. high.—The town of Evesham is delightfully situated on an acclivity rising from the banks of the Avon, over which there is a handsome stone bridge. It is a borough by prescription, and was originally governed by a bailiff, but being incorporated by James I., in the 3^d of his reign, has from that time been governed by a mayor, 7 aldermen, 12 capital burgesses, a recorder and chamberlain, with inferior officers. Four of the aldermen and the mayor for the time being are constituted justices of the peace, and hold a session of oyer and terminer and gaol-delivery, with power to try and punish all offences excepting high-treason. The last infliction of capital punishment occurred here in 1740. A court of record is held every Tuesday, for the recovery of debts to the amount of £100, by charter of James I.; a court of session is also held on the Friday after the county quarter-sessions. The Worcester assizes were formerly held here. This borough returned members to parliament in the 23d of Edward I., but after that king's reign it discontinued doing so till the accession of James I., since which it has regularly sent two members. The electors on the new principle of franchise are about 330 in number. The chief manufacture carried on here is that of stocking-weaving. The principal employment of the labouring poor is that of gardening, large portions of ground on each side of the Avon having been converted into gardens; the crops produced in this celebrated vale of Evesham, are earlier and more abundant than any in the neighbouring districts. The produce is sent for sale to Cheltenham, Tewkesbury, and other places. The market is on Monday; fairs are held on the 2d of February, the first Monday after Easter, Whit-monday, and the 21st of September; the last of these is celebrated for its show of strong black horses.—Evesham is distinguished in history for one of the most remarkable and decisive battles in the English annals, fought here on the 6th of August 1265, between the forces of Henry III., commanded by Prince Edward—afterwards Edward I.—and Simeon de Monfort, earl of Leicester. The issue of this contest was the decisive defeat of the earl and his confederates, the release of the king and his subsequent reinstatement on the throne.—The free grammar school in this place was originally endowed by Abbot Lichfield. It was afterwards the free school of Prince Henry. The master receives £10 per ann. from the crown with a house and other emoluments. There is also a school at Bengworth, founded in 1709. Sir Charles Cocks, Bart, on being raised to the peerage in 1784, assumed the title of Lord Somers, Baron of Evesham, which is held by the present earl of Somers. Pop., in 1801, 2937; in 1831, 3991. charged rectory, rated at £11 6s. 4d. Patrons, the dean and chapter.—18th. St Sidwell's a perpetual curacy. Patron, the vicar of Heavitree. These parishes are all—with the exception of St David's and St Sidwell's which are in the jurisdiction of the dean and chapter—in the archd. and dio. of Exeter. The churches are small, and none of them require particular notice. Chapels-of-ease have been added to many of the parishes. The places of worship for dissenters are numerous; and there is a Roman Catholic chapel and a Jews' synagogue.

Cathedral.—Exeter was made a bishop's see in the reign of Edward the Confessor, A. D. 1040. The bishopric includes Devonshire and Cornwall, excepting the deanery of St Burian in the latter county. This ecclesiastical establishment consists of a bishop, dean, sub-dean, precentor, chancellor, treasurer, 4 archdeacons, 24 prebendaries—9 of whom are residentiary canons—and a registrar. The cathedral is a magnificent structure, exhibiting several specimens of architecture. It was built by Bishop Warlwest, though some historians affirm that it was begun by King Athelstan as early as the year 932. It sustained great damage during the siege of Exeter by King Stephen, but was repaired by Bishop Marshall in 1194. Its extent is 408 ft. from E. to W. including the walls. The height of the vaulted roof is 69 ft., and that of the Norman towers forming the transepts, 130 ft. to the top of the battlements. The nave is 175 ft. in length, and 76 in breadth, within the walls. The roof is supported by 14 columns, from which rise 16 arches. The length of the choir is 120 ft., its breadth about 76. The windows are large, and exhibit fine specimens of tracery and stained glass; particularly the great east and west windows. The bishop's throne, erected in 1466, is a splendid ornament of finely carved woodwork in the Gothic style. The north aisle contains many splendid monuments; among the most remarkable of these are the tombs of Bishop Stafford and Bishop Stapleton. The whole of the interior exhibits a striking combination of grandeur and simplicity. In the south tower there is a curious astronomical clock and 11 bells, 10 of which are rung in peal. The great bell of Exeter weighs 12,500 lbs, or according to another statement, 17,472. "There is no question but in a city so famous as this was in the Roman, British, and Saxon times, here were, early after their conversion to Christianity, congregations and societies of holy men and women: yet it is not certain whether this was the famous monastery of Adestances-ter, wherein St Boniface, the apostle of the Germans, who was born at Crediton in this county, had his education under Abbot Wolfhard, about A. D. 690. The industrious Mr Joseph Hooker, alias Vovell, the first restorer of the antiquities of this city—whereof he was chamberlain—saith, 'That in ancient times, within the precincts of the close, were three religious houses; the first was a nunnery, which is now the dean's house—or as Mr Rison will have it, the Kalendar Hay;—the other was a house of monks, reported to have been built by King Ethelred, A. D. 868; the third was a monastery, founded by King Athelstan, A. D. 932. For this last there is a pretty good authority, and that it was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin and St Peter, and endowed by the munificence of that king with 26 villages, and filled with Benedictine monks, who, not long after, forsook the same for fear of the Danes. But King Edgar, that great restorer of monasteries, A. D. 968, replaced the religious here, who were again forced to fly upon the devastation of this city and country by the Danes, under Swein, A. D. 1003. After this, King Canute encouraged the monks once more to settle here, confirming their lands and privileges, A. D. 1019. But upon the union of the episcopal sees of St Germans and Crediton, and their translation hither, A. D. 1050, the eight monks remaining here were sent to Westminster abbey, and some secular canons placed in their stead by Bishop Leofric. However, the chapter of this cathedral was not fixed to a dean and 24 prebendaries till Bishop Brewer's time, A. D. 1225. The revenues of this bishopric were valued, 26th Hen. VIII., at £1566 14s. 6d. per ann. But so much was shortly after taken from it that they have long been rated at £500 only. Besides, the separate corps of the common revenues of the dean and chapter are rated at £1132 18s. 11d. 6th per ann. There are now belonging to this ancient cathedral a bishop, dean, 24 prebendaries, 4 archdeacons, 4 priests'-vicars, 8 lay-vicars, whereof one is organist, 5 secondaries, 10 choristers, besides voigers, sextons, and other officers.—Gilbert and John Long, merchants of Exeter, were accounted founders of the priory, or rather hospital of St John the Baptist, within the east gate of this city, about A. D. 1239. It was of the order of St Austin, consisted of 5 priests, 9 choristers, and 12 poor, and was valued, 26th Hen. VIII., at £102 12s. 9d. per ann. The site, with the Ankeress-house in the church-yard, was granted, 32nd Hen. VIII., to Thomas Carew, but it was afterwards restored, endowed with several new benefactions, and continues still an hospital under the management of the chamber of this city. Here were also a Benedictine nunnery dedicated to St Katherine, and a Benedictine priory dedicated to St Nicholas: a college or free chapel, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary; an alms house, converted into a college for the vicars choral of the cathedral; an alms house, called the cell of St Alexis, afterwards St Burians; Bonville's hospital; a hospital, called God's house; a Lazar-house, dedicated to St Mary Magdalene; Moore's, Palmer's, Stevyn's, and ten cells, almshouses, and houses of the Black and Grey friars."—Tanner's Not. Mon.

Schools, &c.—The free grammar school of Exeter was founded by the citizens, previous to the date of the charter of Charles I. It is open to the sons of freemen gratuitously. It has 15 exhibitions to either Oxford or Cambridge. There is a blue-coat school, founded in 1661; on this establishment 25 boys are admitted. The blue-maid's school was founded in 1672. The other endowed charity schools of this city are very numerous, and there are several Sunday schools. Among the various benevolent institutions are the Devon and Exeter hospital, opened in 1747, supported by subscription; the lunatic asylum, the eye infirmary, the female penitentiary, the humane society for recovery of drowned persons, a society for the relief of clergymen, their widows, and children, a society for supplying the poor with necessities, and alms-houses in different parts of the city.

Municipal Government, &c.]—This city, which some have named 'the capital of the west,' received its earliest charter from Henry I., which was confirmed by Henry II. and Richard I. Its privileges were extended by Charles I. A new charter was granted by Charles II., and George III., in 1770, confirmed the charter, according to which, the government is vested in a mayor, 24 aldermen, a recorder, chamberlain, town-clerk, sheriff, 4 stewards, and several other officers. The corporation holds a court of assize for the city, and county of the city, twice a-year at the guildhall; the assizes for the county of Devon are held under separate commission, when the judges visit Exeter. The court of requests, for recovery of debts under £2, is held every second week; another court for the same purpose, held every Saturday, by prescription, is traced to the 14th of Edward I., A.D. 1286. The magistrates for the hundred hold petty sessions every Friday. A general court for the benefit of the poor is held on the 1st Tuesday in every month. There are 13 corporate bodies within the city, each of them governed by its own officers. Exeter has sent two members to parliament regularly, since the 23d of Edward I. The right of election was formerly vested in about 1300 freemen; it is now enjoyed by about 2000. The sheriff is the returning officer.

General Description.]—Exeter is finely situated on the slope of a rising ground on the eastern bank of the Exe. In 1769 the ancient walls of this city were standing, but have mostly been taken down since. They included a space of ground 4 furlongs in length and 3 in breadth; the area is intersected by 4 principal streets, all well-paved and meeting at a point called Corfax, whence diverging at right angles, they connect the city with the suburbs. At the western entrance of the town there is a stone-bridge over the river Exe, erected with great difficulty in 1778, owing to the rapidity of the current, at an expense of £20,000; it is a handsome structure built a little above the site of an ancient bridge of 12 arches. In the highest part of the city towards the north, are the ruins of an old castle called Rougemont, anciently the seat of the West Saxons and subsequently occupied by the dukes of Exeter. Within the area of this castle a sessions-house has been erected. The guildhall is a large building in the High-street, it contains the portraits of the duke of Albemarle, George I., and other distinguished persons. Below the castle-hill is the new county-goal, near which are the cavalry barracks. The Devon and Exeter Literary institution was established in 1813, it is supported by 230 proprietors who pay a premium of £40, and £2 annually. There is a mechanic's institution, and a public subscription library. The theatre is a neat modern building, erected on the site of one destroyed by fire. Races take place in July or August, on Haldon, an excellent race-course in the neighbourhood.—The port of Exeter extends from the coast near Lyme-Regis to Teignmouth; a little above Topsham the tide is arrested by the Lower weir. This inconvenience has been greatly remedied by a canal from Topsham to Exeter, navigable for vessels of 50 tons. There are about 25 ships of from 70 to 100 tons burden, trading between this and London; 3 to Liverpool; 5 to Bristol; 10 to Plymouth; and one to Falmouth and Penzance. The chief exports are woollen goods, serges, and drugs, particularly manganese. The imports, wine, hemp, tallow, grocery, &c. The trade of Exeter was originally very extensive in the article of wool, but of late years it has decayed. The cotton-works and manufactory of shawls have declined also. The principal manufacture carried on now is that of coarse cloth. The market days are Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. The fairs are held on the 3d Wednesday in February, 3d Wednesday in May, last Wednesday in July, and the 2d Wednesday in December. There is a large general market on the 2d Friday in each month.

History.]—After the Norman conquest, this city was besieged and captured by William I., who, in order to prevent any future revolt, erected a citadel in the place, which he intrusted to the government of Baldwin de Briornis, earl of Devon, and sheriff for the county. The castle having been garrisoned in 1136 by the adherents of empress Matilda, held out for some months against Stephen. In 1497 Exeter was besieged by Perkin Warbeck. During the parliamentary war Exeter adhered at first to the royal cause; but the opposite principles of the lord-lieutenant gave the advantage to the other party, and the city soon fell into their hands. It was subsequently taken for the king by Prince Maurice and Sir John Berkely, the latter of whom was appointed governor, and it became the head-quarters of the royalists in the west of England. The queen made it her residence, and her daughter the duchess of Orleans was born here. In 1646, it surrendered to General Fairfax, after a blockade of two months, and since that time its history records no very important events. Among the distinguished natives of this city, were Josephus Iscanus, a Latin poet of the 13th century, and cotemporary with him, Baldwin, archbishop of Canterbury; Sir Thomas Bodley, founder of the Bodleian library; Dr Buchan, eminent for his works on heraldry; Mr Locke, composer of music; and Hooker the historian of his native city. The Cecil family derive the titles of earl and marquess from Exeter. Pop., in 1801, 20,568; in 1831, 28,201. A. P., £54,330.

Living, a perpetual curacy, subordinate to the vicarage of Littleham. Here are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyans; and a national school in which 200 children are educated. The town is irregularly built and most of the houses low and inconvenient, but it is much resorted to by invalids for the salubrity of the air, and has become celebrated as a sea-bathing place. In the reign of Edward III., this port furnished 10 vessels and 93 men to aid the king in his war with France. Exmouth gives the title of viscount to the Pellew family. There is no trade but that occasioned by an influx of visitors. Most of the women among the lower class earn their livelihood by lace-making. Fairs are held on the 25th of April, and 28th of October. Pop., in 1801, 1909; in 1831, 3189. A. P., £8,647.

FAIRFORD, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Brightwell's Barrow, co. of Gloucester. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, rated at £13 11s. 5½d. The church, a beautiful Gothic structure, is ded. to the Virgin Mary. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Gloucester. The town is seated at the foot of the Cotswold hills, on the east bank of the river Colne, at a short distance from its confluence with the Thames. It consists of two streets; the principal one of considerable length, but not very regularly formed. It is in the very centre of a large clothing district, and the whole inhabitants are in one way or another employed in that great branch of our national industry. The parish is divided into three tythings, each of which has its tything man, viz. the Borough, which is governed by its own constable, East End, and Mile-Town-End. The market-day is Thursday, and two annual fairs are held May the 14th and Nov. 12th. Fairford seems to have been long a royal manor. In the 9th century it was possessed by the kings of Mercia. From Henry

VII. it came into the hands of John Tame, a pious and wealthy London merchant, in the latter end of the 14th century. One of the ships belonging to the above John Tame having captured a Flemish vessel on her passage to Italy, with a quantity of remarkably rich-stained glass on board, he determined to appropriate it to what was evidently its original purpose—the ornamenting of one or more church windows—and accordingly commenced building the church in 1493. The workmanship of the windows themselves is scarcely less to be admired than the paintings they contain, the lead being thrown into the darker shades of the painting, so as to be almost imperceptible; nor is the church itself unworthy of its windows. Here are chapels for Baptists and Independents, and a free school. The earl of Hillsborough takes the title of viscount from this town. Distance from Gloucester, 24 m. S.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 1326; in 1831, 1574. A. P., £6,301.

FAIRHAUGH, a township in the parish of Allerton, Northumberland, 13 m. N.N.W. from Rothbury. Pop., in 1801, 7; in 1831, 4.

FAIRLEE, a hamlet partly in the parish of Arreton, and partly in the parish of Whippingham, Isle of Wight, co. of Southampton. It is situated on the east side of the Medina, 3 m. S.E. from Newport.

FAIRLIGHT, a parish in the hundred of Guestling, co. of Sussex. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester, rated at £6 9s. 2d. Church ded. to St Andrew. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. — Pierre. The royal military canal terminates in this parish. Distance from Hastings, 2½ m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 414; in 1831, 533. A. P., £2,035.

FAIRMILE, a hamlet in the co. of Devon, of which Polwhele says: “The inn called Fairmile in the village of Fairmile is partly in Ottery and partly in Tallaton. A beam running through the kitchen has a mark in the middle of it to show that one side of the kitchen lies in Ottery and the other in Tallaton. The greater part of this house, as also of the village, lies in the parish of Ottery.” Devon, vol. II. 240. Distance from Ottery-St. Mary, 1½ m. N.N.W.

FAIRSTED, a parish in the hundred of Witham, co. of Essex. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Colchester and dio. of London, rated at £6 13s. 4d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, the bishop of London. Distance from Witham, 4 m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 198; in 1831, 258. A. P., £2,143.

FAITH (St), a parish in the soke of Winchester, co. of Southampton. Living, a rectory annexed to the hospital of St Cross and a peculiar in the dio. of Winchester, not in charge. Patron, the bishop of Winchester. Pop., in 1801, including West Sparkford, and the extra-parochial liberty of St Cross, 310; in 1831, 394. A. P., £1,468.

FAKENHAM (Great), a parish in the hundred of Blackbourn, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, rated at £11 10s.

5d. Church ded. to St Peter. Patron, the duke of Grafton. Distance from Thetford, 5 m. S.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 157; in 1831, 204. A. P., £1,137.

FAKENHAM (Little), a hamlet, formerly a parish, in the parish of Easton, co. of Suffolk. Living, a rectory, not in charge, united to that of Easton.

FAKENHAM-LANCASTER, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Gallow, co. of Norfolk. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £35 6s. 8d. The church, a remarkably fine building, is ded. to St Peter. Patrons, the master and fellows of Trinity college, Cambridge. The town is seated on the slope of a hill on the north of the river Yare. Crapes and bombazines used to be manufactured here to a considerable extent; salt used also to be made here from some celebrated salt-pits, but the working of the pits has been abandoned, and the making of crapes and bombazines discontinued. The market is on Thursday for corn and cattle, and it is well-attended, being considered the largest corn-market in the county. Fairs are held annually on Whit-Tuesday, and the 22d of November, on Hampton-green about a mile from the town. Cattle are the principal, almost the only commodity brought forward. The session for the hundred meets here once a month, and on a hill in the neighbourhood the sheriff keeps an open court for the whole county. The inhabitants claim the privilege of being exempted from serving upon juries. There are chapels here for the Baptists, the Independents, and the Primitive and the Wesleyan Methodists. A Lancasterian school for boys is supported by voluntary contributions, and there is a national one for girls. Distance from Norwich, 25½ m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, including the small hamlet of Alcthorpe, 1236; in 1831, 2085. A. P., £5,677.

FALDINGWORTH, a parish in the wapentake of Lawres, co. of Lincoln. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £15 8s. 1½d. Church ded. to All Saints. Patron, the earl of Brownlow. There is here a free school. Distance from Market-Raisin, 4½ m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 226; in 1831, 296. A. P., £2,397.

FALFIELD WITH MOORTON, a chapelry in the parish of Thornbury, co. of Gloucester, 3½ m. N.E. by E. from Thornbury. Pop., in 1801, 486. In 1831 the population was returned with that of the parish.

FALKENHAM, a parish in the hundred of Colnells, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £7 11s. 3d. Church ded. to St Ethelbert. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Distance from Ipswich, 8½ m. S.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 219; in 1831, 297. A. P., £2,697.

FALKINGHAM, or FOLKINGHAM, a market-town and parish in the wapentake of Aveland, co. of Lincoln. Living, a rectory with the vicarage of Laughton annexed, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £21 12s. 3d. Church ded. to St Andrew. Patron, R. Arkwright, Esq. The town is situated on the brow of an eminence which commands an extensive view of the fens. The market is held on Thursday, and there are fairs on Ash-Wednesday, Palm-Monday, and May 19th for horses and sheep, June 15th for horses and cattle, July 3d for hemp, hardware, &c., and the Thursday after old Michaelmas, and November 22d for horses, cattle, &c. On the site of the old castle of Falkingham built by the lord of the manor, Henry de Beaumont, in the reign of Edward I., and demolished by the orders of Oliver Cromwell on account of its having been garrisoned for Charles I., there has lately been erected at an expense of nearly £15,000, a large prison or correction-house, with a chapel, treadmill, &c. There is here a free grammar school. Distance from Lincoln, 26½ m. S.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 531; in 1831, 744. A. P., £3,632.

"The manor of Falmer extends into the parishes of Chayley, Lindfield, Putcham, Rottingden, Chiltoning, Kingston, Preston, and Stanmer." Burrell's MSS. Distance from Lewes, 4 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 255; in 1831, 432. A. P., £3,188.

FALMOUTH, a parish, market, and seaport-town, having separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the E. division of the hundred of Kerrier, co. of Cornwall. Living, a rectory in the peculiar jurisdiction of the bishop of Exeter, rated at £3. The church is ded. to the memory of Charles I. 'King and Martyr.' Patron, the Hon. and Rev. W. Wodehouse. The town stands on the S.W. side of the estuary which forms the harbour at the mouth of the Fal—after Milford Haven, the best in south Britain. It consists principally of one street, which, under different names, extends along the beach, or rather quay, for nearly a mile. The houses are mostly modern, and have an agreeable and rather imposing appearance. The harbour—sheltered on all sides by the high lands that surround it—is capacious and safe; so capacious, that it is said 100 sail may lie at anchor within it, and not one of them see the top-gallant of another. Such is the depth of water, that the largest vessels come up close to the quay for the purpose of loading or unloading their cargoes. From its situation, too, vessels can proceed on their voyage with ease and safety, while Portsmouth, and Plymouth may by the winds, be, as it were, hermetically sealed; hence, when it is necessary to wait for convoy, Falmouth is the general rendezvous of ships outward bound from Greenock, Liverpool, and Bristol, which thus avoid the sometimes difficult and often tedious navigation up and down the Channel. The entrance is in some measure secured by a large rock in the middle of it, called the Black rock, supposed to be the remains of the island mentioned by ancient historians, where the Phœnicians trafficked with the natives for cargoes of tin. It is defended, besides, by two castles, originally built by Henry VIII., St Mawrs on the east and Pendennis on the west, both of them strongly fortified and garrisoned by invalids. Pendennis—by much the most formidable of the two—was, during the civil war, long held for the king against Oliver Cromwell, whose lines of circumvallation are yet visible in the neighbourhood of the town. Possessing so many advantages, an extensive foreign trade has been carried on from this port for many years. It was among the first ports in the western counties that enjoyed the benefit of the bonding act; and there is not to this day, either in Cornwall or Devon, a tobacco port but itself. From America it imports wheat, flour, rice, wood, staves, &c.; from Portugal and Spain, fruits, wines, salt, and wool; from Holland, oak-bark; from Russia and the north of Europe, iron, hemp, tallow, tar, pitch, sail-cloth, and timber; from the Mediterranean, fruits, oil, and silk; from France, grain, fruits, wines, and brandy; and from Ireland, salted provisions, flour, and feathers. Its exports used to be pilchards in immense quantities—sometimes 14,000 hogsheds in a season; but for some years fish have been less plentiful, and its exports have been confined in a great measure to the produce of the mines—tin and copper. This is the station of the packet-boats for almost every country in the known world; and large quantities of gold and silver are often imported by them. Steam-packets have also been established here, which sail to Lisbon, Coruna, Gibraltar, and other places on the south-west coast of Europe. Ship-building and rope-making are carried on, though not to any great extent. The market-day is Thursday, and there are fairs for cattle annually, August 7th and October 10th. In the early part of the reign of James I. this flourishing sea-port was composed of a few mean fishermen's huts, having only one small cottage and a blacksmith's shop. The cottage was employed as an ale-house for the accommodation of the place, and from the rapid run which the hostess—it was a female that kept it—had for her ale, the place was vulgarly named, and long known by the name of Penry Come Quick. From the blacksmith's shop, it also had the name of Smith-oke, which seems to have been its legal name till it received its charter, 1661, which is said to be the earliest record in which it bears the name of Falmouth. At this period it was a part of the parish of Budack, which still extends itself into the town. It was, however, by this time beginning to be a place of considerable consequence. So early as 1613, the proprietor of the ground, John, afterwards Sir John, Killigrew, perceiving the advantages of the place, began to build a town upon a regular plan, and met with the most violent opposition from the corporations of Penryn, Helston, and Truro, who laid a joint petition before King James, praying him to put a stop to the proposed erection of the town. James referred the petition to the lords of council, who had the good sense to decide in favours of the new town, which proceeded rapidly. In 1670, a quay was constructed by Sir Peter Killigrew, and the subsequent establishment of the post-office packets to Lisbon and the West Indies confirmed its present, and insured its increasing prosperity. It is governed by a mayor, 7 aldermen, and 12 burgesses, aided by a recorder, town-clerk, &c. The mayor is chosen from among the 7 aldermen, and the 7 aldermen from among the 12 burgesses, by a majority of the whole. The mayor, the late mayor, and the recorder, are justices of the peace, with exclusive jurisdiction. The county magistrates hold once a-month here a petty-session for the hundred of Kerrier East division. Besides the established church, there are here places of worship for the Baptists, Bryanites, the Society of Friends, Independents, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, Roman catholics, Jews, and Unitarians. Schools—classical and mathematical—have lately been established by subscription, to which Lord Wodehouse—who seems to be a general benefactor to the town—gave the ground necessary for the buildings. A number of schools for the children of the poor are supported by subscription. In one of these, 30 boys and 30 girls are clothed, and instructed in reading, writing, and arithmetic: the girls are also instructed in needle-work. Another of them—chiefly under the direction of the Society of Friends—educates between two and three hundred children. The merchants' hospital, for the support of disabled seamen belonging to the port of London, and the widows and children of such as are lost in the merchant service, has a branch here, conformable to act of parliament. All merchant-ships and packets registered at the port, pay sixpence a-month to this establishment, which entitles their seamen to rank upon its funds. Distance from Launceston, 60 m. S.W.; from London, 270, W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, of the town, 3684; of the parish, 4165; in whole, 4849: in 1831, of the town, 4761; of the parish, 2523; in whole, 7284. A. P., for the town, £11,534; for the parish, £10,020; total, £21,553.

FALSGRAVE, a township in the parish of Scarborough, within the jurisdiction of the town of Scarborough, N. R. of Yorkshire. Distance from Scarborough, 1 m. S.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 279; in 1831, 391. A. P., £2,150.

FALSTONE, a parish in the N. W. division of Tindale ward, co. of Northumberland. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham, of the certified value of £10. The church was rebuilt in 1825. Patrons, the governors of Greenwich hospital. This is one of six parishes into which the parish of Simonburn was divided by act of parliament in 1811. The North Tyne has its source in a morass within the limits of this parish, as also the Liddel, which flows out of the same morass, but in a contrary direction: the Tyne flowing eastwards into the German ocean, the Liddel westward into the Solway frith. Coal is found everywhere in the parish, and there are several mineral wells of considerable strength. There is here a Scots presbyterian chapel, erected in 1807. Distance from Bellingham, 8 m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, returned under the townships of Plushets and Well-Haugh, quarter, 437; in 1831, 521.

FAMBRIDGE (NORTH), a parish in the hundred of Dengie, co. of Essex. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, rated at £4 13s. 4d. Church ded. to the Holy Trinity. FAREHAM, a market-town, parish, and hundred, in Portsdown division of the county of Southampton. Living, a vicarage and peculiar in the dio. of Winchester, rated at £8 12s. 6s. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Patron, the bishop of Winchester. The town stands upon a slightly elevated piece of ground at the N.W. extremity of the harhour of Portsmouth. It possesses extensive manufactories of sacking and ropes, as also of pottery, and has a considerable trade in corn, coals, and timber. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent, particularly of large vessels. It is a general resort for sea-bathing during the summer months, and a large and commodious bathing-house has been erected for the benefit of the bathers. The corn-market held here every alternate Monday, is reckoned one of the best supplied in the county, and it has an annual fair for cattle and cheese on the 29th and 30th days of June. The regular market-day is Wednesday. The government is vested in a bailiff, two constables, and two ale-tasters. They are chosen annually by a jury at the manorial court-leet held by the steward of the bishop of Winchester. Here are held weekly the petty-sessions for the Portsdown division of the county. Fareham is one of the polling-places for the members for the south division of the county. Here are chapels for the Independents and the Wesleyan Methodists. There is a national school here, and a charity school. Distance from Southampton, 12 m. E.S.E.; from London, 73 m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 3030; in 1831, 4402. A. P., £21,088.

FARNHAM, a hundred in the new western division of the co. of Surrey. It lies on the west side of the county bordering with Hampshire, and comprises 4 parishes, with the town of Farnham. Pop., in 1831, 8228.

FARNHAM, a market-town and parish in the above hundred. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester, rated at £29 9s. 5d. Church ded. to St Andrew. Patron, the bishop of Winchester. There is also an Independent chapel here. The town of Farnham is situated a little to the north of the river Wey, near the W. extremity of the county. It is comprised chiefly in one principal street, running nearly E. and W., in the centre of which is the market-place. Many of the houses are handsome, and the effect of the whole prepossessing. The cloth manufacture was at one time carried on here to a wide extent, but has been entirely superseded by the culture of hops, for which the soil is found to be peculiarly adapted. From the nature of the soil, and the care with which they are managed, Farnham hops bring invariably higher prices than any other in the kingdom, and for more than a century they have formed the staple trade of the town. A number of flour mills have been erected on the banks of the Wey, from which considerable supplies are—by the Basingstoke canal, which passes the town at about 4 miles' distance—sent to the London market. The market—once, for wheat, the largest in England, the tolls upon that article alone having been calculated at £200 a-year—is held on Thursday; and there are fairs for horses, cattle, and sheep, on Holy Thursday, Midsummer-day, and November 13th. From the 4th of Edward II. to the 38th of Henry VI., Farnham sent two members to parliament; and it possessed a charter of incorporation from the bishop, by which its government was vested in 2 bailiffs and 12 burgesses. Widely different, if we may credit the account, from the inhabitants of boroughs in general, the people of Farnham regarded their privileges with indifference, neglected even to fill up the vacancies among the burgesses, and the bailiffs, in 1790, being indicted for neglecting some of the parish bridges, surrendered to the bishop the town charter, and sent the borough records to the castle. The petty-sessions for the division are held here by the county magistrates, the town being within their jurisdiction. Constables and tything-men are appointed annually at the bishop's court-leet, and a court is held at regular intervals for the recovery of small debts. There is a free grammar school here of very old standing. The parish of Farnham—so named from its being naturally a bed of ferns—was given by Ethelbald, king of the West Saxons, to the bishop and congregation of the church of Winchester. Here Alfred, in 893, with a handful of men, gained a signal victory over the Danes; and here Henry de Blois, bishop of Winchester and brother to King Stephen, built on the hill overlooking the town, a castle of great strength, which, on account of its having been a retreat for his rebellious barons, was thrown down by Henry III. Being still the property of the bishops of Winchester, it was, after a time, rebuilt by them with more than its original magnificence, and possessed as the episcopal palace. During the troubles in the reign of Charles I. it was garrisoned for the king, besieged and taken by the parliamentarians under Sir William Waller, who dismantled and laid it in ruins. After the restoration, it was partly rebuilt and partly repaired by Dr Morley, bishop of Winchester, at an expense of £8000, and continues to this day the principal palace belonging to that see. It contains an extensive and valuable library, and its park is three miles in circumference. An avenue of ancient elms, nearly a mile in length, leads into the palace on the east, forming a most delicious promenade, to the use of which the inhabitants of Farnham have acquired the right of prescription. About 2 miles to the south of the town stood the abbey of Waverley, founded in 1128 by Gifford, bishop of Winchester, for monks of the Cistercian order. This is supposed to have been their first public establishment in England, and the abbot, in consequence, was accounted the superior of the order throughout the country. At the dissolution the revenues were estimated at £174 8s. 3d. per annum. The remains of this splendid pile are still considerable. The Rev. Augustus Montagu Toplady, the celebrated antagonist of John Wesley, was a native of this place. Distance from Guilford, 9½ m. W.S.W.; from London, 38 m. S.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, of the town, 2911; of the parish, returned under the tythings of Budshot and Runfold, Culverhenda, and Telford, Runwick, Wurklesham and Bourn, 1813; in whole, 4724: in 1831, of the town, 3142; of the parish, 2716; in whole, 5858. A. P., town and parish, £20,991.

FARNHAM, a parish and township in the lower division of the wapentake of Claro, W. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester, rated at £6 12s. 1d., returned at £32. Patrons, in 1829, Mrs Oasler and others. Distance from Knaresborough, 2 m. N. Pop., in 1801, of the township, 125; of the parish, returned under the townships of Farnham, Ferenshy, and Scotton, 431; in 1831, of the township, 169; of the whole parish, 614. A. P., of the township, £1,360; of the whole parish, £3,119.

FARNHAM-ROYAL, a parish in the hundred of Burnham, co. of Buckingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £12 16s. 0½d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patrons, the provost and fellows of Eton college. "Farnham-Royal, the barons Furnival, heretofore held by this service, that on the coronation day they should be obliged to find a glove for the king's right hand, and to support his left arm so long as he held the royal sceptre. From the Furnivals it descended to the Talbots, earls of Shrewsbury, who, though, by way of exchange, they surrendered up this manor to Henry VIII. yet reserved that honourable office to themselves and their heirs for ever."—Camden's Britannia, 279. Distance from Eton, 3½ m. N. Pop., in 1801, including the hamlets of Hedgerley, Dean, and Seer-Green, with a part of the parish of Salt Hill, 851; in 1831, 1193. A. P., £4,778.

FARNHAM-TOLLARD, a tything in the parish of Farnham, co. of Dorset, 8 m. W.N.W. from Cranborne. Pop., in 1811, 191; in 1831, 220.

FARNHURST, a parish in the hundred of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, co. of Sussex. Living, a perpetual curacy to the rectory of Lynch in the archd. and dio. of Chichester, returned at £50. Patron, in 1829, W. S. Poyntz, Esq. Distance from Midhurst, 5 m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 383; in 1831, 769. A. P., £1,855.

FARNINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Axton, co. of Kent. Living, a vicarage, a peculiar in the dio. of Canterbury, rated at £9 5s. 10d. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. Farningham, of old Fremingham, i. e. the village by the brook, is situated on the Darent, over which it has a bridge of four arches, and on its banks several paper-mills. The weekly market, which was on Tuesday, has been long discontinued; but there is still a fair for horses, cattle, &c. on the 15th of October. Distance from Foot's Cray, 6 m. S.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 397; in 1831, 701. A. P., £3,599.

FARN ISLANDS, two groupes of islands, 17 in number, in the parish of Holy Island, co.-palatine of Durham. That which lies nearest to the shore—House Island—is, according to Pennant, 1 mile and 68 chains from the coast, and the most distant about 7 miles. They were at that time rented for £16 per annum, the produce being kelp, sea fowls, sea fowl eggs, feathers, seals, &c. "Some of them," he adds, "yield a little grass, and serve to feed a cow or two, which the people are desperate enough to transport over in their little boats. The last isle I visited was the House Island, the sequestered spot where St Cuthbert passed the two last years of his life. Here was afterward-established a priory of Benedictines for six or eight monks, subordinate to Durham. A square tower, the remains of a church, and some other buildings, are to be seen there still, and a stone coffin which it is pretended was that of St Cuthbert. At the north end of the isle is a deep chasm from the top to the bottom of the rock, communicating with the sea, through which, in tempestuous weather, the water is forced with vast violence and noise, and forms a fine jet d'eau of 60 feet high. It is called by the inhabitants of the opposite coast, the churn."—Pennant's Scotland, vol. 1. p. 46. A lighthouse has been erected on this island, and another in Steples Island, about 3 miles to the east of it. The passage between is open for vessels of any burden, but is dangerous from a cluster of rocks, called Oxscar rocks, that lie in the middle of it.

FARNLAWS, or FAVINLEY, a township in the parish of Hartburn, Northumberland, 13 m. W.N.W. from Morpeth. Pop., in 1801, 15; in 1831, 15.

FARNSFIELD, a parish in the liberty of Southwell and Scrooby, though locally in the wapentake of Thurgarton, co. of Nottingham. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of Southwell, in the dio. of York, rated at £4, returned at £140. Church ded. to St Michael. Patron, Southwell college church. Distance from Southwell, 4 m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 564; in 1831, 1010. A. P., £3,376.

FARNSWORTH, a chapelry in the parish of Dean, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester, not in charge. Patron, the vicar of Dean. A chapel for this township has recently been erected on Halsshaw-moor, by the commissioners for erecting additional churches, at an expense of £8000. Extensive coal and vitriol works are carried on in this township; it has also a number of spinning and power-loom establishments, and a large and celebrated paper manufactory. Here is a place of worship for Independents. There is a school in the adjoining township of Kersley. A school is also supported among the Wesleyan Methodists by subscription. Richard Bancroft, archbishop of Canterbury, in the beginning of the reign of James

I., was a native of this place; born, 1544,—died, 1610. Distance from Great Bolton, 3 m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 1439; in 1831, 2928. A. P., £2,758.

FARNWORTH, a chapelry in the parish of Prescott, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester, certified to value £16 18s., returned at £100. There is here a free grammar school. Distance from Warrington, 5½ m. W.

FARRINGTON, a parish in the hundred of East Budleigh, co. of Devon. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter, rated at £8 8s. 1½d. Patron, the bishop of Exeter. There is here a school with a handsome endowment. Distance from Topsham, 3½ m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, including a part of the tything of Clist-Sackville, 293; in 1801, 377. A. P., £2,077.

FARRINGTON, a chapelry in the parish of Iwerne-Courtney, co. of Dorset. Living, a curacy to the rectory of Iwerne-Courtney in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol. Chapel ded. to St Mary. Patronage with the rectory of Iwerne-Courtney. Distance from Shaftesbury 5½ m. S.S.W.

FARRINGTON (GREAT), a market-town and parish in the hundred of Farrington, co. of Berkshire. Living, a vicarage and peculiar of the dean of Salisbury in the dio. of Salisbury, rated at £14 1s. 3d. Church ded. to All Saints. The town of Farrington is small, but well built, paved, and lighted, and abundantly supplied with water from a remarkably fine spring, distinguished by the name of Portwell. There are here few manufactures; the chief trade of the town is hags and bacon; and the cultivating of hops seems to be the principal employment of the people. The navigation of the Thames, or Isis, which approaches within 2 miles of the town, affords a ready conveyance for the more bulky commodities, both in the way of import and export. The market—celebrated for corn—is held weekly on Tuesday; and there are fairs February 13th, Whit-Tuesday, Tuesday before and Tuesday after old Michaelmas, and the 29th of October. It is governed by a bailiff and constables, who are appointed at the court of the manor, and the county magistrates hold petty-sessions for the division in the town-hall, according to circumstances. This town is one of the polling-places for the members for Berkshire. Here was anciently a royal palace, which was the last earthly residence of Edward the Elder. "Some Cistercian monks happening to fix here, King John, 2d Nov. A. D. 1203, gave the whole manor to the head house of St Mary at Cisterium, or Cîteaux, in France, upon condition that an abbey should be forthwith built within the same. But the same king having founded, in the next year, a large monastery of that order at Beaulieu, in Hampshire, it was agreed by all parties that this donation should be transferred thither, so that here were settled only some few monks, subordinate to the convent of Beaulieu, and as parcel of the possessions of that abbey, this manor, the tithes, and other liberties, were granted to Sir F. Englefield, 2^d Mary.—Tanner's Not. Mon. Farrington-hill, immediately to the east of the town, affords a charming view of the rich and extensive vale of White Horse, with rich and interesting portions of the counties of Gloucester, Oxford, and Wilts. At Little Coxwell there is a chapel-of-ease to the parish church. There is also in this parish a place of worship belonging to the Baptists. The national school lately erected, is supported by subscription, and is intended to accommodate 200 scholars. There is also a school on the Lancasterian system, for girls only; and there are various benefactions for apprenticing boys. Distances from Reading, 36 m. N.W. by W.; from London, 69½ m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, of the town and parish, comprising the township of Coxwell Little, with the tithings of Hospital and Wadley, 2153; in 1831, 3033. A. P., £10,268.

FAVERSHAM, a hundred in the lathe of Scray, co. of Kent. It lies nearly in the centre of the county and comprises 19 parishes with the town of Faversham.

FAVERSHAM, a seaport, market-town, and parish, locally situated in the above hundred, but possessing separate jurisdiction and being a member of the town and part of Dover. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury, rated at £26 17s. 6d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Canterbury. The town of Faversham is most commodiously situated on an arm of the East Swale opposite the south corner of the Isle of Shepey. It consists of four principal streets forming an irregular cross. The government is vested in 12 jurats, one of whom is annually elected mayor, and 24 common-councilmen, assisted by a town-clerk, two chamberlains, two sergeants at mace, &c. The mayor holds a court of session twice a-year, a court of record for the recovery of debts, &c., and there is a court of requests for the recovery of small debts, &c. The principal manufacture is that of gunpowder, for which the town has been famous since the time of Elizabeth. This manufacture was restricted to individuals till 1760, when government, with a view to greater security, erected buildings and carried on the manufacture by its own agents. If safety was the sole object with the members of government in this transaction, it failed completely, for in less than seven years after their commencement a store containing 25 barrels of powder blew up and damaged the town to a considerable extent. Fourteen years afterwards a more serious explosion took place, consisting of 7000 lbs. of powder, which shivered the works to atoms and nearly unroofed the town with the neighbouring one of Davington. The stores were now removed into the Marsh, a considerable distance below the town. During the late war upwards of 400 persons were employed in these works, which produced annually from 12,000 to 13,000 barrels of powder. Since the peace they have been conducted, those of them that lie near the town, by a private individual upon a reduced scale. Besides Roman cement and some ship-building, Faversham appears to have no other manufactures, but its traffic is very considerable in corn, hops, fruits, wool, &c., which are shipped here for the London market. Its imports are coals from Sunderland, and timber, iron, pitch, tar, &c., from Sweden and Norway. In place of the old quay mentioned by Leland, which has long been disused, three new quays have been built close to the town, and the navigation in other respects greatly improved. The management of the navigation is vested in the corporation, and the expenses are defrayed by town droits of two-pence per quarter on grain, and fourpence per ton on all other goods exported or imported. The oyster-fishery, which is very considerable and constitutes a prominent article of trade, is prosecuted by the Company of free fishermen and free dredger men of the hundred of Faversham acting as tenants under the jurisdiction and protection of the lord of the manor, whose steward holds annually two water-courts, where every necessary regulation for the benefit of the fishery is made. This fishery, originally an appurtenance to the manor of Milton, was by King John conferred upon Faversham abbey. Wednesday and Saturday are the market-days, and the fairs are on the 25th of February and 12th of August. Faversham lays claim to high antiquity, having been occupied by the Britons previous to the descent of the Romans. It was 'the kings little town of Febrësham' in 811; and in 903 it was honoured with a meeting of the great council of the nation under Athelstan. It is returned in Doomsday-book as in the possession of William the Conqueror, who bestowed the advowson on the abbey of St Augustine in Canterbury, and the manor on one of his favourite Normans. "In the year 1147, King Stephen, and Maud his queen, built an abbey here for monks of Cluni, who, being afterwards released from all subjection to the foreign monastery, became Benedictines. It was dedicated to our Holy Saviour, and was found, 26th Hen. VIII. to be worth £286 12s. 6d. ob. q. per ann. Dugd. Speed. The site was granted, 31st Hen. VIII. to Sir Thomas Cheiney." Tanner's Not. Mon. In this monastery were interred King Stephen himself, his wife Maud, his son Eustace, with many other noble personages. Its abbots, during the reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., sat in thirteen several parliaments, a privilege which the town, though a borough both by prescription and charter, seems at no period of its history to have enjoyed. The whole privileges of the town indeed seem to have been usurped by this monastery. Besides the established church, here are places of worship for the Baptists, the Independents, and the Wesleyan Methodists. There is also a grammar school originally founded in the reign of Henry VIII. The family of Duncombe take the title of baron from this town. Distance from Canterbury, 9 m. W.; from London, 47 E. Pop., in 1801, of Faversham-in-Liberty, 3364; of Faversham-out-Liberty, 124; in whole, 3488; in 1831, of the former, 3982; of the latter, 447, in whole, 4429. A. FLAT-HOLMES, an island belonging to the parish of Uphill, hundred of Winstersoke, co. of Somerset. "At about a league to the north is the island of Flat-Holmes, which is also about a mile and a half in circumference. Nearly in the centre of it is a good farm-house, and a dairy of cows is kept here. The land bears good grass, and abounds with burnet, wild thyme, and other plants. In summer many persons visit this island, which is very pleasant, and commands a delightful prospect of the channel and the coast on either side, for more than sixty miles in length. At low water there is a rough stony beach round the island, strewn thick with vast fragments of rocks which have fallen from the cliffs. In the little pools of water left by the tide, are great numbers of sea anemonies of different kinds; on the south side, some very large tubulated ones, which, when open, are six inches in diameter. The rocks abound with whilks and limpets. The common kelp weed here is in great abundance; in some places are found the green and brown confervas, fucuses, and the common purple coral. On the highest point of this island is a light-house, 80 feet in height, erected for a guide to ships coming up the channel. At this island the tide was 36 feet." Collinson's Somerset. Church ded. to the Holy Trinity. Patron, in 1829, J. Gould, Esq. A weekly market and an annual fair were granted to this place by Henry III., but both have been long discontinued. Distance from Weymouth, 4 m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 125; in 1831, 122. A. P., £938.

FLEET, a parish in the wapentake of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. of Lincoln. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £15. Church ded. to St Mary Magdalene. Patron, in 1829, Joseph Dodds, Esq. Distance from Holbeach, 2 m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 551; in 1831, 794. A. P., £7,193.

FLEET (THE), a small river in Middlesex, which rises a few miles to the north of London, and taking a south-easterly direction, passing Kentish town and St Pancras, runs under Fleet-market, and crossing the lower end of Fleet-street, falls into the Thames a little to the west of Blackfriar's-bridge.

FLEET (THE), a small stream in Nottinghamshire. It falls into the Trent near Gilton.

FLEETHAM, a township in the parish of Bamfborough, co. of Northumberland. Distance from Belford, 6 m. S.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 70; in 1831, 93.

FLEGG (EAST), a hundred in the co. of Norfolk. It lies on the east side of the county between Wintertonness and Yarmouth, comprises eight parishes, and, in 1831, contained a pop. of 2998 souls.

FLEGG (WEST), a hundred in the co. of Norfolk. It lies contiguous to Flegg (East), comprises twelve parishes, and, in 1831, contained a pop. of 4212 souls.

FLEMINGSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Cowbridge, co. of Glamorgan, S.W. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff, rated at £4 18s. 9d., returned at £150. The patronage belongs to the family of the Wyndhams. This small parish lies at no great distance from the Bristol channel. It derives its name from John Fleming, one of the twelve knights who accompanied Robert Fitz-Haimon the Norman in his conquest of this county, in the reign of William Rufus. The village of Flemingstone is very poor in its appearance. Distance from Cowbridge, 5 m. S. Pop., in 1801, 66; in 1831, 73. A. P., £872.

FLEMPTON, a parish in the hundred of Thingoe, co. of Suffolk. Living, a rectory united with that of Hengrave, in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, rated at £5. Church ded. to St Catherine. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. R. S. Dixon. Distance from Bury-St-Edmund's, 5 m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 99; in 1831, 188. A. P., £1,049.

FLENDISH, a hundred in the co. of Cambridge. It lies in the centre of the county, comprises five parishes, and, in 1831, contained a pop. of 2778 souls.

FLETCHING, a parish in the hundred of Rushmorden, rape of Pevensey, co. of Sussex. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester, rated at £13 6s. 8d. Church ded. to St Andrew and St Mary. Patron, the earl of Sheffield. In the church are several monuments to the memory of persons of distinction; among the most notable of these, is that to the memory of Edward Gibbon the historian, with a Latin inscription from the pen of the late Dr Parr. Sheffield-place, the seat of the earl of Sheffield, in this parish, is a much admired Gothic mansion. It has a beautiful Gothic freeze, carried all round the building, with the arms of all its possessors since the conquest. The Ouse runs through the parish, and it has a number of mineral springs, mostly chalybeates. A national school has been lately established here, and a handsome school-house erected. There is an annual fair on the Monday preceding Whit-Sunday, chiefly for pedlery. Distance from Uckfield, 3½ m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 1279; in 1831, 1870. A. P., £4,786.

FLIMBY, a parish in Allerdale ward below Darwent, co. of Cumberland. Living, a curacy united with that of Cammerton in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle, certified to value £2 4s., returned at £40. Church ded. to St Nicholas. Flimby was originally only a chapelry to the parish of Cammerton. It was erected into a separate parish in 1545. It lies along the sea-shore and abounds with coal. Distance from Maryport, 2½ m. S.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 273; in 1831, 404.

FLINT,

A county of North Wales, bounded on the N. and N.W. by the Irish sea; on the N.E. and E. by the river and estuary of the Dee; and on the S.S.W. and W. by Denbighshire. A detached portion forming the hundred of Maylor, extending about 10 miles in length and 8 in breadth, is separated from the body of the county by Denbighshire, being surrounded by that county, together with the counties of Salop and Chester. The main body of the county extends from north-west to south-east from 27 to 30 miles, and in a contrary direction where broadest, about 10 miles. Its contents have been calculated at from 160,000 to 197,000 acres, of which about 20,000 are supposed to be in tillage and the remainder in pasture. The soil and surface are greatly diversified. All along the coast the county is level, finely sheltered, and the soil highly fertile. A mountain range running parallel with the Dee, extends the whole length of the county, attaining in some places an elevation of 1020 feet above the level of the sea. Even here, however, the hills generally fall into gentle slopes descending into well-watered valleys possessing a rich argillaceous soil yielding grass and corn in the richest abundance. Innumerable streams descending from these hills add beauty and disperse fertility among the valleys; but the principal rivers of the county are the Clwyd [see Clwyd], famous for the beauty of the vale to which it gives name, the Allen, the Prestatyn and Falcrae, the Terig, the Wheler, the Eilwy, and the Dee.—The principal grains cultivated are wheat and rye. The breed of cattle is small but they are excellent milkers, and the sweetness of their beef is generally acknowledged. Butter and cheese form no inconsiderable items in the exports of the county. Upon the whole, however, the county of Flint is richer in mineral than in vegetable products. Freestone, limestone, coal, and lead are found in great abundance in various places. One mine of the latter mineral—that of Pont-y-Pwldur—has been stated in the course of thirty years to have yielded the proprietors a return of one million sterling. The collieries of Mostyn and Bychton have been worked ever since the age of Edward I., and vast quantities of that most necessary article are annually exported, especially to the cities of Liverpool and Chester. At Hawarden are very extensive iron-works, lead-works at Flint, and at Holywell, brass, iron, and lead works. A constant and reciprocal trade is carried on between Holywell and Liverpool, and steam-packets sail regularly from Rhyl, and from Bagitt to Liverpool and Chester. The famous well of St Winifred at Holywell is still visited by superstitious individuals who go through the ceremony of bathing—the useless though harmless ceremony—for the water contains no mineral impregnation whatever, and consequently can be no more beneficial than common water which the bathers might command in their own houses. The chief towns of this county are Holywell, Flint a borough, Rhuddlan famous for its castle supposed to be the oldest English edifice in Wales, St Asaph's the residence of the bishop, Mold wholly engaged in the business of the mines, Northcross which has a number of potteries, and Hawarden which we have already noticed as the seat of extensive iron-works. Flint is divided into five hundreds, viz. Coleshill, Maylor, Mold, Prestatyn, and Rhuddlan. It sends one member to parliament, who is polled at Flint, Rhuddlan, and Overton. Pop., in 1801, 39,622; in 1831, 60,100.

FLINT, a borough and parish in the hundred of Coleshill, co. of Flint, North Wales. Living, a curacy to the parish of Northop, in the archd. and dio. of St Asaph's, returned at £145. Patron, the bishop of St Asaph's. Flint, formerly the county-town, is pleasantly situated on the estuary of the Dee, and at one time was a sea-port of considerable importance. The retreat of the sea and the great influx of sand which has choked up the mouth of the Dee, have rendered it a place of very little consequence. In the old walls of the town the moorings are still visible to which vessels were fastened in the days of its maritime importance. It was constituted a free borough in 1283. The government is vested in a mayor who by patent is governor of the castle, two bailiffs and other officers. It joins with Rhuddlan, Overton, Caergwrie, and Caerwys, in sending one member to parliament. The mayor is the returning officer. The new electors are about 300 in number; they were formerly upwards of 1200, every inhabitant having a vote. The county business is mostly transferred to Mold, but the county-gaol is still here, a very fine building.

The guildhall is also a handsome modern edifice. The castle belongs to the crown. It was begun by Henry II. and perfected by Edward I. Richard II. bestowed it upon Percy, earl of Northumberland, who was base enough to inveigle the unfortunate monarch within its walls, and afterwards to surrender him to his enemy Bolingbroke. It was garrisoned for King Charles I. during the civil wars, but ultimately surrendered to the parliamentary forces. Its ruins are still considerable, comprising an area of about three-quarters of an acre. Originally it must have been surrounded by the sea, but it has now the appearance of a lofty rock in the centre of a very disagreeable marsh. Flint, though in almost every respect a decaying and a deserted place, continues to be a fashionable sea-bathing station through the summer months, in consequence of which its population is still greater than from its circumstances could be anticipated. Distance from London, 200 m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 1169; in 1831, 2216. A. P., £1,933.

FLINTHAM, a parish in the N. division of the wapentake of Bingham, co. of Nottingham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, rated at £6 2s. 6d. Church ded. to St Austin. Patrons, the master and fellows of Trinity college, Cambridge. There is a free school here with an endowment of about £20 per annum. Harleford ferry over the Trent, by which the communication is kept up with the parish of Bleanby, is in this parish. Distance from Newark, 6½ m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 459; in 1831, 545. A. P., £4,157.

FLINTON, a township in the parish of Humbleton, E. R. of Yorkshire. Distance from Kingston-upon-Hull, 9½ m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, 105; in 1831, 126. A. P., £1,739.

FLITCHAM, a parish in the Lynn division of the hundred of Freebridge, co. of Norfolk. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Norwich, certified to value £20, returned at £35. Patron, in 1829, Thomas W. Coke, Esq. Distance from Castle-Rising, 4½ m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 309; in 1831, 323. A. P., £3,054.

FLITT, a hundred in the co. of Bedford. It forms the south-east extremity of the county, comprises 13 parishes, including the town of Luton, and in 1831 contained a pop. of 12,171.

FLITTON, a parish and township in the hundred of Flit, co. of Bedford. Living, a discharged vicarage with the curacy of Silsoe, in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £11 7s. 8d. Church ded. to St John the Baptist. Patrons, the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford. To the south of the village there is a hill in which, about a century ago, there was discovered a gold mine. It was taken possession of for the king and leased to a person who was to work it, but the produce was so exceedingly trifling that it was soon abandoned. Distance from Silsoe, 1½ m. W. Pop., in 1801, of the township 292, of the entire parish 739; in 1831, of the former 458, of the latter 1184. A. P. of the township £2,826, of the entire parish £6,139.

FLITWICK, a parish in the hundred of Redbornestoke, co. of Bedford. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Bedford and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £7 17s. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Patron, in 1829, the duke of Bedford. Here was a cell to the priory of Dunstable, erected by Philip de Samerville, 1170. Distance from Ampthill, 2½ m. S.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 436; in 1831, 636. A. P., £2,628.

FLIXBOROUGH, a parish in the N. division of the wapentake of Manley, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. Living, a rectory with the vicarage of Burton-upon-Stutther annexed, in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £13 10s. Church ded. to All Saints. Patron, in 1829, Sir R. Sheffield, Bart. The river Trent bounds this parish on the west, and it is remarkable for having several springs of a strongly petrifying quality. Distance from Glandford-Bridge, 11 m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 179; in 1831, 210. A. P., £1,328.

FLIXTON, a parish and township in the hundred of Salford, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester, certified to value £34, returned at £100. Church ded. to St Michael. Patron is its own prebendary in the cathedral church of Lichfield and Coventry. Flixton stands on the north bank of the Mersey, occupying the point of land formed by the confluence of the Irwell with the Mersey. Here, besides the established church, is a place of worship for the Methodists. Distance from Manchester, 7 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, of the township 1093, of the entire parish 1625; in 1831, of the former 1393, of the latter 2099. A. P. of the township £4,386, of the entire parish, £7,060.

FLIXTON, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lotheringland, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged rectory united with that of Blundeston, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £14. The church—which has lain in ruins since the great storm of November, 1703—is ded. to St Andrew. Distance from Lowestoft, 3 m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 41; in 1831, 39. A. P., £918.

FLIXTON, a parish in the hundred of Wangford, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £6, returned at £125 10s. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, A. Adair, Esq. Distance from Bungay, 3 m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 219; in 1831, 206. A. P., £1,507.

FLIXTON, a township in the parish of Folkton. Distance from Scarborough, 6½ m. S. Pop., in 1801, 154; in 1831, 251. A. P., £1,629.

FLOCKTON, a chapelry in the parish of Thornhill, W. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a curacy to the rectory of Thornhill, in the archd. and dio. of York, certified to value of £31 5s., returned at £110. Patron, the rector of Thornhill. There is an Independent chapel here. Distance from Huddersfield, 6½

m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 800; in 1831, 995. A. P., £3,696.

FLODDEN-FIELD, a field fatal to the independence of Scotland, 9th September, 1513, in the parish of Kirk-Newton, W. division of Glendale ward, Northumberland, 8 m. N.N.W. from Wooler. Flodden-hill is the last and lowest of those eminences that extend on the N.E. of the great mountain of Cheviot, towards the low grounds on the side of the Tweed, from which river Flodden is distant about 4 miles. The ascent to the top of it, from the side of the river Till, where it runs in a northerly direction, just by the foot of the declivity on which the castle and village of Ford stands, is about half a mile. On the south of Flodden lies the extensive and very level plain of Mill-field, having on its west side high hills, the branches of Cheviot; on the north, Flodden and other moderate eminences adjoining to it; on the south and east, a tract of ground, near the foot of which is the slow and winding course of the Till.

FLOOKBOROUGH, a chapelry in the parish of Cartmel, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, certified to value of £9 12s., returned at £93 4s. Chapel ded. to St John the Baptist. Patron, in 1829, Lord George Cavendish. Though now only a small village, Flookborough was formerly a market-town. Distance from Ulverstone, 5½ m.

FOLESHILL, a parish in the co. of the city of Coventry, co. of Warwick. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry. Church ded. to St Lawrence. Patron the lord-chancellor. Besides the established church, there are here places of worship for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. Distance from Coventry, 2½ m. N.N.E.; from London, 91 m. Pop., in 1801, 3026; in 1831, 6969. A. P., £6,491.

FOLKE, a parish in the hundred of Sherborne, Sherborne division of the co. of Dorset. Living, a rectory, a peculiar of the dean of Salisbury, rated at £9 12s. 3½d. Church ded. to St Lawrence. Patrons, in 1829, alternately the dean and chapter of Salisbury, and the Rev. W. Chaffin. Distance from Sherborne, 3½ m. S.E. by S. Pop., in 1801, 182; in 1831, 281. A. P., £2,702.

FOLKESTONE, a sea-port, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of Folkestone, lath of Shepway, co. of Kent. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury, rated at £10 0s. 2½d., returned at £140. The church, originally that of the priory, is ded. to St Mary and St Eanswith. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. Folkestone lies close upon the shore of the English channel, opposite to Boulogne, in a hollow between two precipitous cliffs. It consists chiefly of three streets, rather irregularly built along the acclivities of the western cliff, on the very summit of which stands the church,—the only one of five that once belonged to the town, now remaining, the other four having been swept away by the sea. It was made a member of the town and port of Hythe, one of the cinque-ports, prior to the reign of Henry I., its freemen being styled barons of the town of Folkestone, and, of course, enjoys special privileges; by the reform act it is included with that borough. The harbour is extensive, and by recent improvements has been rendered very convenient and capable of receiving vessels of 300 tons burden. To this harbour there belongs a vast number of fishing vessels, the fish here being considered of a superior quality, and commanding at all times a ready market. During the season they are chiefly engaged taking mackerel for supplying the London market; after which, they proceed to the coasts of Norfolk and Suffolk, where they take herrings in immense quantities. Soles, whiting, conger eels, &c., are also taken here in the highest state of perfection. At a short distance from the church there is a battery which mounts a few guns, besides two or three martello-towers at short distances along the coast. The market day is Thursday, and there is an annual fair June 28th. The government is vested in a mayor, 12 jurats, and 24 common council-men, with a recorder, chamberlain, town-clerk, &c. &c. The mayor—who is by virtue of his office, coroner—is elected annually, and with the jurats, who are justices of the peace within the liberty, holds a session at least once a-year. They have also authority to hold a court of record for the recovery of debts to any amount. Of the common gaol and house of correction, the earl of Radnor is hereditary keeper. The office he of course executes by deputy. Folkestone, from the beauty of its scenery and the salubrity of its atmosphere, is a favourite resort of sea-bathers, for whom every requisite convenience is provided. Many curious mineral strata are found here, such as pyrites, talc, fuller's earth, sulphur, &c. &c., which accounts for the chalybeate springs found in the neighbourhood. Besides the established church, there are here places of worship for the Baptists, the Methodists, and the Society of Friends. Dr William Harvey, famous for his discovery of the circulation of the blood, was a native of this place. Folkestone gives the title of viscount to the earls of Radnor. Distance from London, 71 m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, of the parish, 447; of the town, 3259: in 1831, of the former, 658; of the latter, 5638. A. P., of the parish, £2,943; of the town, £3,657.

FORD, a parish in the west division of Glendale ward, Northumberland. Living, rectory in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham, rated at £24. Church ded. to St Michael. Patron, in 1829, the marquess of Waterford. The village of Ford stands on an eminence rising from the east bank of the Till, over which there is a good stone-bridge. The lands here are fertile and contain valuable seams of coal, beds of slate, limestone, whinstone, and free-stone. To the west of the village stands the castle of Ford, where James IV., "that champion of the Dames," on his march into England, was detained by Lady Haron for some days, to the loss of his army, his own life, and the independence of his country. It was afterwards in a Scottish raid nearly destroyed, but has been rebuilt by the late Lord Delaval, two of the ancient towers being incorporated with the modern building. Besides the established church, there are places of worship here for Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians, and a charity school. Distance from Wooler, 9 m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 1903; in 1831, 2110. A. P., £17,701.

FORD, a hundred in the co. of Salop. It lies on the west side of the county bordering with Montgomeryshire, comprises 6 parishes, and in 1831, contained a pop. of 6898.

FORD, a parish in the hundred of Ford, co. of Salop. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Hereford, rated at £6 13s. 4d. Church ded. to St Michael. Patron, in 1829, W. E. Tomline, Esq. Distance from Shrewsbury, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 349; in 1831, 263. A. P., £3,229.

FORD, a parish in the hundred of Avisa-ford, rape of Arundel, co. of Sussex. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chichester, rated at £9 6s. 8d. Patron, the bishop of Chichester. Distance from Arundel, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 70; in 1831, 81. A. P., £889.

FORD, a tything in the parish of Idmiston, hundred of Alderbury, co. of Wilt. Distance from Salisbury, 2 m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1821, 20; in 1831, 48.

FORD, a hamlet in the parish of Laverstock, co. of Wilts. This hamlet stands on the river Bourne. Distance from Salisbury, 2 m. N.N.E.

FORD-ABBEY, in the parish of Thorncombe, co. of Devon. An ancient Cistercian monastery which once existed here, is now a very handsome residence, consisting of the original walls of the abbey with numerous additions in different styles of architecture. Distance from Beaminster, 9 m. W.N.W.

FORDEN, a parish in the hundred of Cawrse, co. of Montgomery, North Wales. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Bangor, certified to value £30, returned at £63. Patrons, the Grocers' company of the city of London. The village of Forden, situated on the Severn, has a house of industry, erected in 1705, for the districts of Montgomery and Pool, including townships and parishes to the number of 18, incorporated by act of parliament, of the 32^d of Geo. III. The inmates are employed in fabricating coarse flannels and linen, shoemaking, gardening, and cultivating the lands belonging to the house which extend to upwards of 170 acres. The expenses are defrayed out of a general fund contributed by the several places included in the charter. Distance from Montgomery, 2 m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, 1070; in 1831, 856. A. P., £4,675.

FORD-FORSTAL, a hamlet in the parish of Folkestone, co. of Kent. Here is a strong chalybeate spring. Distance from Folkestone, $\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.

FORDHALL, or FORTHALL, a hamlet in the parish of Wootton-Waven, co. of Warwick.

FORDHAM, a parish in the hundred of Staplehoe, co. of Cambridge. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, rated at £13 6s. 8d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patrons, the master and fellows of Jesus' college, Cambridge. It is gravely recorded that James I., coursing in this parish, killed a hare and afterwards took some refreshment!! In memory of the latter circumstance, the place still bears the name of the King's path!! and in memory of the former, a hare, with two greyhounds in full chase, is carved upon a beam, still religiously preserved, inside the church!!! There is here a place of worship for Independents. Distance from Newmarket, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. N. Pop., in 1801, 700; in 1831, 1325. A. P., £3,740.

FORDHAM, a parish in the hundred of Clackclose, co. of Norfolk. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, returned at £54. Patron, in 1829, E. R. Pratt, Esq. Distance from Downham-Market, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. S. Pop., in 1801, 111; in 1831, 133. A. P., £1,846.

FORDINGBRIDGE, a hundred in New Forest, W. division, co. of Southampton. It lies on the west extremity of the county, bordering on Dorsetshire, comprises 6 parishes, including the town from which it takes its name; and, in 1821, contained a resident pop. of 4093.

FORDINGBRIDGE, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Fordingbridge, New Forest, W. division, co. of Southampton. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Winchester, rated at £30 2s. 3d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patrons, the provost and fellows of King's college, Cambridge. The town is pleasantly situated on the N.W. bank of the Upper Avon, over which there is here a stone-bridge of seven arches. It has suffered repeatedly from fires, and has lost much of its former importance. There is a pretty extensive manufactory of sail-cloth carried on here; bed-ticks and checks are also manufactured, but on a very limited scale. It is governed by a constable, appointed annually at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. The market-day is on Friday, and there is an annual fair held principally for amusement, on the 9th of September. There is a chapel-of-ease in the parish, and places of worship for the Society of Friends and the Independents. Distance from Southampton, 20 m. W.N.W.; from London, 92 m. S.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 2335; in 1831, 2511. A. P., £9,452.

FORDINGTON, a liberty in Dorchester division of the co. of Dorset. It lies on the south-west side of the county, comprises four parishes, and, in 1821, contained a pop. of 1940 souls.

FORDINGTON, a parish in the liberty of Fordington, Dorchester division of the co. of Dorset. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of the dean of Salisbury, rated at £15, returned at £145 1s. The church, a very ancient cruciform structure, partly of Norman and partly of English architecture, is ded. to St George. Patron, the prebendary of Fordington in the cathedral of Salisbury. This was anciently a part of the town of Dorchester, deriving its name from the ford here formed in the river Frome, across which there are now in this neighbourhood several bridges. In the reign of Edward III. it was held of the duchy of Lancaster, by Isabella, the queen-dowager, who obtained of that monarch the grant of a weekly market, to be held on Tuesday, and an annual fair of three days' continuance, commencing on the eve, day, and morrow of St George. The road leading into the village being often flooded so deeply as to render it not only dangerous, but some times fatal to travellers, Mrs Pitt, of Kingston-house, in 1747, made a raised causey at an expense of upwards of £1500, and at the same time carried a bridge of three arches over one of the branches into which the Frome here divides itself. In forming this causey, a Roman hypocaust was discovered, the bricks, however, were all of them imperfect. Distance from Dorchester, $\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 888; in 1831, 2030. A. P., £5,320.

FORDINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Uliceby, co. of Lincoln.

FORDLEY, formerly a distinct parish, now united to Middleton, in the hundred of Blything, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged rectory united to that of Middleton, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £5. The church, which has long been demolished, was ded. to the Holy Trinity. Patron, the vicar of Middleton. The history of this parish-church is highly admonitory. It stood in the same yard with that of Middleton, and a complaint was lodged with the bishop, that when the service did not begin and end in both churches at the same time, the bell and the people of the one church disturbed the people of the other. The sapient bishop, instead of enjoining his suffragans to commence their services together, or ordering the ropes to be taken from one or both of the bells, issued orders for one minister to serve them both, preaching alternately in the churches, by which he succeeded in demolishing a church and securing a sinecure. Distance from Saxmugdhm, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, with Middleton, 488; in 1831, 580. A. P., £2,183.

FORDON, or FORDER, a township and chapelry, returned with the parish of Wold-Newton, E. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a perpetual curacy to the vicarage of Hunmanby, in the archd. of the E. R. and dio. of York. Patron, the vicar of Hunmanby. Distance from Great-Driffield, $12\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.N.E.

FORDS, in the parish of West-Felton, co. of Salop, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.S.E. from Oswestry.

FORD-STREET, a hamlet in the parish of Aldham, co. of Essex, 5 m. W.N.W. from Colchester.

FORDTON, in the parish of Crediton, co. of Devon, 1 m. S.E. from Crediton.

FORDWICH, a parish and a member of the town and port of Sandwich, locally situated in the hundred of Downhamford, lathe of St Augustine, co. of Kent. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury, rated at £5 15s. 2d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, Earl Cowper. Fordwich is situated on the Stour, which is navigable up to the bridge that crosses it above the village. The large haven at the mouth of the river is celebrated for its fine trout, and is supposed to be the Portus Trutulensis of the Romans. Though but a small village, this place enjoys all the privileges of a cinque port. It is governed by a mayor, jurats, and commonalty, with a high-steward, treasurer, and town-clerk. The mayor, who is coroner by virtue of his office, and the jurats, who are justices within their liberties, exclusive of all others, have authority to hold general sessions of the peace, and gaol delivery, court of record, &c. &c. Distance from Canterbury, 2 m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 236; in 1831, 287. A. P., £1,003.

Distance from Great Driffield, 6½ m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, of the township, 175; of the entire parish, 380; in 1831, of the township, 308; of the entire parish, 715. A. P., of the township, £1,619; of the entire parish, £5,531.

FOTHERBY, a parish in the wapentake of Ludborough, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £2 returned at £114. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Distance from Louth, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 141; in 1831, 207. A. P., £1,335.

FOTHERINGAY, a parish in the hundred of Willybrook, co. of Northampton. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, returned at £140 2s. The church—built in the reign of Henry II. by Edward, duke of York, whose body was brought from France and interred in it—is ded. to St Mary and All Saints. Patron, in 1829, Thomas Belsey, Esq. The village of Fotheringay—formerly a market-town of considerable size and importance—is pleasantly situated in a beautiful and fertile country on the north bank of the Nen, over which there is here a stone-bridge, built in 1722 by the marquess of Halifax, in room of a wooden one erected by Queen Elizabeth. It has an annual fair the third Monday after July 6th; and a free school endowed by Queen Elizabeth out of the exchequer with £20 per ann. This place was particularly famous for its castle, founded in the reign of William the Conqueror. In this castle Richard III. was born,—in it the unfortunate Mary of Scotland suffered a long imprisonment, was tried, and finally beheaded. In revenge for which, her pusillanimous son, James I., when he came to the throne of England, had it rased to the foundations. Here was in ancient times a nunnery, and also an abbey. Distance from Oundle, 3 m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 307; in 1831, 280. A. P., £1,922.

FOULNESS, an island and a parish in the hundred of Rochford, co. of Essex. Living, a discharged rectory, exempt from visitation, in the dio. of London, rated at £15, returned at £98 12s. The church, a small edifice, erected at first as a chapel-of-ease, the inhabitants being frequently, by floods, prevented from attending divine service in their respective churches on the mainland, stands in the centre of the island, and is dedicated to St Mary. Patron, the earl of Winchelsea. "This island is computed to be about 20 miles in circuit, without reckoning the saltings towards the sea, which is not inclosed by a wall as the rest is. It is said to contain 4500 acres lying in different farms, the houses standing separately for convenience of the occupiers. Two-thirds of the land at least belong to the right honourable the earl of Winchelsea, who is lord of the manor, and holds courts leet and baron pro libitu. The soil is fruitful, producing good corn of all kinds, but the water brakish, being impregnated by the salt in the earth. They have none perfectly fresh but rain water, preserved in cisterns. Eight hours in twelve there is passage for a horse to Wakering." Morant's Essex, Vol. I. p. 324. The best oysters in England are taken here at the mouth of the Crouch. Distance from Rochford, 9 m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 396; in 1831, 630. A. P., £6,363.

FOULSHAM, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Eynsford, co. of Norfolk. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £27 14s. 9½d. Church ded. to the Holy Innocents. Patron, in 1829, Sir J. D. Astley, Bart. In 1770, this town was almost totally destroyed by fire. It has been rebuilt in a very superior style, and has a handsome and cheerful aspect. Tuesday is the market-day, corn being the chief commodity brought forward. Easter-Tuesday is held annually as a fair, partly for amusement, and partly for the sale of chapmen's ware; and the first Tuesday in May for the sale of cattle, toys, &c. &c. Distance from Norwich, 18 m. N.W.; from London, 108 N.E.E. Pop., in 1801, 605; in 1831, 958.

FOULSTON, a township in the parish of Kirk-Burton, W. R. of Yorkshire. Distance from Huddersfield, $7\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 1128; in 1831, 1573. A. P., £1,689.

FOULTON, a hamlet in the parish of Ramsey, co. of Essex. Here was formerly a chapel.

FOUNTAINS-EARTH, a township in the parish of Kirkby-Malzeard, W. R. of Yorkshire. The ruins of a fine Cistercian abbey, founded here in the middle of the 12th century, still exist. They occupy an area of upwards of two acres of ground, in a beautiful valley on the small rivulet called the Skell, surrounded on all sides by richly wooded hills, and are said to be the most interesting and the most extensive monastic remains in the kingdom. Distance from Rippon, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, including the chapelry of Middlesmoor, 329; in 1831, 413. A. P., £2 025.

FOVANT, or FOFFANT, a parish in the hundred of Cawdon and Cadworth, co. of Wilts. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £17. Church ded. to St George. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Pembroke. Distance from Wilton, 7 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 514; in 1831, 553. A. P., £2,583.

FOWBERRY, a township in the parish of Chatton, co. of Northumberland. The beautiful seats of Fowberry Park and Fowberry Tower are both in this township. The latter, especially, is most pleasantly and romantically situated on the south bank of the Till. Distance from Wooler, 3 m. E.N.E.

FOWEY, a sea-port, borough, and market-town, in the hundred of Powder, and new eastern division of the co. of Cornwall. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter, rated at £10. Church ded. to St Fimbarus, who is said to have been bishop of Cork in the 5th century. Patron, in 1829, J. B. Austin, Esq. The town is situated at the mouth of the river Fowey, along the west bank of which it extends nearly a mile. The houses are built mostly of stone, but the streets are so narrow, and have so many acute angles, that it is difficult to drive through it with carriages of any description. It possesses a spacious market-house, over which is the town-hall, erected a few years ago at the expense of Viscount Valletort and Philip Rashleigh, Esq., at that time representatives for the borough. It was in early times a place of very considerable commercial importance. To the fleet of Edward III., when he lay before Calais, it contributed 47 ships, being the highest number contributed by any port in England, and its quota of mariners at the same time was 770, exceeded only by the port of Yarmouth. Its modern importance is not by any means equal to what from these statements one is naturally led to expect. With the ports of Winchelsea and Rye, its pilchard carriers might perhaps still prove themselves 'The Gallants of Fowey,' but what would be their fate before the ports of Bristol or Liverpool? In the pilchard fishery almost all the inhabitants are in some shape or other engaged; and it is so extensive, as to employ a great number of vessels, 28,000 hogsheds of these fish being calculated as the average annual amount brought into the port. Besides pilchards, there are shipped at the port of Fowey large quantities of copper ore. In some late years the amount has been nearly 30,000 tons. China-clay and stone is also shipped to a very large amount. The market-day is Saturday; and it has three annual fairs, Shrove-Tuesday, May 1st, and September 10th. In the corporation are vested the tolls of the market and fairs, with the dues of the harbour, subject to a fee farm-rent of £2. As an outlet to the west, Fowey is considered the best port in the west of England. It is at all times safe, and has excellent anchorage, where vessels of 1000 tons can ride in safety, and may enter at the lowest tide. The shores, though bold, are free from danger, and vessels in distress may run in with safety though they have neither cable nor anchor. In the reign of Henry IV. the harbour was attacked and the town partly burnt by the French, in consequence of which, that monarch had two towers—the ruins of which are still visible—erected for its defence at the public charge. It is now defended by two small batteries of modern erection, and the fort of St Catherine's, built by the townsmen in the reign of Henry VIII. This latter stands upon a magnificent pile of rocks bounding a creek of the river, and all of them are so much elevated, that no ship could bring her guns to bear upon them. Fowey was made a member of the cinque ports in the reign of Edward III., and from successfully repelling an attack by the vessels of Rye and Winchelsea, because its vessels refused to strike sail when passing by these harbours, the corporation had the honour of quartering its arms with those of these ports, and hence had the appellation of 'The Gallants of Fowey.' It was incorporated by charter in the reign of James II., again under William and Mary, and a third time in 1819. Under these charters, the government consisted of a mayor, recorder, eight aldermen, a town-clerk, &c. &c., but a writ of oustler having been brought against them for abuse of chartered privileges, and judgment awarded against them in Trinity term, 1827, no corporate act has been attempted since. The only courts at present held are those of the lord of the manor, including a court leet and a court baron. Fowey returned regularly two members to parliament since the 13th of Queen Elizabeth, until disfranchised by the reform act. There are here places of worship for Wesleyan Methodists and Independents. Distance from Looe, 29 m. S.S.W.; from London, 234½ S.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 1155; in 1831, 1767. A. P., £4,856.

FOWEY (THE), a river of Cornwall. It has its source about four miles S.E. of Camelord, and, keeping a south-westerly course, falls into the English channel at the town of Fowey, of which it forms the harbour.

FRAMCOTE, a chapelry in the parish of Power-Guyting, co. of Gloucester, 3 m. E. from Winchcombe.

FRAMFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Loxfield-Dorset, rape of Pevensey, co. of Sussex. Living, a discharged vicarage and a peculiar in the dio. of Canterbury, rated at £13 6s. 8d. Church ded. to St Thomas à Becket. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Thanet. Iron-works were formerly carried on here; and there was near Stonebridge a mineral spring of great celebrity, which, in consequence of the draining of a piece of boggy ground in the neighbourhood, has entirely disappeared. There is here an endowed school. Distance from Loxfield, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 969; in 1831, 1468. A. P., £4413.

FRAMLAND, a hundred in the co. of Leicester. It lies on the N.E. corner of the county, bordering on Lincolnshire; comprises 40 parishes, with the town of Melton-Mowbray; and, in 1801, contained a pop. of 17,197 souls.

FRAMLINGHAM, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Loes, co. of Suffolk. Living, a rectory with the curacy of Saxtead, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £43 6s. 8d. The church—having a tower nearly 100 feet high, with a peal of eight bells—is ded. to St Michael. Patrons, the master and fellows of Pembroke-hall college, Cambridge. The town of Framlingham stands on an eminence not far from the sources of the Ore, a river which, passing at a short distance from the town, falls into the sea at Oreford. It is tolerably well built, is lighted by subscription, and is amply supplied with water. It is celebrated for the salubrity of its air; the approaches to it are on all sides pleasant, and though a very ancient, it is a rapidly improving town. Its principal trade is in malt. The market-day is Saturday, chiefly for corn, occasionally for cattle; and it has two annual fairs, Whit-Monday and October 11th. This town lays claim to a very high antiquity, having belonged to the Icenii, a British tribe at one time in friendly alliance with the Romans. At what time the castle—which is still the chief ornament of the place—was founded, is uncertain, but it was certainly the occasional residence of Redwal, one of the early kings of the East Angles. It was also the retreat of King Edmund when, pursued by the Danes, he fled from Dunwich, and whence, incautiously attempting to escape, he fell into their hands and was put to death. It was also the retreat of the Princess Mary during the time in which the friends of the Lady Jane Grey attempted to place her upon the throne. The cause of Mary was espoused with great zeal by the inhabitants of this neighbourhood. The interior buildings have been taken down, and an almshouse and a workhouse erected with the materials; but the outer walls are nearly entire, and at a little distance exhibit no traces of that ruin which hangs over and dwells within them. Besides the established church, there are here places of worship for the Independents, the Wesleyan Methodists, and the Unitarians. A free school was founded here in 1636. Distance from Ipswich, 18 m. N.N.E.; from London, 87 m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, 1854; in 1831, 2,445. A. P., £8,696.

FRAMLINGHAM, or FRAMLINGHAM-EARL, a parish in the hundred of Henstead, co. of Norfolk. Living, a discharged rectory with that of Bixley, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £3 6s. 8d. Church ded. to St Andrew. The patronage included in that of Bixley. Distance from Norwich, 5 m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 96; in 1831, 74. A. P., £968.

FRAMLINGHAM, or FRAMLINGHAM-PICOT, a parish in the hundred of Henstead, co. of Norfolk. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £3 6s. 8d. Patron, the bishop of Norwich. Distance from Norwich, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 256; in 1831, 302. A. P., £1,016.

FRAMLINGTON (LONG), a parish and township in the E. division of Coquetdale ward, co. of Northumberland. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham. Patron, the vicar of Felton. Framlington is pleasantly situated on the north road leading by Coldstream to Edinburgh. It is a thriving village. Fairs for the sale of sheep, black cattle, horses, &c. &c. are held on the second Tuesday of July and 25th of October. There is here a Presbyterian congregation which has existed since the year 1640. Distance from Morpeth, 11 m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, of the township, 471; of the entire parish, 571: in 1831, of the former, 543; of the latter, 735. A. P., of the township, £4,011; of the entire parish, £6,407.

FRAMPTON, a parish in the liberty of Frampton, Bridport division of the co. of Dorset. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, rated at £11 9s. 7d., returned at £109 13s. 4d. Church ded. to St Bartholomew. Patron, in 1829, F. J. Browne, Esq. Frampton—formerly a market-town—is situated on the river Frome, from which it takes its name, and over which it has an excellent stone-bridge. The river here abounds with trout celebrated for peculiar excellency of flavour. Anciently the town had a market on Thursday, and four annual fairs; of the latter, two are still held, March 9th and May 4th, for horses, cattle, &c. Here are a national and free school. Frampton was originally a priory of Black monks, cell to the abbey of St Stephen at Caen, in Normandy. Distance from Dorchester, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 295; in 1831, 376. A. P., £3,254.

FRAMPTON, a tything in the parish of Sapperton, hundred of Bisley, co. of Gloucester, $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. from Cirencester. Pop., in 1831, 178.

FRAMPTON, a parish in the wapentake of Kilton, parts of Holland, co. of Lincoln. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £18 19s. 4d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, C. K. Tunnard Esq. Distance from Boston, FRAMPTON-COTTEREL, a parish in the upper division of the hundred of Langley and Swineshead, co. of Gloucester. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, rated at £11 18s. 0d. Church ded. to St Peter. Patron, the duke of Beaufort. There are places of worship here for the Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. Distance from Chippling-Sodbury, 4½ m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 1208; in 1831, 1816. A. P., £4,394.

FRAMPTON-UPON-SEVERN, a parish in the lower division of the hundred of Whitstone, co. of Gloucester. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester, rated at £7 11s. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, J. Dunsford, Esq. This parish lies along the bank of the Severn, by the impetuous tides of which it is frequently inundated. To remedy this great inconvenience, the earl of Berkley erected a bulwark, called the Hock-crib, intended to confine the waters within their proper channel, which in ordinary tides it generally does, but in high spring-tides, many parts, and particularly one part of the village, is still laid under water, which, at certain seasons of the year, occasions a great prevalence of intermitting fever. In 904, this place was the scene of a sanguinary battle between the Mercians and West Angles on the one side, and the Danes on the other. The latter were totally routed, with the loss of three of their chieftains or kings. Distance from Dursley, 6½ m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 860; in 1831, 1055. A. P., £4,992.

The village of Frodingham is situated a little to the east of the river Hull, which is thence navigable to the town of Hull, and had formerly a weekly market. Owing to the superior localities of Great Driffield, the ancient privileges of Frodingham were transferred thither about seventy years ago, since which time its market has been discontinued. Distance from Great Driffield, $\frac{5}{8}$ m. S.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 365; in 1831, 711. A. P., £3,660.

FRODINGHAM (SOUTH), a township in the parish of Owithorne, E. R. of Yorkshire. Distance from Patrington, 4 m. N. Pop., in 1801, 50; in 1831, 60. A. P., £1,756.

FRODSHAM, a parish and township in the hundred of Eddisbury, co.-palatine of Chester. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chester, rated at £23 13s. 11½d. The church, a fine ancient fabric of red free stone, is ded. to St Lawrence. Patrons, the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford. Frodsham is pleasantly situated on an eminence stretching along the south bank of the Weaver immediately above its confluence with the Mersey. It extends nearly a mile in length along the road from Chester to Warrington. At the east end of the town there is a stone-bridge over the Weaver, and at the west end stood the castle of Frodsham, supposed to be of Norman origin, but consumed by fire, 1642. The burgesses of Frodsham had a charter from Ranulph de Blandeville, sixth earl of Chester, about the year 1220, which was confirmed the 33d of Henry VIII., and 21st of Elizabeth; but the manor being separated from the earldom about the beginning of the 17th century, the charter became of no avail. Courts leet and baron are now held twice a-year, and there are separate presentments one for the borough and fee, and one for the borough and lordship. The market, which is inconsiderable, is held on Saturday; and it has two annual fairs, May 15th and August 21st. The tolls of the market and of the fairs belong to the lord of the manor. The refining of salt is the principal branch of business carried on here. There are besides a few flour mills and some cotton factories. The Wesleyan Methodists have here a place of worship, and there is an excellent free school. Distance from Chester, 10 m. N.E. by N.; from London, 191 m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, of the township 1250, of the entire parish 3362; in 1831, of the former 1746, of the latter 5547. A. P. for the township, £5,780, of the remainder of the parish returned under the chapelry of Alvanley, the lordship of Frodsham, and the townships of Helsby, Kingsley, Mauley, Newton, and Norley, £14,623, total £20,403.

FRODSHAM, a lordship in the parish of Frodsham, hundred of Eddisbury, co.-palatine of Chester. Distance from Chester, 11 m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 301; in 1831, 1024. A. P., £3,655.

FROGGATT, a township in the parish of Bakewell, hundred of High Peak, co. of Derby, 2 m. N.E. by E. from Stony-Middleton. Pop., in 1801, 103; in 1831, 167. A. P., £234.

FROME (THE), a river in Herefordshire. It has its sources in the north-east part of the county, and running to the south washes the parishes of Bromyard, Bishop's-Frome, Frome-Castle, &c., after which it bends to the south-west and falls into the Lug, about 4 m. east of Hereford.

FROME (THE), a river in Gloucestershire. Running north-west it falls into the Severn near Berkeley.

FROME (THE), a small river of Gloucestershire, which, holding a southerly course falls into the Avon at Bristol.

FROME-SELWOOD, a market-town parish in the hundred of Frome, co. of Somerset. The livings are a vicarage and two curacies—the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells. The vicarage is rated at £22, endowed with £3,000. The church—a spacious structure consisting of a nave, north and south aisles, chancel, and four sepulchral chapels, having a square tower surmounted by a spire—is ded. to St John the Baptist. Patron, the marquess of Bath. Christ church, one of the curacies, was erected by subscription, in 1818. Patron, the vicar of Frome. Three miles south of the town is the Church in the Woodlands, erected 1712. The town is seated on several abrupt hills that rise from the south bank of the river Frome, over which at the lower part of the town there is a stone-bridge of five arches. The woollen manufacture has long been carried on here to a great extent, particularly broad cloths and kerseymeres of the finest qualities. The making of wool cards is also extensively carried on, the makers here having not long ago nearly a monopoly of the trade. Ale is brewed here of extraordinary quality. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday, and the fairs are February 24th and November 25th for cattle, cheese, &c. The government was formerly vested in a bailiff, at present the police is maintained by the county-magistrates and by constables chosen at the courts-leet of the marquess of Bath and the earl of Cork and Orrery, who are lords of the manors. Frome now returns one member to parliament. The electors are 450 in number. Tanner mentions a monastery founded here before the year 705 by St Aldhelm. The Society of Friends, the Baptists, the Independents, the Methodists, and the Presbyterians, have all places of worship here. A free grammar school was founded here in the reign of Edward VI., but has been allowed to degenerate into a private establishment. A national school has been recently erected by subscription. Distance from London, 105 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 8748; in 1831, 12,210. A. P., £16,009.

FROME-ST-QUINTIN, a parish in the hundred of Tollerford, Dorchester division of the co. of Dorset. Living, a rectory with the curacy of Evershot, in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, rated at £15 7s. 1d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Caldwell, in this parish, now a farm, was formerly a chapelry. Distance from Beaminster, 9½ m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 132; in 1831, 143. A. P., £859.

FROME-VAUCHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Tollerford, Dorchester division of the co. of Dorset. Living, a rectory united with that of Batcombe, in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, rated at £7 11s. 0½d. Patron, in 1829, Lord Bolton. Distance from Dorchester, 7½ m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 81; in 1831, 135. A. P., £1,069.

FROME-HAMPTON, a township in the parish of Marden, co. of Hereford, 5½ m. N.N.E. from Hereford.

FROME-WHITFIELD, in the hundred of St George, Dorchester division of the co. of Dorset. "This ancient parish, formerly an independent one, though now included in that of the Holy Trinity in Dorchester, receives its name from the river Frome, in which it stands, and its additional one, from its ancient lords the Whitfields. It is situated about half a mile north of Dorchester, in the hundred of St George. The ancient ville and the church, ded. to St Nicholas, lay near Holles-Frome, as appears by several ruins of houses, but has been long depopulated; and the manor, once parcel of the duchy of Lancaster, extinguished. It consists of three farms, viz., Coker's-Frome, Holles-Frome, and Whitwet." Hutchins's Dorset, Vol. I. p. 393.

FROSTENDEN, a parish in the hundred of Blything, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £12. Church ded. to All Saints. Patron, in 1829, Sir Thomas Gooch, Bart. Distance from Southwold, 4½ m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 266; in 1831, 373. A. P., £1,617.

FROSTERLY, a hamlet in the parish of Staplope, co.-palatine of Durham. This was at one time a chapelry. There is a place of worship here for the Wesleyan Methodists. There is also an endowed school. Distance from Walsingham, 3½ m. W.

Patron, in 1829, the Rev. S. L. Noble. Distance from Lutterworth, 4½ m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 297; in 1831, 278. A. P., £2,881.

FROXFIELD, a parish in the hundred of East-Meon Alton south division, co. of Southampton. Living, a perpetual curacy to the vicarage of East-Meon, a peculiar in the dio. of Winchester. Church ded. to St Peter. Patron, the vicar of East-Meon. There is here a free school. Distance from Petersfield, 3½ m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 437; in 1831, 618. A. P., £4,269.

FROXFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Kinwardstone, co. of Wilts. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £8 16s. 4d., returned at £39 5s. Church ded. to All Saints. Patrons, the dean and canons of Windsor. Here is an alms-house, founded and endowed in 1686, by Sarah, duchess-dowager of Somerset, for the maintenance of 30 widows, the number to be augmented to 50 so soon as the revenue amounted to £400 per annum. To this sum the proceeds amounted in 1775, when 20 apartments were added to the original building, which completed the design: the whole structure forming an oblong quadrangle, surrounding a court, with a small chapel in the interior. The objects of this charity are 30 widows of clergymen belonging to any part of England, and 20 widows of laymen, belonging to the county of Wilts, none of them possessing an income of more than £20 per annum.

The allowance was originally £6 per annum, which has been gradually augmented till it has reached £21, which enables the inmates to live in a very comfortable manner. The whole is confided to the care of 12 trustees, chosen from the nobility and the principal gentry of the county. The steward, chaplain, apothecary, and porter, are nominated by the trustees. The salary of the chaplain is £70 per annum, with the rectory of the parish of Hewish, worth £150 per annum on the first vacancy after his appointment. Distance from Hungerford, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 492; in 1831, 581. A. P., £1,380.

FRYERNING, a parish in the hundred of Chelmsford, co. of Essex. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, rated at £9. Church ded. to St Mary. Patrons, the warden and fellows of Wadham college, Oxford. Distance from Ingatestone, 1 m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 646; in 1831, 670. A. P., £2,810.

FRYSTONE (FERRY), a parish in the upper division of the wapentake of Osgoldcross, W. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a discharged vicarage, a peculiar of the dean and chapter of York, rated at £5 19s. 2d., returned at £113 8s. 10d. Church ded. to St Andrew. Patrons, the sub-chantor and vicars-choral of the cathedral church of York. Distance from Ferrybridge, $\frac{3}{4}$ m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 705; in 1831, 833. A. P., £3,952.

FRYSTONE (MONK), a parish and township in the lower division of the wapentake of Barkstone-Ash, W. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of York, endowed with £1,500. Patron, the prebendary of Winstow in York cathedral. Distance from Ferrybridge, 4 m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, of the township 277, of the entire parish 581; in 1831, of the former 430, of the latter 863. A. P. of the township, £1,281; of the entire parish returned under its three townships Barton-Salmon, Hiflam, and Monk-Frystone, £3,544.

FRYTON, a township in the parish of Hovingham, N. R. of Yorkshire. Distance from New-Malton, $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 72; in 1831, 60. A. P., £985.

FUGGLESTONE-ST-PETER, a parish in the hundred of Branch and Dole, co. of Wilts, and now included within the boundaries of Wilton. Living, a rectory with that of Bemerton in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £24. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Pembroke. According to Leland this was the burial place of Ethelred, king of the West Saxons, who was slain by the Danes, in 827. Distance from Wilton, 1 m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 590; in 1831, 515. A. P., £757.

FULBECK, a parish in the wapentake of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co. of Lincoln. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £20 15s. 7d. Church ded. to St Nicholas. Patron, in 1829, Colonel Henry Fane. Distance from Grantham, $10\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, 397; in 1831, 650. A. P., £5,324.

FULBOURN, a village in the hundred of Flendish, co. of Cambridge, which comprehends the parishes of All Saints and St Vigors. The living of the former is a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely, rated at £14 17s. Patron the bishop of Ely. The living of the latter is a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Ely, rated at £25 15s. 2d. Church ded. to St Vigor. Patrons, the master and fellows of St John's college, Cambridge. Both churches stood in one churchyard till 1776, when that of All Saints, being ruinous, was taken down by act of parliament. All the parochial assessments are united for the common benefit, and the names of both are sunk in that of Fulbourn, but each parish appoints its own officers, and the benefices continue distinct. There are alms-houses here of a very ancient date, for eleven poor persons; and Elizabeth March, in 1722, bequeathed a farm now worth upwards of £100 a year, to be equally divided for the endowment of schools in the parishes of Fulbourn, Haddenham, Binkley, Fen-Ditton, and Histon. Distance from Cambridge, 5 m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 702; in 1831, 1207. A. P., £4,531.

FULBROOK, a hamlet in the parish of Hogslow, co. of Buckingham. Distance from Winslow, 4 m. S.S.W.

FULBROOK, a parish in the hundred of Chadlington, co. of Oxford. Living, a perpetual curacy to the vicarage of Burford, in the archd. and dio. of Oxford. Chapel ded. to St James. FULBROOK, or FULBROKE, a parish in the Snitterfield division of the hundred of Barlichway, co. of Warwick. Living, a rectory united to the curacy of Sherbourne, in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, rated at 14s. 2d. The church has been demolished. For Fulbrook castle, see article COMPTON-WYNIATES. Distance from Stratford-upon-Avon, 4 m. N.E. by N. Pop., in 1801, 81; in 1831, 77.

FULBROOKE (THE), a small stream in the co.-palatine of Chester. It falls into the Wheelock.

FULFORD, a tything partly in the parishes of Cheriton, Fitzpaine, and Shobrook, in the hundred of West Budleigh, but chiefly in the parish of Crediton, hundred of Crediton, co. of Devon. Distance from Crediton, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.N.E.

FULFORD, a chapelry in the parish of Stone, co. of Stafford. Living, a curacy with that of Stone, in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, certified to value £25 17s., returned at £56 14s. Chapel ded. to St Nicholas. Patron, in 1829, Thomas Allen, Esq. There are here quarries of freestone of an excellent quality. There are also two schools with small endowments. Distance from Stone, $4\frac{1}{4}$ m. N.E. The returns have not been made separately.

FULFORD-AMBO, a parish in the wapentake of Ouse and Darwent, E. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a curacy with that of St Olave, certified to value £6 15s. 4d., returned at £115. Chapel ded. to St Oswald. Patron, in 1829, Thomas Key, Esq. Here are the York barracks, and an asylum for lunatics, called the Retreat, under the superintendence of the Society of Friends. There is also a messuage and rent charge of £9 12s. per annum, the bequest of John Key, Esq., for the educating of 20 children. This parish is comprised in the townships of Fulford-Gate and Fulford-Water. Distance of the former from York, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.; of the latter, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, returned wholly under the township of Fulford-Gate, 642; in 1831, returned under Fulford-Gate, 905; under Fulford-Water, 29; in all, 934. A. P., for the former township, £4,929; for the latter, £915; total, £5,844.

FULFORD (GREAT), in the parish of Dunsford, hundred of Wenford, co. of Devon. Distance from Exeter, 8 m. W.

FULFORD (NORTH), a tything in the parish of Kingston, hundred of Taunton and Taunton-Denn, co. of Somerset. It comprises the hundreds of Cutley and Yarford.

FULFORD (SOUTH), a hamlet in the parish of Petminster, co. of Somerset.

FULHAM, a parish in the Kensington division of the hundred of Ossulstone, co. of Middlesex. The living comprises a rectory, a sinecure, and a vicarage, in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London; the former rated at £26, the latter at £10. Church ded. to All Saints. Patron of the rectory, the bishop of London; of the vicarage, the rector. In aid of this the original parish church, and to meet the increased population, there is a church at Waltham-Green, dedicated to St John, [see WALTHAM,] on the south side of the road between Kensington and Hammersmith; another, erected at the expense of Richard Hunt, Esq., dedicated to St Mary; and in the Hammersmith division of the parish are the church of St Paul and the chapel of St Peter. Fulham is situated on the north bank of the Thames, opposite to Putney, with which it is connected by a wooden-bridge, erected in 1729. The principal manufactory carried on here is the making of brown stone-ware jars, pots, &c. Most of the ground in the parish is laid out, and cultivated as market-gardens, nurseries, &c., for the supply of the London market, which affords employment for a great number of people. Fishing is also carried on to a considerable extent. The fish taken are barbel, eels, lampreys, roach, dace, flounders, and shad. The dace are caught chiefly for their scales, which are sold to the Jews, by whom they are used in the manufacture of false pearls. The manor, which had been in the possession of the see of London from the close of the 7th century, was, by the orders of parliament, sold in 1647. It was restored to the see in 1660; and the manor-house continues to be the summer residence of the bishop of London to this day, as it has been since the reign of Henry VII. It occupies a low spot of ground on the banks of the river, a little to the west of the village of Fulham. The original buildings formed a quadrangle, with little of either elegance or convenience, but they have received numberless additions, and are upon the whole vastly improved. The gardens, which comprise about 37 acres of ground, are highly celebrated. Fulham cannot boast of the regularity of its streets, but the houses are for the most part elegant, and are inhabited chiefly by genteel families connected with the metropolis. There are here a place of worship for the Independents, and two national schools. Distance from St Paul's cathedral, London, 7 m. S.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, of the village of Fulham, 4428; of the entire parish, including Hammersmith, 10,028; in 1831, of the former, 7317; of the latter, 17,539. A. P. of the village, in 1815, £28,551; in 1828, £36,017; of the chapelry of Hammersmith, in 1815, £30,349; total of the parish, in 1815, £58,900.

FULNECK, a hamlet in the parish of Calverley, wapentake of Morley, W. R. of Yorkshire. It is a settlement belonging to the Moravians, founded about the year 1748, and is now a considerable village. It is situated on the slope of a rising ground, and consists of two streets well paved. The buildings are simple but neat. On one side are the habitations for single men, and on the other those for single women; those who have families have also a separate place assigned them. It has a chapel and burial-ground attached. About 400 persons are here collected. The men are employed in various branches of the woollen trade, the women in spinning and embroidering. Lamb's Hill was originally the name of this place, which was changed to Fulneck, after the native place of the founders, who had emigrated hither from Moravia. The place has been for some time rather on the decline, the rules of Count Zinzendorf not being calculated for the increase either of population or manufactures. Distance from Leeds, 6 m. S.W.

FULNERBY, a parish in the W. division of the wapentake of Wraggoc, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. Living, a perpetual curacy to the rectory of Rand, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln. Patron, the rector of Rand. Distance from Wragby, 4 m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 190; in 1831, 250. A. P., £2,065.

FURNESS-ABBEY, in the parish of Dalton in Furness, hundred of Lonsdale, north of the sands, co.-palatine of Lancaster. * The monastery, begun at Tulket in Amounderness, A. D. 1124, for the monks of Savigny in France, was, after three years, viz. A. D. 1127, removed to this valley, then called Bekanges-Gill. Stephen, then earl of Morton and Bologne, afterwards king of England, was the founder of this abbey, which was of the Cistercian order, and commended to the patronage of the blessed Virgin Mary. It was endowed at the dissolution with £805 16s. 5d. per ann., Dugd.; £966 7s. 10d., Speed.—Tanner's Not. Mon. "The lordship of Furness, in the north-west of Lancashire and hundred of Loynesdale, comprehends all that tract of land and islands, included within the following bounds:—that is, beginning where the water descends from Wrinose hills, in Little Langdale, to Elterwater, which divides Lancashire from Westmoreland; so along the said water to Brotley-Bridge, and where it runs into Windermere, and so down the said mere to Leven Sands into the sea, thence along the sea to the isle of Foulney, including the said island; so along by the isles of the Pile of Foudrey and Walsey to the river Dudden, which divides Lancashire from Cumberland, and up to the spot where the water of that river comes from Wrinose hills, and from thence to the place where the water descends from Wrinose hills to the Eltwater, where the boundary began. Thus Furness is separated by water from Westmoreland, Cumberland, and the rest of Lancashire, and was for that reason called by the abbot an island. The liberty of the lordship of Furness extends itself over all the said tract of land and islands called Furness, for a similar reason as Amounderness was formerly, by the Saxons, called Agmounderness, because it stretches out into the sea like a Nase, a promontory, or ness of land, between the rivers Ribble and Cocker; so Furness, lying to the north of Amounderness, stretching itself between the two estuaries of Leren and Dudden, in like manner received from the Saxons a similar name, and all the lands and tenements included therein, as well freehold as copyhold, are held either immediately of the lord of the said liberty, or of the lord of some manor, lying within the same, and who holds such manor of the lord of the said liberty." West's Antiquities of Furness, p. 142. The scenery of this district partakes of the romantic character of the adjoining northern counties. It is a wild and rugged region, stored with iron ore and slate, and covered with a growth of underwood, which is cut down in succession, and made into charcoal for the use of the iron-furnaces. Near the sea, and in the vicinity of Furness abbey, the land is moderately fertile. The estuary which separates this portion from the rest of Lancashire is continually crossed by horses and carriages at low water. The abbey of Furness rose high in rank and power; and the ruins of its architectural splendour are to this day entitled to the first place among the relics of antiquity in the county. The abbot of Furness was invested with extraordinary privileges, and exercised jurisdiction over the whole district; even the military were, in some degree, dependent upon him. The situation of the abbey being formidable by nature, gave something of a warlike consequence to the monks: they erected a watch-tower on the summit of a commanding hill, which commences its rise near the walls of the monastery, overlooking all Low Furness, and the arm of the sea immediately beneath it: thus, they were enabled to prevent surprise by alarming the adjacent coast with signals on the approach of an enemy. The entrance to these romantic ruins is through a light pointed arch, festooned with ivy hanging gracefully down its crumbling sides; hence the path, spread with fragments of desolation, which are intermingled with richly-tinted foliage, leads through ruinous isles and cloisters, while the sounds of a gurgling brook, hard by, contribute to lull the mind into solemn contemplation. The Norman circular arch, and the elegant pointed one, are equally conspicuous throughout the building, forming an interesting combination of strength and beauty: the whole exhibits an impressive picture of venerable decay, and a last sad scene of fallen greatness, with its mouldering ruins dismantled, shattered, and spread abroad by the desolating hand of time. The dimensions of the principal parts of the abbey will give the reader an idea of its importance. They were as follow: the length of the interior of the church, from east to west, 287 feet 6 in.; width of the interior of the choir, 28 ft.; and of the nave, 70 ft.; height of the side walls, 54 ft.; interior length of the transept, 130 ft.; width, 18 ft. 6 in. The chapter-house was 60 ft. long, and 45 ft. 6 in. wide. The cloisters were 31 ft. 6 in. wide, forming a quadrangle of 334 ft. 6 in. by 102 ft. 6 in. The church and cloisters were encompassed with a wall, which commenced at the east side of the great door; and a space of ground containing 65 acres was surrounded by another wall which inclosed the abbey mills, together with the kilns, and ovens, and stews for receiving fish. This abbey had nine other dependents on it. As early as the reign of King Edward I., the rents were, as stated in a manuscript in the Manchester library, £1,599 8s. 2d. The abbey was surrendered by Roger Pyle, the then abbot, 28th Henry VIII., who, for his compliance, received the rectory of Dalton; and the monks, to the number of twenty-nine, had among them a grant equal to £300 per annum. The dissolution of the abbey greatly affected both the civil and domestic state of Low Furness, which for several centuries had been improving in consequence. The large demand for provisions of all kinds, occasioned by abundant hospitality, and the frequent concourse of company resorting to the abbey, dropped at once; the boons and rents were no longer paid in kind, and agriculture became proportionally depressed. The abbey of Furness must, in its pristine perfection, have been one of the most extensive and important monastic establishments in the kingdom; although much of this completeness must be referred to a period subsequent to the foundation of the building, and to the accumulating wealth and power of successive abbots. Distance of Furness abbey from Ulverstone, 7½ m. S.W.

Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, Trinity college, Cambridge. The village of Gainford is pleasantly situated on the north bank of the Tees. The lord of the manor, the marquess of Cleveland, holds courts leet and baron once a month at Barnard-castle, the chapelry of which contains more than one-half of the whole pop. of the parish. Distance of the township of Gainford from Darlington, $7\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, of the township, 445; of the entire parish, 5359: in 1831, of the former, 524; of the latter, 7430. A. P. of the township, £3,274; of the entire parish, £30,593.

GAINSBOROUGH, a market-town and parish in the S. division of the wapentake of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £22 16s. 8d. The church, originally founded in 1829 by the Knights Templars, but lately rebuilt at the expense of the inhabitants, is ded. to All Saints. Patron, the prebendary of Corringham in the cathedral church of Lincoln. The town is situated on the east bank of the Trent, over which there is at this place a stone bridge. It is comprised principally in one long street, running parallel with the river. There are here some very extensive rope walks, mills worked by steam for bruising linseed, a number of malt-houses, three ship-yards, and several brass and iron foundries. The market-day is Tuesday; and there are two annual fairs, commencing, the one on Easter-Monday, the other on the 20th of October, and both are continued for ten days. Gainsborough is one of the polling places for the members for the parts of Lindsey. The constable is elected annually at a court leet, and courts baron are held twice in the year. Gainsborough is admirably situated for the purposes of commerce. The Trent, which falls into the estuary of the Humber about 20 miles below the town, is navigable for ships of 200 tons burden, and by the different canals it extends its navigation through the interior of the kingdom, and across it to Liverpool, Bristol, and London. The tide runs up the Trent with prodigious rapidity. Under the Heptarchy, this town belonged first to the kingdom of Northumberland, but afterward to that of Mercia. It was here that Alfred the Great celebrated his nuptials with Ealswitha, the daughter of a Mercian nobleman. Besides the established church, there are here places of worship for the Baptists, the Society of Friends, the Independents, the Methodists Primitive and Wesleyan, and the Presbyterians. There are here what is called a free school, founded by Queen Elizabeth, and a school conducted on the Madras system.

GARSTANG, a parish and township in the hundred of Amounderness, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Living, a vicarage and a curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, rated, the former at £14 3s. 4d., the latter not in charge, returned at £97 18s. The church, situated about a mile and a half from the town in a part of the parish called Garstang Church-town in the township of Kirkland, is ded. to St Helen. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. John Pedder. The curacy, the chapel for which is situated within the town, is in the patronage of the vicar of Garstang. There are three dissenting places of worship here, viz. an Independent, a Methodist, and a Roman Catholic chapel. Garstang is situated between Preston and Lancaster on the great western north road, and close upon the river Wyer. By the Lancaster canal which is carried over the Wyer by a handsome aqueduct near the end of its principal street, Garstang communicates with the principal rivers of England, and possesses every facility for trade. Its manufactures, however, are not very extensive. They consist chiefly of hats and sackings. A few looms are employed in weaving linen and cotton goods, and there are numerous and extensive cotton-mills and large calico printing establishments in the parish, but the town derives its greatest advantages from its being a thoroughfare. The borough—which is co-extensive with the township—was incorporated in 1314. In 1680 the charter was renewed with additional privileges. By this charter the government was vested in a bailiff and 7 capital burgesses, to be elected annually. The baillif is chosen from among the capital burgesses, and in case of the death or removal of one of the capital burgesses, the remaining burgesses fill up his place from among the freemen. The freedom of the borough is inherited by birth, and obtained by servitude or by gift from the corporation. A court of pie-powder is held by the baillif during the fairs, and courts baron held twice in the year possess jurisdiction for the recovery of small debts. The petty-sessions for the hundred are also held here. The market-day is Thursday, and from the first Thursday in Lent till Holy Thursday, every alternate Thursday is a cattle-market. The fairs are Holy Thursday, July 10th, and November 22d. Distance from Preston, 11 m. W.N.W.; from Lancaster, 11 m. S.; and from London, 229 m. N.W. by N. Pop., in 1801, of the township 731; of the entire parish, returned under twelve townships, one chapelry, and one hamlet, 5789; in 1831, of the former 929; of the latter 6927. A. GATESHEAD,

An ancient borough and parish in the east division of Chester ward, co. of Durham. This town stands on the south bank of the Tyne, opposite Newcastle, to which it forms a suburb, and with which it is connected by a substantial stone bridge. Some of the streets are lighted with gas, and others with oil. Here are extensive collieries, a number of chemical laboratories, and several manufactories of cast and wrought iron, glass, and whitening. Pop., in 1801, including the parish of Gateshead-Fell, 8,697; in 1831, 15,177. A. P., Gateshead-Fell included, £25,205.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Durham, rated at £27 13s. 4d. The church, a cruciform structure, bears evident marks of remote antiquity, and is ded. to St Mary. Patron, the bishop of Durham. Here was a monastery, whereof Utan was abbot, before A. D. 653. Mr Wallis says that here was a cell to the Benedictine nunnery at Newcastle, founded by Nicholas de Farnham, bishop of Durham, about A. D. 1247. It was valued, 26th Henry VIII., as having in yearly revenues £109 4s. 4d., according to Speed. The patronage of it seems to have been granted, 7th Edward VI., to the mayor and burgesses of Newcastle. Here was also a hospital dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The hospital of St Edmund—now called King James's hospital—has survived the Reformation. The old chapel of St Edmund is a good specimen of early English architecture. A new chapel to this hospital was erected by subscription in 1810, in which divine service is performed on the Sabbath, and a national school held through the week. The Independents have two places of worship here, the Wesleyan Methodists four, and the Presbyterians one. There is here a free school called the 'Anchor-orage school,' and two almshouses. A subscription news-room has existed for some time.

Franchise and Government.—Gateshead now returns one member to parliament. The number of electors is about 750. The returning officer is appointed annually by the sheriff of the county of Durham. From the earliest period of its records, till 1695, Gateshead was governed by a bailiff nominated by the bishop; since that year it has been governed by two stewards, chosen by the boroughholders and freemen. A number of trading companies were formerly incorporated here, but all of these corporations have become extinct.

History.]—"When or from whom the borough of Gateshead had its foundation we are also ignorant. The first record we find relative to it, is that of Bishop Pudsey, in the year 1164, in which he gives to the burgesses of Gateshead the liberty of his forest there, under certain restrictions. By this charter the bishop grants also to the burgesses that each shall have in right of his burghage similar liberties to those enjoyed by the burgesses of Newcastle in right of their burghages, and that they shall have free passage within the liberties of the palatinate with their goods, clear of all dues and exactions. In Edward the Sixth's time, Gateshead was annexed to Newcastle, but in the succeeding reign it was reunited to the bishopric of Durham. Tyne bridge in part appertains to the county of Durham."—Hutchinson's Durham, vol. ii. p. 454. In 1553 this town was by act of parliament united to Newcastle. In the following year, however, this act was revoked. The manors of Gateshead and Whickham were let to Queen Elizabeth by Bishop Barnes, for a term of 99 years, and she, in the following year, consigned the lease to the corporation of Newcastle; after passing through the hands of several individuals, they are now in the possession of Cuthbert Ellison, Esq. Distance from Newcastle, 1 m. S.S.E.; from Durham, 14 m. N.E.; from London, 272 m. N.W.

GATESHEAD-FELL, a parish in the E. division of Chester ward, co.-palatine of Durham. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Durham. The church, which was consecrated on the 30th of August, 1825, is ded. to St John. Patron, the rector of Gateshead. This was, till of late years, part of the parish of Gateshead, under which all the returns are included, and they constitute still only one constablenwick, and the inhabitants contribute jointly towards the maintenance of the poor, whose concerns are intrusted to a select vestry. This parish is famous for the excellent grindstones dug from its quarries, which are exported to all quarters of the world. It has also extensive collieries. Distance from Newcastle, 3 m. S.

GATTON, a borough and parish in the E. half-hundred of Reigate, co. of Surrey. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester, rated at £9 2s. 8½d., returned at £25. Patron, the king. This was a borough by prescription, and its burgesses, who did not exceed 12 in number, possessed the privilege of sending two members to parliament until disfranchised by the reform act. Lower Gatton, the seat of the lord of the manor in this parish, is a beautiful mansion, surrounded by an extensive park, most tastefully laid out. Upper Gatton is also a very fine mansion, with an extensive park. The river Mole has its principal sources in this parish. Here is also a quarry of most valuable stone, highly prized for ovens, furnaces, &c. Distance from London, 18 m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 112; in 1831, 145. A. P., £2,331.

GERMANS (St), a borough, market-town and parish in the S. division of the hundred of East, co. of Cornwall. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter, endowed with £1200. Church ded. to St Germanus. Patrons, the dean and canons of Windsor. This place derives its name from St Germanus, bishop of Auxerre in France, who is said to have resided here on his visit to Cornwall in the early part of the 5th century. It is situated on the borders of a creek formed by the rivers Tidl and Lynher, in their junction with the Tamar, and consists of one principal street. The inhabitants support themselves for the most part by fishing. Its market has long been in desuetude; but it has still two fairs for cattle, May 28th and August 1st. It is governed by a portreeve who is also the bailiff, and can convert into a prison any house in the borough for those whom he finds himself warranted to arrest. This important officer is chosen annually at the court-leet of the lord of the manor. Until disfranchised by the reform act this place sent two members to parliament, the electors being the property of burghage tenements, in their utmost extent not above 60, but reduced it is said by burgh policy to a third part of that number. The parish is the largest in the county and contains, besides the divisions of the borough, and the ville of St Germans which gives the title of earl to the head of the Eliot family, the villages or townships of Bake, Cutchfrench, Coldrimneck, Cuddenbeak, Cuterew, Hendra, Molinere, Pole-Martin, Tiddiford, and Treskelly. The parish church is a part of an old conventual church, and the remains of a bishop's palace are still discernible in a farmhouse about a mile distant from the town. There is here an endowment in land for the support of a schoolmaster, and there is a parish school principally supported by Lord St Germans. Distance from London, 227 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 2030; in 1831, 2586. A. P., £15,283.

GERMANS-WEEK, a parish in the hundred of Lifton, co. of Devon. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter, certified to value £6. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Bristol. Distance from Oakhampton, 11 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 133; in 1831, 370. A. P., £901.

GERMOE, a parish in the hundred of Kerrier, co. of Cornwall. Living, a perpetual curacy to the vicarage of Breage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter, returned at £27 3s. Patron, the vicar of Breage. The famous Godolphin tin-mines are in this parish which derives its name from St Germoe or Germoch, said to have been a king of Ireland. There is here a place of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists. Distance from Helston, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 629; in 1831, 1175. A. P., £1,373.

GIDLEY, a parish in the hundred of Wonsford, co. of Devon. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter, rated at £14 19s. Church, ded. to the Holy Trinity. Patron, in 1829, Henry Rattray, Esq. Distance from Oakhampton, 8½ m. S.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 125; in 1831, 155. A. P., £557.

GIGGLESWICK, a township and parish in the W. division of the wapentake of Stainciffe and Eweross, W. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York, rated at £21 3s. 4d., returned at £75. The church, a spacious and handsome structure, is ded. to St Alkald. Patrons, in 1829, J. Coulthurst, and J. Hartley, Esqs., alternately. Here is a celebrated grammar school founded in 1553 by Edward VI., and endowed with property now yielding an annual income of £1,140. It is open to pupils from all nations, having no limitations but the walls of the house and the ability of the master. This seminary was taught for upwards of half a century by the father of the celebrated Archdeacon Paley, who himself also received here the rudiments of learning. There are in the parish a number of excellent quarries of stone and slate, and about a mile from the township, about the centre of Giggleswick scar, there is a remarkable well, which, although 30 miles distant from the sea, keeps ebbing and flowing sometimes three and four times in an hour, and sometimes not oftener in a whole day. The water is pure and the extremes of its rise and fall are about half a yard. The township is romantically situated at the base of a vast limestone rock that rises above the buildings to the height of 300 feet. A winding ascent conducts the traveller to the summit of this stupendous rock, whence the prospect is fine beyond description. Distance from Settle, 1 m. Pop., in 1801, of the township 556, of the entire parish returned under the townships of Giggleswick, Rathmill, Settle, and Stainforth 2101; in 1831, of the township 780; of the entire parish, 3017. A. P. of the township, £5,592; of the entire parish, £17,638.

GILBERDIKE, a township in the parish of Eastington, wapentake of Howdenshire, E. R. of Yorkshire, 5½ m. E.N.E. from Howden. Pop., in 1801, 337; in 1831, 632. A. P., £1,969.

GILCRUX, a parish in Allerdale ward, below Darwent, Cumberland. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Carlisle, rated at £5 14s. 2d., returned at £90. The church, formerly rectorial, is ded. to St Mary. Patron, the bishop of Carlisle. The village of Gilcrux, stands on the S. bank of the small river Ellen. It is built in a triangular form, and, with few exceptions, opposite to every house there rises a flowing spring of excellent water. Uniting their streams at the end of the village, these springs form a fine clear rivulet. In a field near the village there is also a salt spring. There is here a free school for 24 poor children. Coal, limestone, and free-stone, are abundant in this parish. Distance from Cockermouth, 5½ m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 249; in 1831, 382. A. P., £1,643.

GILL-STREET, or GELL-STREET, a ward in the borough of Carmarthen, co. of Carmarthen, South Wales.

GILLIMORE, a township in the parish of Kirby-Moorside, N. R. of Yorkshire, 7 m. N.E. from Helmsley. Pop., in 1801, 228; in 1831, 179. A. P., £887.

GILLING-EAST, a wapentake in the N. R. of Yorkshire, on the N. side of the co. It comprises 15 parishes, including the town of Catterick, and in 1831 contained a pop. of 7460.

GILLING-WEST, a wapentake in the N. R. of Yorkshire, in the north-west extremity of the co. It comprises 19 parishes, and in 1831 contained a pop. of 17,471. A large part of Gilling-West is in the district called Richmondshire.

GILLING, a parish and township in the wapentake of Gilling-West, N. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, rated at £23 11s. 5½d. Church ded. to St Agatha. Patron, in 1829, John Wharton, Esq. This township is said to have been in early times the scene of a treacherous and cruel murder, committed on the body of Oswy, king of Deira, by his host, Oswin of Bernicia. As expiatory of the crime, Queen Eanfleda built here a monastery some time previous to A.D. 659, which was destroyed by the Danes. Here are quarries of free-stone of a very superior quality. Here is an excellent free school, founded in 1678. Another, conducted on the national plan, educates about 80 children. Gilling castle, which occupies an eminence on the W. side of the village, and formerly belonged to the Mowbrays, is in good preservation. Distance from Richmond, 3 m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, of the township, 809; of the entire parish, returned under the townships of Cawton, Cowton-North, Cowton-South, Eppleby, Gilling, and Grimston, with the chapelry of Eryholme, 1703; in 1831, of the former, 1113; of the latter, 2075. A. P. for the township, £7,165; of the entire parish, £17,078.

GILLINGHAM, a parish in the liberty of Gillingham, Shaston division, co. of Dorset. Living, a vicarage, with the curacies of Metcombe, East Stour, and West Stour, in the archd. of Dorset and dio. of Bristol, rated at £40 17s. 6d. Church ded. to the Blessed Virgin Mary. Patron, the bishop of Salisbury. There is deposited in the vicarage-house, for the use of the vicars, a library, consisting of 600 volumes. This parish, which is the largest in the county, being upwards of 10 miles in circumference, lies in the north, bordering on the counties of Somerset and Wilts. It is watered by the river Stour, and includes the forest of Selwood, which was disforested and enclosed in the reign of Charles I., on condition that the lessee should maintain 400 deer for the use of the king. To the east of the church, on the Shaftsbury road, are still to be distinguished some traces of the ancient palace, which was the residence, when they came to hunt in the forest, of the Saxon and Norman kings. This place is also celebrated as the scene of a desperate engagement with the Danes in the year 1016. In the neighbourhood lies Blackmoor, or White Hart Forest, so called from a favourite white hart belonging to Henry I., which, being run down and killed by T. de la Hinde, a gentleman of the county, with others in his company, the king imposed a fine upon their lands, which is still paid into the exchequer under the name of 'white hart silver.' The Stour, upon which there are one or two silk mills, is crossed by two bridges within the parish. Some linen is also made, but the principal dependence of the inhabitants is upon their rich pastures and well-managed dairies. Fairs are held for the sale of cattle, horses, and sheep, on Trinity Monday and Sept. 12th. There is here a free school, founded in 1526, and endowed by John Grice and others, which was long in high repute. At this school, Clarendon, the chancellor of England, and the partial historian of 'the great rebellion,' as he terms it, received the rudiments of his education. Distance from Shaftsbury, 4 m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 2510; in 1831, 3330. A. P., £11,946.

GILLINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Chatham and Gillingham, lathe of Aylesford, co. of Kent. Living, a vicarage with that of Uphery and the curacy of Lydding, rated at £15 13s. 11d. The church, which formerly contained what was reputed a miraculous image of the Virgin, called, 'Our Lady of Gillingham,' in consequence of which it was the haunt of numerous pilgrims, is ded. to St Mary Magdalene. Patrons, the principal and fellows of Brazenose college, Oxford. The village, which is very ancient, is situated on a rising ground, commanding a fine view of the Thames and Medway. The streets are wide, and from the fine slope of the ground, always clean. Previous to the rapid rise of Chatham, this was a place of great importance, and its harbour in the Medway was a principal station of the royal navy. A fort for the protection of the town, which had suffered extremely from the incursions of the Danes in the early periods of its history, and of the royal dock-yards and navy, was erected here in the reign of Henry VIII., strengthened and successively enlarged by Elizabeth and Charles I., and now strongly fortified with outposts, and regularly connected with the lines of Chatham, within which, at the west end of the parish, stands on the brow of the hill, overlooking the royal dock-yard of Chatham, the populous village of Brompton, the residence of the numerous workmen, artificers, &c. who carry on the business of that great and magnificent national establishment. Gillingham was at one time the residence of the primate of all England, the foundation of the archiepiscopal palace being still visible on the south side of the churchyard. One small portion, supposed to have been the hall of this palace, is still preserved, and now used as a barn. The whole parish is within the jurisdiction of a court of requests, held in the city of Rochester. Distance from Chatham, 1½ m. E.N.E.; from London, 30 m. Pop., in 1801, 5135; in 1831, 6734. A. P., including that of Lidge, £11,765.

GILLINGHAM, a parish, formed by the union of the parishes of All Saints and St Mary's, in the hundred of Clavering, co. of Norfolk. Living consists of two discharged rectories, with those of Winston and Windale, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated, All Saints at £5, and St Mary's at £5 6s. 8d. The remaining church is ded. to St Mary. That of All Saints has been taken down, with the exception of the tower, which is a melancholy ruin overgrown with ivy. Distance from Beccles, in the county of Suffolk, 1½ m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 344; in 1831, 369. A. P., £2,986.

GILLS, a hamlet in the parish of Darent, co. of Kent.

GILLSLAND, a district or barony in the parish of Denton, Eskdale ward, Cumberland, most probably so called from the numerous gills or brooks by which its surface is diversified. It has a sulphuretted spa, much frequented by fashionables from both sides of the Tweed. Houses have been got up for the reception of these visitors after the plan of those of Harrowgate. The principal of these are the Shaws, Wardrew-house, the Orchard-house, &c. The former of these is situated on a steep bank of the Irthing, in a most romantic and pleasing neighbourhood; the latter, upon a small stream, about a mile distant, the banks of which have been ornamented with shrubbery, and cut into fine walks for the pleasure and the convenience of those who frequent them. The Roman wall passes to the south of this place, and about two miles distant there is on the Irthing one of the finest waterfalls in the country. Distance from Brampton, 8 m. N.E.

GILROE, an extra-parochial liberty in the hundred of West Gosport, co. of Leicester. Pop., in 1811, 4; in 1831, 11.

GIRTON, a parish in the N. division of the wapentake of Newark, co. of Nottingham. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York. Distance from Tuxford, 8 m. S.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, including Mering, which claims to be extra-parochial, 125; in 1831, 183. A. P., £1,473.

GISBURN, a parish and township in the W. division of the wapentake of Staincliffe and Eweross, W. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York, rated at £11 6s. 8d., returned at £120. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, the lord-chancellor. GISBURN is situated on the east bank of the Ribble, not far from the borders of Lancashire. It has no particular trade or manufacture. It is surrounded with rich meadows, in which are fed innumerable flocks and herds, the charge of which seems to be the sole employment of the inhabitants. The market, which used to be held here on the Mondays, has been discontinued; but there is a fair or cattle-market every alternate Monday throughout the year, and there are fairs annually on Easter-Monday and on the 18th and 19th of September. Courts leet for the manor are held in the months of May and November, at one of which the constable for the township is appointed annually. Near the confluence of the Stockbeck and the Ribble, lies GISBURN park, in which is the elegant mansion of Lord Ribblesdale. In the park are a herd of wild cattle of the ancient breed that was wont to run wild in the great forest of Lancashire. They are milk white, the noses, the ears, and the feet, generally excepted, which are black. They are never thoroughly tamed, though they breed freely with tame cattle. This is a crossing, however, which is not encouraged, as they are very indifferent milkers. There is in the township a school endowed for educating seven poor children. Distance from Skipton, $10\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, of the township, 485; of the entire parish, returned under the townships of GISBURN, GISBURN-Forest, Horton, Middop, Nappa, Newsholme, Paythorne, Rimington, and Swinden, 1959; in 1831, of the former, 607; of the latter, 2306. A. P. of the township, £4,260; of the entire parish, returned as above, £18,251.

GISBURN-Forest, a township in the parish of GISBURN, W. R. of Yorkshire, 8 m. S. from Settle. There is a chapel here in the patronage of the vicar of GISBURN. Pop., in 1801, 396; in 1831, 400. A. P., £2,257.

GISLEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Matford and Lothingland, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £13 6s. 8d. Church ded. to the Holy Trinity. Patron, the king. Distance from Lowestoft, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. by S. Pop., in 1801, 198; in 1831, 262. A. P., £2,120.

GISLINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Hartismere, co. of Suffolk. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, rated at £26 1s. 5d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, Nathaniel Collyer, Esq. There was here a preceptory belonging to the knights of St John of Jerusalem, granted, 7th Edward VI., to John Greene and Robert Hall. Distance from Eye, 5 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 473; in 1831, 660. A. P., £3,091.

GISSING, a parish in the hundred of Diss, co. of Norfolk. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £14 6s. 5d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, Sir W. R. Kempe, Bart. Distance from Diss, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 444; in 1831, 598. A. P., £3,219.

GITTISHAM, a parish in the hundred of East-Budleigh, co. of Devon. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter, rated at £21 8s. 11d. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. T. Putt. There is here a charity school, founded in 1686. Distance from Honiton, $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 459; in 1831, 370. A. P., £2,939.

GIVENDALE, or GWINDALE, a township in Ripon parish, W. R. of Yorkshire. Distance from Ripon, 2 m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 19; in 1831, 35. A. P., £1,182.

GIVENDALE, or GWINDALE (Great), a parish in the Wilton-Beacon division of the wapentake of Hartthill, E. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a discharged vicarage and a peculiar in the patronage of the dean of York, rated at £4 18s. 4d., endowed with £1100. Distance from Pocklington, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, 70; in 1831, 78. A. P., £975.

GIVENDALE, or GWINDALE (Little), a hamlet in the parish of Millington, E. R. of Yorkshire.

GLAISDALE, a parish in the E. division of the liberty of Langbaugh, N. R. of Yorkshire. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York, certified to value £9 11s. 8d., returned at £38 16s. 10d. The church was rebuilt in 1793. Patron, the archbishop of York. There are two bequests of £2 each per annum, left by Samuel Pudom and John Brodrick, for educating 8 poor boys. Distance from Whitby, 10 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 763; in 1831, 1004. A. P., £4,966.

GLANMORGAN,

A county of South Wales, bounded on the N.W.N. and E. by the counties of Carmarthen, Brocon, and Monmouth; on the S. and S.W. by the Bristol channel. Its extreme length from Worms-Head-Point in the district of Gower on the west, to Llandarn, which borders with Monmouth on the east, is 48 miles; and its extreme breadth from N. to S. 27. Its contents have been estimated at 822 square miles or 526,680 acres, of which 365,000 are in some degree cultivated. Of these, however, only 43,000 are considered as properly arable, the remainder being improved only into pasture land.

General Features.—The north and north-east parts of the county consist for the most part of craggy and almost inaccessible mountains, affording little herbage of any kind. Here black cattle could not find sustenance. Considerable flocks of sheep, however, are fed and thrive upon the verdant declivities, which, notwithstanding the bleak and barren aspect which these heights in general present, they in many places possess. In some places the sides of the mountains are clothed with woods, luxuriantly waving over narrow valleys and deep glens of the richest and most romantic description; but upon the whole this part of the county is by no means inviting in its appearance nor any way to be recommended for its vegetable products. The southern portion, on the contrary, is level, uncommonly fertile, and highly improved. Than the fine plain expanding from the foot of the mountains on the north to the Bristol channel on the south and south-west, known by the name of the Vale of Glamorgan, and extending the whole length of the county, perhaps there is nothing richer to be met with in the kingdom, certainly nothing in the principality that can at all be compared with it. Here the soil is deep and as rich as it is deep, and the salubrious temperature of the climate such that the families of myrtles, magnolias, and other delicate plants, not only live but thrive in the open air. Here agriculture is practised upon the most approved principles, and the abundant produce of every description, whether of corn or green crops, has justly procured for it the appellation of 'the Garden of Wales.' This valley, which is in many places from 8 to 18 miles in breadth, is divided from nearly one end to the other by the great post road from London to Milford. Passing along this road the traveller enjoys some of the most extensive, rich, and picturesque views that are to be met with in the whole island, and is often at a loss which to admire most, the luxuriance of the vale itself with its multitudinous and busy population, the graceful windings of its shore, or the blue hills of Somerset and Devon sublimely rising in the distance. If in any thing this vale be reckoned deficient, perhaps it is the want of wood. This defect is amply supplied in other parts of the county.

Rivers and Canals.—The rivers are the Rumney, the Taff, the Ognore, the Neath, the Tavy, the Avon, the Llanry, the Ewenny, and the Loughor. All of them have a southerly course, and several of them have their sources among the mountains of Brecon. The Rumney, issuing from Brecon, forms the boundary line of the county on the east, and falls into the estuary of the Severn near the town of Cardiff. The Loughor issues also from Brecon, and running westerly forms for a short distance the boundary line between this county and that of Carmarthen; it falls into the Bristol channel by the estuary of the Barry river. The Taff rises to the north of Merthyr-Tydvil, and after a winding course falls into the estuary of the Severn at the point of Penarth, a little to the south-west of Cardiff. This is an extremely rapid stream, and over it near Caerphilly, on the road from Brecknock to Cowbridge, is the Pont-y-Prydd or New Bridge, which has been much and justly admired. It consists of one stupendous arch of uncommon elegance, forming a perfect segment of a circle, the chord of which is 140 feet, and till the erection in 1830 of the bridge over the Dee at Chester, was the most spacious stone-arch in the kingdom. This great undertaking was planned and executed by a self-taught genius, a common mason and the pastor of a small congregation of Independents, who lived and died in his native parish, Eglwysilan, in 1789, at the advanced age of 70. The Ognore and the Ewenny unite their streams near the castle of Ognore, and a little to the south of it fall into the Bristol channel. The Avon falls into the same channel at Aberavon. The Neath and the Tavy have their sources also in Brecon, and both, at no great distance from one another, fall into the bay of Swansea, to the town of which the mouth of the latter forms the harbour. The coast has a fine semi-circular sweep nearly the whole length of the county, the western point of which is formed into a peninsula by an arm of the sea running up towards Carmarthen, forming an estuary at the mouth of the Barry river. Over a fine sandy beach the limestone rocks in many places swell into perpendicular cliffs of great boldness, exhibiting vast quantities of what geologists term organic remains, and worn in many places into deep and lofty caverns. For such a length of coast, however, the sinuosities are few, and these few of no great depth; but they have been carefully improved and assisted by a judiciously planned inland navigation, which has proved of immense benefit to the county. The Glamorganshire canal extends from Merthyr-Tydvil to Cardiff, a distance of twenty-five miles. The Abertawe navigation unites with this canal at New-Bridge, and that again, by the Abertawe railway, is connected with the Neath canal, thus uniting Cardiff, Merthyr-Tydvil, and all the intervening country with the noble bay of Swansea. Another canal, running parallel to the river Neath, connects the bay of Swansea with the distant and rugged hills of Brecon.

Minerals, &c.—By the above means the immense mineral wealth of the county, which consists principally of coal of various kinds, lime-stone, possessed of peculiar qualities, and iron-stone, are all brought to a ready market. Lying frequently at small depths from the surface, and frequently jutting out from the sides of the hills, these minerals are raised here with less expense than in most other places of the kingdom. The whole valuable mineral of the county, especially the southern part of it, from the promontory of Gower on the west, which is only one immense rock of that material, to Caerphilly on the east, rests on a bed of lime-stone. The most plentiful kind of this lime is not supposed the best for the purpose of building, but it being admirably adapted from its extreme whiteness for white-washing, and from its other qualities for manure, vast quantities are exported across the channel into Somerset, besides what is sent round the coast to other places in Wales. One kind of lime here possesses the property of hardening under water, which renders it highly valuable as a sub-marine cement. Beneath the limestone, especially the cliffs of Pinarthance-Llavernac, are found beds of red earth resembling tripoli, and in this earth are found beds of gypsum, the finest yet discovered in Britain. In the white limestone of Sully, lead-ore, calamine, manganese, and copper have also been discovered though in small quantities. Coal, which is of still more importance, seems to be equally universal in its diffusion, and with iron-stone, which is also abundant, forms the great staple of the county. Of the former much is exported, and a vast quantity is more profitably employed in the immense smelting establishments of Merthyr-Tydvil, Neath, Swansea, Aberdare, and Abernant. The works at the former of these places, which are among the most extensive in Europe, are all iron-works, of which the material is dug up in the neighbourhood; but in different places, particularly Neath and Swansea, there are large establishments for the smelting of copper, the ore of which is imported from Ireland, Cornwall, and North Wales; lead is also brought hither for smelting in large quantities. Tin-plate is also manufactured to a large extent in some places, particularly at Meriun-Gruffyd, the tin being imported from Cornwall. Flags and marble form also articles of exportation, and give employment in cutting and polishing to a number of the inhabitants. At Ewenny and some other places coarse pottery is made, nor is the woollen manufacture altogether neglected. Though this county be thus distinguished for minerals, there is only one mineral spring, viz. that of Swansea, which has an acid styptic taste like alum, though the predominant salt in it is the sulphate of iron. Near Newton-Nottage is a remarkable spring mentioned by Camden, which ebbs regularly as the tide flows, and as the tide ebbs returns to its usual level. The lake of Conrag is also considered as a great curiosity, lying in a sandy depression at a short distance from the sea, which in flood-tides rises apparently above it, yet it invariably retains its freshness pure and untainted. Antiquities—British, Roman, and Norman—are scattered over the county. Of these, the most celebrated is the castle of Caerphilly, now in ruins, said to have been the largest in the kingdom next to that of Windsor. The wall of the tower, which hangs 11½ feet out of the perpendicular, is still between 70 and 80 feet in height, and of a prodigious thickness.

Ecclesiastical and Civil Divisions.]—The county of Glamorgan is in the province of Canterbury, has two divisions, Llandaff and Cowbridge, three parts of it are in the dio. of Llandaff, the remainder in that of St David's. It has one city, Llandaff; one county-town, Cardiff; is divided into ten hundreds, viz. Caerphilly, Cowbridge, Dinas-Powis, Kibber, Langwelach, Miskin, Neath, Newcastle, Ogmore and Swansea, and into 118 parishes. It returns two members to parliament, who are polled at Bridgend, Cardiff, Swansea, Neath, Merthyr-Tydvil. Pop., in 1801, 71,525; in 1831, 126,200. A. P., £334,192.

GLANDESTREY, a small parish in the hundred of Radnor, co. of Radnor, South Wales. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of St David's, rated at £12 19s. 4d. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Distance from Kingston, 3 m. W. Pop., in 1801, 323; in 1831, 385. A. P., £2,403.

GLAN-EITHIAN, a township in the parish of Betws, co. of Montgomery, North Wales, 3 m. N.E. from Newton.

GLANFORD WITH BAYFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Holt, co. of Norfolk. Living, a perpetual curacy, annexed to the rectories of Blakeney and Cockthorpe, in the archd. and dio. of Norwich. Chapel ded. to St Martin. Patron, the rector of Blakeney. Distance from Clay, 1½ m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 88; in 1831, 102. A. P., £1,036.

GLANFORD-BRIGG, or BRIDGE, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Wrawby-with-Kettleby, co. of Lincoln. Living, a curacy to the vicarage of Wrawby-with-Kettleby, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, of the clear yearly value of £14. Chapel ded. to St Mary. Patron, Clare Hall, Cambridge. This town—formerly only a small fishing village—is situated on a branch of the Ancholme, which runs through it, and over which it has a stone-bridge, newly erected, the old one having been taken down. It is well-built, and has a very considerable trade in corn, timber, and coal, besides establishments of sell-mongers and tanneries. It has received a great improvement of late by the draining of the Ancholme-Level, the expense of which is defrayed by a land-tax, and a duty on the tonnage of the river. This is the seat of the petty-sessions, which are held once a fortnight. The market is on Thursday, and it has an annual fair on August 5th. There is here a free grammar school for 80 boys, founded in 1669. Distance from Lincoln, 21 m. N.E.; from London, 153 m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 1327; in 1831, 1780. A. P., £2,621.

GLANTLEES WITH GREENS, a township in the parish of Felton, Northumberland. Distance from Alnwick, 7½ m. S.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 34; in 1831, 56.

GLANTON, a township in the parish of Whittingham, Northumberland. The Presbyterians have a chapel in this township. The lofty eminence called Glanton-Pike, in this neighbourhood, was a beacon in the olden time. Distance from Alnwick, 9½ m. W. Pop., in 1801, 279; in 1831, 534.

GLAPTHORN, a parish in the hundred of Willybrook, co. of Northampton. Living, a discharged vicarage with that of Cotterstock, in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough. Church ded. to St Leonard. Distance from Oundle, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 315; in 1831, 353. A. P., £2,115.

GLAPWELL, a township in the parish of Bolsover, co. of Derby. Here, in old times, was a chapel to Darley abbey. Distance from Mansfield, 5 m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 109; in 1831, 99. A. P., £505.

GLASBURY, a parish partly in the hundred of Tolgarth, co. of Brecon, and partly in that of Paine's Castle, co. of Radnor, South Wales. Living, a vicarage in the dio. of Gloucester, rated at £10. Patron, the bishop of Gloucester. This parish lies along the banks of the Wye, and includes some of the most fertile land in the county. Distance from Hay, 4 m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, of that portion belonging to Brecon, 511; in 1831, 719; of that portion belonging to Radnor, in 1801, 323; in 1831, 848. A. P. of the former portion, £3,154; of the latter portion, £2,257.

GLASCOED, a hamlet in the parish of Usk, co. of Monmouth. The Baptists have here a place of worship. Distance from Usk, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 131; in 1831, 197.

GLASCOMBE, a parish in the hundred of Colwyn, co. of Radnor, South Wales. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of St David's, returned at £62 2s. 5d. Patron, the bishop of St David's. In this parish are the wells of Blaen-Eddu, celebrated for curing cutaneous diseases. Distance from Buallt, 8 m. E. Pop., in 1801, returned under the townships of Drewnes and Vainer-Glare, 515; in 1831, 514. A. P., £2,121.

GLASCOTE WITH BOLEHALL, a township in the parish of Tamworth, co. of Warwick. Distance from Tamworth, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 280; in 1831, £21. A. P., £2,965.

GLASENEY, in the parish of St Gluvias, E. division of the hundred of Kerrier, co. of Cornwall.

GLASSBROOK, a township in the parish of Warrington, co.-palatine of Lancaster, $5\frac{1}{4}$ m. E.N.E. from Warrington.

GLASSENbury, in the parish of Cranbrooke, co. of Kent. Here is a chalybeate spring. Distance from Cranbrooke, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.

GLASS-HOUSE-YARD, a liberty in Finsbury division of the hundred of Ossulstone, co. of Middlesex. Distance from St Paul's, $\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, 1221; in 1831, 1312.

GLASSONBY, a township in the parish of Addingham, Leath ward, co. of Cumberland. Distance from Penrith, 8 m. N.E.N. Pop., in 1801, 144; in 1831, 167.

GLASTON, a parish in the hundred of Wrاندike, co. of Rutland. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, rated at £12 16s. 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Church ded. to St Andrew. It is annexed to the mastership of Peter-House, Cambridge. Distance from Uppingham, 2 m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 189; in 1831, 229. A. P., £2,179.

GLASTON, a township in the parish of Aldingham, co.-palatine of Lancaster, situated on the Lune, having a dock capable of receiving at one time 25 large merchant vessels. This dock was opened in 1787, and here the larger vessels discharge their cargoes, which are forwarded by small craft to Lancaster. A canal, passing from this dock—which may be termed the modern port of Lancaster—unites it with the Preston and Lancaster canal. Distance from Dalton, 3 m. S.E.

GLASTON-TWELVE-HIDES, a hundred in the eastern division of the co. of Somerset. It lies in the heart of the co., between the Polden and Mendip hills, comprises 8 parishes, including the town of Glastonbury, and in 1831 contained a pop. of 6366.

GLASTONBURY, a market-town, locally situated in the hundred of Glaston-Twelve-Hides, co. of Somerset, but having separate jurisdiction. It comprises the parishes of St Benedict and St John the Baptist. The living of St Benedict is a donative annexed to the curacy of St John's, both being peculiars in the dio. of Bath and Wells, jointly endowed with £1800 private benefaction. The church wardens of St John's are a body corporate, possessing estates to the value of £500 per annum. The churches are ded. respectively to the saints whose names they bear. Patron, the bishop of Bath and Wells. The town is situated nearly in the centre of the county, on the declivity of a small eminence in the midst of a marshy district, nearly surrounded by the river Brue, and from the abundance of apples here produced, hence called by the Britons the Isle of Avalon. It consists of two streets, crossing each other nearly in the direction of the four cardinal points, and the houses are built for the most part with stones taken from the ruins of its once splendid and highly celebrated abbey. Part of the ancient market cross is still standing, and the ancient hospitium, for pilgrims visiting the shrine of St Dunstan, retaining its curiously carved front, and, upon the whole, much of its original character is now the GEORGE INN. The old manor house and tribunal of justice are curious relics, which the present proprietor of the abbey lands, by the erection of a beautiful modern building, harmonising in its style of architecture with the venerable remains by which it is surrounded, has rendered still more interesting. The town is well paved and lighted. Formerly the wool-manufacture was carried on here to some extent, but has been superseded by that of stockings and a coarse kind of gloves. As a parliamentary borough, the town was disfranchised on the execution of the last abbot in 1539, and even its charter as a corporation withdrawn. Its charter was renewed by Queen Anne, the government being vested in a mayor, a recorder, 7 superior and 16 inferior burgesses, assisted by two coroners, town-clerk, &c. &c. The mayor, who must be a barrister of three years' standing, is chosen annually from the superior burgesses, and with the late mayor acts within the borough as a justice of the peace. The market days used to be Tuesday and Saturday, but the former has been discontinued, and the latter confined to butcher meat. The fairs are held the Wednesday in Easter week, Sept. the 19th, called the Torr fair, October 10th, and the Monday week after St Andrew's day. This is unquestionably a place of great antiquity, and its history, though of a legendary character, not a little curious. Its celebrity, however, is entirely owing to its monastery, "which," according to Camden, "is very ancient, deriving its origin from Joseph of Arimathea, the same who buried Christ's body, and whom Philip the apostle of the Gauls sent into Britain to preach the Gospel. For this is attested both by the most ancient histories of this monastery, and an epistle of St Patrick the Irish apostle, who led a monastic life here for 30 years together. From hence this place was by our ancestors called the first ground of God,—the first ground of the saints in England,—the rise and fountain of all religion in England,—the burying place of the saints,—the mother of the saints,—and that it was built by the very disciples of our Lord. Nor is there any reason why we should call this in question, since I have before shown that the Christian religion, in the very infancy of the church, was preached in this island, and since Treulphus Lexoviensis has told us, that this Philip brought barbarous nations, bordering upon darkness and living upon the sea-coasts, to the light of knowledge and haven of faith. But to return to the monastery, and inform ourselves out of Malmesbury's little treatise upon that subject. When that small church founded by Joseph was wasted away with age, Dewi, bishop of St David's, built a new one in that place; and when time had worn out that too, twelve men coming from the north of Britain repaired it; but at length King Ina, who founded a school at Rome for the education of the English youth, and to maintain that, as also to distribute alms at Rome, taxed every single house in the kingdom one penny, pulled this down and built that stately church dedicated to Christ, St Peter, and St Paul." This Ina was king of Wessex. He ascended the throne in the year 689, and is said to have built this monastery about the year 708. The chapel, which he added to it, contained about 2640 pounds of silver plating. The altar, which Dewi of St David's had previously enriched with a sapphire of inestimable value, he adorned with gold to the amount of 260 pounds weight. "In those early times," Camden continues, "several very devout persons served God here, and especially Irish, who were maintained at the king's charge, and instructed the youth in religion and the liberal sciences. For they made choice of a solitary life that they might prosecute their studies with more retiredness, and inure themselves to a severe course of life, to qualify them for taking up the cross. But at length Dunstan, a man of excellent wit and judgment, after his reputation for sanctity and learning had given him access to the conversation of princes, instead of these, brought in monks of a newer order, namely, Benedictines, and was himself first made abbot over that large body settled there, and those, by the bounty of good and pious princes, got so much wealth, as even exceeded that of kings. After they had for about 600 years together, as it were, reigned in great abundance, for all their neighbours were at their beck, they were driven out by Henry VIII., and the monastery, which by degrees had grown into a little city, [environed with a large wall a mile about, and replenished with stately buildings] demolished and laid level with the ground;—how large and how stately it has been may be gathered from the ruins." Dunstan, appointed the first abbot in 942, by Edred, having the command of that monarch's treasury as well as of his conscience, enlarged the conventual buildings in a style of unrivalled magnificence, and completed an establishment which furnished, under him, superiors to all the religious houses in the kingdom, being 'the pride of England and the glory of Christendom.' From the pride and the power of Dunstan, it may well be supposed that he left little for his successors to do in the way of adding either to the wealth or the prerogatives of the abbacy. The abbot, indeed, was sole monarch of the Isle of Avalon, which neither king nor bishop could enter without his permission,—he was a lord of parliament, and his revenues were equal or superior to those of royalty itself. Edgar, however, added to these revenues additional estates, and to the monks still more extensive privileges. At the conquest, the privileges and the revenues of the establishment were considerably abridged, but they were soon regained, and notwithstanding of violent alterations between the monks and the bishop of Wells, respecting the nomination of the abbots, the abbots preserved them unimpaired till the year 1539, when the last abbot, Richard Whyting, the first in succession, possessing all the spirit, though not the good fortune of Dunstan the first, refusing to surrender the abbey to the commissioners of Henry VIII., or to acknowledge the ecclesiastical supremacy assumed by that monarch, was, with two of his monks, arraigned for treason, condemned, drawn upon a hurdle to the Torr, and there hanged and quartered. His head was placed over the gate of the abbey, and his four quarters exposed, one at Bath, one at Bridgewater, one at Ilchester, and one at Wells. The revenue was at this period valued at £3508 13s. 4d. Of this most magnificent monastery, which, with its dependencies, occupied upwards of 60 acres of ground, a very small portion now remains. The chapel of St Joseph and some fragments of the conventual church are in good preservation, and the Abbot's kitchen, an octagonal structure, having four fire-places, a finely vaulted roof with an octagonal pyramid, crowned with a double lantern of curious design rising from the centre, being probably of more recent erection than any other of the buildings, is nearly entire. In the church of this monastery many illustrious persons have been interred, and, among others, it is supposed the famous King Arthur, whose bones, according to Camden, were found in a coffin of hollowed oak at the depth of nine feet below the surface, having over it a leaden cross, with a Latin inscription in rude Gothic characters, translated, "Here lies the famous King Arthur, buried in the isle of Avalon." For religious relics and pious legends, Glastonbury and its neighbourhood stands pre-eminent. Here, St Dunstan, when the Devil in the shape of a most beautiful young woman had made repeated attempts to awaken the carnal man within him, seizing him by his beautiful nose with a pair of pincers, brought to a fine white heat, dragged him in triumph seven times round the walls of his oratory yelling with agony, and, promising never to attempt playing off the wanton again in propria persona, was dismissed by the saint with the punishment of his hot thoughts visibly and indelibly imprinted on the promontory of one of his finest faces. Here on a small eminence still known by the name of WEARY-ALL, where Joseph of Arimathea and his companions, weary with their journey, sat down to refresh themselves, the staff of the saint stuck into the ground, took root, and becoming a blooming hawthorn budded regularly on Christmas-day for fifteen hundred years, till it was finally cut down by the roundheads in the days of the pious martyr, Charles. Here, two, in the abbey church-yard was the miraculous walnut tree which never budded till St Barnabas-day, June 11th, and on that day invariably shot forth leaves, and afterwards blossomed in the usual way of other walnut-trees. A fine walnut-tree still grows on the spot, but it shows no partiality to St Barnabas. Cuttings from the holy thorn, which is only a variety of the common hawthorn, have also been preserved, and are to be met with in several places in the neighbourhood. Being an early variety they sometimes flower in December, but wanting the prayers of the monks, have lost count of the days of the month and are not to be depended on. A still more conspicuous relic is the tower of St Michael at a short distance from the town on the summit of the Torr Hill, on which the last abbot was executed. This is all that remains of a splendid church and monastery, erected on the site of a former one destroyed by an earthquake in 1276, and is to travellers an object of great admiration. Over the west entrance is a sculptured figure of St Michael holding a pair of scales, in which he seems to be most ridiculously and also somewhat ludicrously weighing the sacred volume against the devil and one of his imps, who are of course kicking the beam. Besides the established churches there are here places of worship for the Baptists, the Society of Friends, the Wesleyan Methodists, and the Independents. There is a national school here, and several other educational establishments. Henry Fielding, the Homer of romance, was born at Sharpham-park in this neighbourhood. Distance from London, 124 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, of Glastonbury-St-Benedict 332, of Glastonbury-St-John 1703, total 2035; in 1831, of the former 483, of the latter 2501, total 2984. A. P. of the former £13,369, of the latter £7,129, total £20,498.

GLATTON, a parish in the hundred of Norman-Cross, co. of Huntingdon. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £21 8s. 11½d. Church ded. to St Nicholas. Patron, in 1829, the Rev. J. Hopkinson. Distance from Stilton, 2½ m. S.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 323; in 1831, 348. A. P., £2,585.

GLEN (THE), a river in the co. of Lincoln. Its sources lie in the S. part of the co., north of Market-Deeping, and traversing the fens in a north-east direction it falls into the wash of Fossdike, east of Surfleet.

GLENDAL, a ward or division of the co. of Cumberland. It lies in the N.W. portion of the co. bordering on the west with Scotland, and on the north with Islandshire and Northamshire, co. of Durham. It comprises 10 parishes, including the town of Wooler, and in 1831, contained a pop. of 12,009.

GLENDON, a parish in the hundred of Rothwell, co. of Northampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, rated at £8, endowed with £1,200. Church ded. to St Helen. Patron, Trinity college, Cambridge. Distance from Kettering, 3 m. N.W. by N. Pop., in 1801, 48; in 1831, 44. A. P., £1,803.

GLENFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, co. of Leicester. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £13 9s. 9d. Church ded. to St Peter. Patrons, in 1829, L. Fosbrooke, Esq., and others. Distance from Leicester, 3½ m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, including the chapels of Braunstone and Kirkby-Muxloe, with the liberties of Braunstone-Frith, Kirkby-Frith, and Glenfield-Frith, 700; in 1831, 1166. A. P., £7,808.

GLENFIELD-FRITH, a liberty in the parish of Glenfield, co. of Leicester, 4 m. W.N.W. from Leicester. Pop., in 1821, 4. A. P., £405.

GLENTHAM, a parish in the E. division of the wapentake of Aslaoce, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. Living, a discharged vicarage exempt from visitation, in the dio. of Lincoln, rated at £8, returned at £112. Church ded. to St Peter. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Lincoln. Distance from Market-Raisen, 8 m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 258; in 1831, 399. A. P., £3,122.

GLENTWORTH, a parish in the W. division of Aslaoce wapentake, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. Living, a discharged vicarage in the curacy of Spittal-on-the-Street, in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £7 17s. 6d., returned at £56. Church ded. to St Michael. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Scarborough. Distance from Lincoln, 11½ m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 193; in 1831, 298. A. P., £3,980.

GLIDDEN, a tything in the parish of Hambleton, co. of Southampton, 8 m. S.W. from Petersfield.

GLIDEPATH-HILL, in the parish of the Holy Trinity, co. of Dorset, a street contiguous to Colliton-Row on the north which leads into the town of Dorchester. It was formerly part of the parish of Frome-Whitefield.

GLINTON, a parish in the liberty of Peterborough, formerly the hundred of Nassaburgh, co. of Northampton. Living, a rectory with that of Peakirk in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, not in charge, returned at £38. Church ded. to St Benedict. Patron, the rector of Peakirk. Distance from Market-Deeping, 3 m. S.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 314; in 1831, 414. A. P., £3,365.

GLODDEATH, a township in the parish of Eglwys-Rhos, co. of Carnarvon, North Wales. The inhabitants are mostly employed in the mines of the neighbouring parish of Llandudno. Distance from Conway, 3 m. N.E.

GLOOSTON, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, co. of Leicester. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £8. Church ded. to St John. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Cardigan. Distance from Market-Harborough, 5½ m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 129; in 1831, 177. A. P., £1,368.

GLORORUM, a township in the parish of Bamborough, co. of Northumberland, 4½ m. E. from Belford. Pop., in 1801, 50; in 1831, 47.

GLOSSOP, a parish and township in the hundred of High Peak, co. of Derby. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, rated at £12 18s. 9d. Church ded. to All Saints. Patron, in 1829, Earl Fitzwilliam. In this parish there are upwards of fifty cotton-mills, a number of extensive calico-printing establishments, and several clothing-mills, paper-mills, &c., &c. The township has an annual fair for cattle and other merchandise, May the 6th. There are places of worship in the parish belonging to different bodies of dissenters, and a school with a small endowment. Glossop is within the honour of Tutbury, and is one of the polling-places for the members for the northern division of the county. Distance of the township from Chapel-en-le-Frith, 10 m. N. Pop., in 1801, of the township not returned by itself; of entire parish, 17,005; in 1831, of the township 2012, of the entire parish 18,080. A. P. of the township £6,336, of the entire parish £20,208.

GLOSTERHILL, a township in the parish of Warkworth, Northumberland, situated on the south bank of the Coquet, nearly at its confluence with the sea. Distance from Alnwick, 8½ m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 21; in 1831, 28.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE,

An inland county, bounded on the N. and N.E. by the counties of Worcester and Warwick; on the E. by that of Oxford; on the S.E. by those of Berks and Wilts; on the S. and S.W. by the county of Somerset and the Bristol channel; and on the W. and N.W. by the counties of Monmouth and Hereford. Taking it at its extreme points, from Clifford-Chambers, near Stratford-upon-Avon, on the N.E., to Clifton, beyond the city of Bristol, on the S.W., it extends nearly 70 miles in length; and from Lechlade on the S.E., to Preston on the N.W., about 40 in breadth. Its general breadth, however, is not more than 26 miles. In circumference it is about 156 miles. By Sir Robert Atkyns, the historian of Gloucestershire, and by the author of its agricultural report, its area is estimated at 800,000 acres. In the parliamentary returns, drawn up under the inspection of the late Mr George Rose, its area is estimated at 718,080 acres, and by others it has been taken at 705,000 acres, of which, including all the woodlands, 10,000 are considered to be still lying waste.

With the exception of about 500 acres, the whole is supposed to be capable of cultivation.

General Features.—The hand of nature has divided this county into three longitudinal divisions, differing in climate, in soil, and in appearance, considerably from one another. The first is that called the Coteswold, comprehending the whole tract of hill country from Chipping-Camden on the north, to Bath on the south, which is again divided into the Coteswolds, upper and lower. This, which occupies the eastern part of the county, is by far the most extensive of the three divisions, and its aspect is in general bleak and bare. It has, however, many winding dales, here called Bottoms, accompanying the course of the streams that, falling from its heights, flow with a westerly course into the Severn, and which exhibit scenes of the most delightful seclusion and most exquisite beauty. The second division, called the Vale, comprehends the whole of the lowlands from Stratford-upon-Avon to Bristol. It includes the vales of Evesham, Gloucester, and Berkeley, and might perhaps be with more propriety denominated the vales of Severn and Avon; the former comprehending all the low country between Tewkesbury and Bristol; the latter those between the upper Coteswold and the Avon, from Tewkesbury to Stratford. The third division—which is much the smallest of the three, and is throughout varied with hill and dale—comprehends all the parishes on the west side of the Severn up to Gloucester, and afterwards on the west side of the Leden to the Wye, which separates the county from that of Monmouth. This division is chiefly occupied by the Forest of Dean, once reckoned the principal support of the English navy. [See article, DEAN FOREST.] Though part of this county is considerably elevated, it has nothing at all approaching to a mountain. Its more remarkable eminences are, in the neighbourhood of Cheltenham, Cleve-Cloud, Lickhampton Hill, and Church-Down; Robin Hood's Hill, near Gloucester; in the neighbourhood of Dursley, Longdown and Pikedown; Sponced, near Painswick; and near Clifton, the rock of St Vincent.

Rivers.—The principal rivers are the Thames, the Severn, the Wye, and the Avons, Upper and Lower. The Thames has its source in this county, a little to the south-west of Cirencester, and holding a southerly course into Wiltshire, enters Gloucester again at Kempford, where it receives the Churn, a much larger stream than itself, and becomes navigable. It continues the southern boundary of the county to Lechlade, where it enters Oxfordshire. The Severn, issuing from a small lake on the east side of the mountain of Plinlimmon in Wales, rushes eastward with the vehemence of a mountain torrent to Llanidloes; here, divested of its pristine fury, it turns north through the fine Vale of Montgomery to Welshpool, where, having received large accessions by the way, it becomes navigable. Turning to the east, it flows with many beautiful curves through Shropshire, south through Worcester-shire, and thence by Tewkesbury, where it receives the Upper Avon, into the great Vale of Gloucestershire. Passing through this vale, it is parted into two streams, and forms the isle of Alney, opposite to the town of Gloucester. Here it receives the its streams, is greatly increased in depth and in breadth, becomes a broad estuary, and, receiving the Wye from Monmouthshire, near Chepstow, and the Lower Avon from Somersetshire, a little below Bristol, is lost in the Bristol channel. Besides the two Avons, the Wye, and the Leden, the Severn, in passing through this county, receives the Chelt at Waulade hill; the Upper Frome, or Stroud river, famed for its peculiar qualities in the dyeing of cloth, especially a scarlet colour, at Framilode passage; the Ewelme, or Cam, at Frampton-Pill; and the middle Avon a little below Berkeley. It is remarkable for its tide, which rolls in with great noise and an impetuous elevation of three or four feet. Its usual rise at Gloucester is $7\frac{1}{2}$ feet, but it sometimes rises to 9 feet, and from its violence has often done great damage to the surrounding country. To guard against this, and the sudden inundations to which the low grounds, especially below Gloucester, are liable, drains, sea-walls, &c. have been constructed at great expense, and are placed under the superintendence of a society called the commissioners of sewers. Severn was formerly famous for salmon, but it has become very scarce of late years.—The Wye has its sources at no great distance from those of the Severn, on the south side of Plinlimmon, and proceeding south and south-east, divides the county of Radnor from that of Brecon. At the town of Hay it enters the county of Hereford, flowing to the north-east. Turning again towards the south, it flows majestically through that county, washing, in its progress, the town of Hereford. Cutting through a small corner of the county of Monmouth, it becomes the boundary between that county and the county of Gloucester, till it enters, as we have stated, the estuary of the Severn below Chepstow. This is one of the most noble and beautiful rivers in the island. It is naturally limpid, and in the early part of its course flows with great rapidity through a broken and rugged country. Through the fine plains of Hereford it rolls slowly and with many beautiful curves, till, on the borders of Monmouth and Gloucestershire, it resumes its pristine rapidity, and, through a wild and thinly-peopled district, between high and precipitous banks, rushes towards the sea, forming, as it were, at every leap scenes of picturesque beauty or overpowering grandeur. Besides those we have enumerated, as falling—the Churn excepted—into the Severn—there is the Coln, the Lech, the Windrush, and the Evenlode, small streams, which flow into the Thames as it passes through Oxfordshire.

Canals.—Of canals there is the Stroudwater, beginning at the town of Stroud, and entering the Severn at Framilode. Its width is 42 feet, its length nearly 8 miles, and its rise above the Severn 102 feet. It was constructed in 1775. The Thames and Severn canal begins at Walbridge, where the Stroud navigation ends, and joins the Thames at Lechlade. Its general breadth is 40 feet, its length 28 miles, and its fall to the Thames 130 feet. It is carried through Sapperton-hill by a tunnel two miles and three furlongs in length, and was opened in 1789. The Hereford and Gloucester canal begins at Hertford, and joins the Severn opposite Gloucester. Its length is 35 miles. The Berkeley canal, intended to open a safer and shorter passage for vessels of large burden between Gloucester and the wider part of the Severn, was begun in 1794 and finished in 1827, at an expense of half a million of money. It extends about 18 miles in length, is from 70 to 90 feet wide, and 18 feet deep. It runs on a dead level the whole way.

Soil, &c.—The soil of the county, like that of every other, is various. On the Cotswolds it is for the most part a calcareous loam on a stratum of rubble; in the hollows and bottoms, and sometimes on the sides of the hills, it is a strong tenacious clay. In the Vale it is an uncommonly rich loam, in some places black, in others red, but both of equal fertility. The sub-soil of this district—with a few exceptions, where are found the compact limestone rocks—is a stratum of blue clay. In the Forest it inclines to sand, not of a very fertile quality, and in some places is peaty. The minerals found in this county are not numerous, nor, with the exception of coal, of much importance. The principal mineral waters are the hot wells at Clifton, and the saline springs at Cheltenham. In no county is the management of the stall better understood or attended to than here. The cattle fed are generally of the Herefordshire breed, and they are sent to the London and Bristol markets. Calves are also fed in great numbers. The principal breed of sheep in the county is that of the Cotswold, large and coarse woolled. The real forest sheep, which are very small, finely formed, and having fine wool, have become nearly extinct. The most important part of Gloucester husbandry, after all, is considered to lie in the making of cheese and cyder. Cheese is made principally in the vales of Gloucester and Berkeley, or, as they are termed, the Upper and Lower vale. For the purposes of the dairy, the Gloucester breed of cattle—a variety of the middle horned species—still predominates in both vales. The produce of a cow is estimated at 3 cwt. of cheese for the year. The vale of Berkeley, or the Lower vale, is said to contain 50,000 acres, about two-thirds of which are occupied with from 7 to 8000 cows, whose annual produce in cheese runs from 1000 to 1200 tons. Speaking of this county, William of Malmesbury says—"Here you may behold the highways and public roads full of fruit-trees, not set, but growing naturally. The earth of its own accord bearing fruit, exceeding others both in taste and beauty, many of which continue fresh the whole year round, and serve the owner till he is supplied by a new increase. There is no province in England hath so many or so good vineyards as this county, either for fertility and sweetness of the grape, the wine whereof carrieth no unpleasantness, being not much inferior to the French in sweetness." Of the vineyards mentioned by this venerable chronicler, nothing now remains but the name, which is still borne by two places in the county,—one near Tewkesbury, and the other near Gloucester; but the apple-trees, though not, perhaps, growing spontaneously "in the highways and public roads," are yet numerous and of excellent quality, particularly in the Vale and the Forest districts. Cyder is made in great abundance and of excellent quality. That called stire cyder, peculiar to this county, is reckoned the best. The fruit from which this kind of cyder is made, is gathered from a tree which thrives best on the thin limestone soils on the margin of the forest of Dean; and it is remarked, that the cyder made from the apple grown here is distinguished by richness, sweetness, and fulness of flavour; while that made from the same species of apple grown upon the strong, deep, and rich soil of the vale of Gloucester, is principally distinguished for roughness and strength.

Manufactures.—The principal manufactures carried on in the co. are those of broad-cloths, chiefly superfine, and made from Spanish wool. Fine narrow goods of the fancy kind are also made in large quantities. These manufactures are confined to a district called the Bottoms, of which the town of Stroud forms the centre. Thin worsted stuffs and carpets are made at Cirencester. At Tewkesbury the stocking-frame knitting is the principal branch of business; at Dursley there is a manufacture of rugs and blankets. Extensive iron-works are carried on in the Forest of Dean, and there is a manufactory of tin-plate at Framilode. Other manufactures of the county are iron and brass ware, wire-cards for the clothiers, pins, nails, and writing paper. The principal markets are those of Gloucester, Cirencester, and Tewkesbury, which are always abundantly supplied with corn, meat, poultry, and every other necessary of life.

History.—By the ancient Britons this whole tract of country was designated by the name of Duffin, which is said to signify 'a vale.' It was inhabited by the Dobuni at the time of the descent of the Romans, who were the first among the Britons that submitted to these invaders, who left among them traces of numerous and important establishments. Gloucester and Cirencester were certainly two principal stations of that people, the county was intersected by their roads, and pavements belonging to them have been discovered at Woodchester, Great Witcombe, Cirencester, and other places. On the invasion of the Anglo-Saxons it was the seat of a most sanguinary warfare with the ancient inhabitants, who under three of their kings were defeated with immense slaughter, 578. They suffered another defeat, 585. In 628 a sanguinary battle was fought near Cirencester, between Penda king of Mercia, and Cynegills and Cwichelm, joint kings of Wessex, who had possession of the county at that time. Subsequently it fell into the power of the Mercians. At Cambridge, near Berkeley, the Danes suffered a signal defeat from Edward the Elder, about the end of the ninth century. Berkeley castle is infamous for the cruel murder of Edward II. in one of its apartments, 1327. At Cirencester, in the beginning of the reign of Henry IV., a conspiracy of the partizans of his deposed rival was suppressed and a number of the conspirators put to death; and at Tewkesbury the civil war between Henry VI and Edward IV. was terminated by a sanguinary battle which ended in favour of Edward, 1471. In the great contest between Charles I. and his parliament, hostilities commenced in this county by a personal attack upon Lord Chandos, who had been appointed to execute the royal commission of array at Cirencester, and the history of the war includes the sieges of Bristol, Gloucester, and Cirencester in the southern parts of the county. These cities held out for the parliament, but Camden-house, Beverstone-castle, and Sydney-house were garrisoned for the king. At Cirencester, in 1688, on the landing of William prince of Orange, afterwards William III., Lord Lovelace, with a small body of cavalry on their march to meet him, was attacked by Captain Lorange who commanded the militia in the city. Lovelace was made a prisoner, and Captain Lorange was killed, though his party proved victorious. This was the only blood shed in the field in South Britain, during that memorable revolution. Before the reformation Gloucester contained four of the great mitred abbeys, Gloucester, Tewkesbury, Winchcombe, and Cirencester, besides several smaller convents. With the exception of the chapelries of Icomb, and Cow-Honeyborn belonging to Worcester, and the city of Bristol with the hundred of Barton-Regis belonging to the see of Bristol, the dio. of Gloucester includes the whole county. It forms an archdeaconry, containing ten deaneries, and comprising three hundred and twenty-seven parishes, of which number thirty-nine are rectories, one hundred and one vicarages, the remainder are curacies or united to other parishes. It is divided into twenty-eight hundreds, is included in the Oxford circuit, and sends four members to parliament, viz. two for the eastern division, who are elected at Gloucester; and two for the western division, who are elected at Dursley. Pop., in 1801, 250,809; in 1831, 386,700. A. P., £1,463,259.

GLOUCESTER,

A city, inland port, and county of itself, locally situated in the hundred of Dudstone and King's Barton, co. of Gloucester. It comprises the parishes of St Mary de Crypt, St Owen, All Saints, St John the Baptist, St Michael, St Mary de Grace, St Aldgate, St Nicholas, St Mary de Lode, Holy Trinity, and St Catherine, all in the archd. and dio. of Gloucester. Living, of St Mary de Crypt, a discharged rectory with that of All Saints and the curacy of St Owen's, rated at £14 17s. 11d., returned at £130. Patron, the lord-chancellor.—Of St John the Baptist, a discharged rectory with that of St Aldgate's, rated at £14 1s. 1½d., returned, the former at £125, the latter at £91 19s. 4d. Patron of these, the lord-chancellor.—Of St Mary de Lode, a discharged vicarage with that of Holy Trinity and the vicarage of St Catherine, rated at £22 13s. 4d. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Gloucester.—Of St Michael, a discharged rectory with the curacy of St Mary de Grace, rated at £8 16s. 10d., returned at £130. Patron, the lord-chancellor.—Of St Nicholas, a perpetual curacy. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Gloucester. The churches of St Owen, All Saints, St Mary de Grace, Holy Trinity, and St Catherine, have been destroyed. In St Aldgate's there is only a chapel.

General Description.—Gloucester is situated on the east bank of the Severn, on a gentle elevation, opposite to the Isle of Alney, by which the river is here—much to the diminution both of its grandeur and utility—divided into two nearly equal streams. It consists principally of four spacious streets, which, at right angles, diverge from the centre towards the four cardinal points. Each of these streets was originally terminated by a gate, named, from its situation, Northgate, Southgate, &c.; and each of them, the Westgate-street excepted, has been carried far beyond the bounds of its original termination. A fine new bridge, consisting of one arch, 87 feet in span, has lately superseded the old narrow one, which consisted of 5 arches. From this, a causeway extends across the Isle of Alney to Over, where a similar bridge has also superseded an old one, which was, like its fellow on the south, at the same time inconvenient and inelegant. The streets are well-paved, lighted with gas, and the houses, which are in general handsome and substantially built, have for the most part fine spring water conveyed into them by pipes from reservoirs constructed at the foot of a hill about two miles from the city. The approaches to the city are ornamented with rows of houses in the modern style, at once substantial and elegant, especially that from Cheltenham, which has many houses in detached situations, indicating at once the taste, the rank, and the opulence of the possessors. The environs abound with pleasant walks, which, since the discovery of a mineral spring here in 1814, have been largely augmented by an extensive tract of land laid out in pleasure-ground for the benefit of those who come to drink the waters. An elegant pump-room, with other buildings for the accommodation of invalids, have been erected; and at no great distance, a number of handsome villas, with a church in the Grecian style, and extremely handsome. The whole forms an elegant appendage to the city, and is denominated Gloucester Spa. The water seems to possess nearly the same qualities as that of Cheltenham.

Public Buildings.—The principal public buildings are the shire-hall, on the south side of Westgate-street, erected in 1814. The county-gaol, occupying the site of the ancient castle on the bank of the Severn, is a spacious structure, erected at an expense of £40,000. It has 203 separate cells. The city-gaol, in Southgate-street, was built in 1782, and has been recently considerably enlarged and improved. In the same street stands the county-infirmary, built and supported by voluntary contributions. The theatre, a small but neat and convenient building, stands in Westgate-street. A market-house, built in 1786, for the sale of corn, butcher-meat, &c. stands in Eastgate-street; and there is another for fish and vegetables in Southgate-street. The bridges, with the causeway carried across the isle of Alney, by which they are connected, we have already noticed. But by far the most splendid ornament of Gloucester is its cathedral, one of the most magnificent structures of the kind in the kingdom, though its various parts were built successively under the direction of different abbots, during a period of four centuries. The crypt and aisles of the choir were erected in 1058 by Aldred, who became afterwards bishop of Worcester. The nave and a portion of the transepts were built by Abbot Serle, who died in 1104. In 1329, Abbot Thokey rebuilt the south aisle and the vaulting of the nave. The west end of the church was the work of Abbot Horton, who died in 1378. John Boyfield, who succeeded Horton, rebuilt the choir. Walter Frowcester, who succeeded Boyfield, finished the cloisters which had been commenced by Horton. The tower was begun by Abbot Schroke, who died in 1457, leaving the work to be finished by Robert Tulley, a monk, who, it is supposed, was the original projector of it, and who was afterwards made bishop of St David's. Abbot Farleigh added the Lady chapel, the latest part of the edifice, about the year 1490. The great elevation of the vault, the richness of its design, the elaborate tracery which covers the walls, and the vast expanse of the eastern window, render the choir an almost univalued specimen of the florid style of architecture. In the nave, the uniform and lofty range of columns is remarkable, and scarcely to be found in any other church in this country, except the conventual one of Tewkesbury. Of the southern aisle, the external elevation cannot be surpassed in lightness or richness of decoration. The interior of the lady-chapel is greatly admired for its elegance, and the extreme delicacy with which its union with the church has been effected. The communication between the upper side aisles of the choir is by a narrow stone gallery, 75 feet long, 3 broad, and 8 feet high within. This, from its power of transmitting sound—which is such, that the scratching of a pin can be distinctly heard from its opposite ends—is called the whispering gallery, and excites high admiration. The tower, which is singularly magnificent, rises from the centre of the church. The ornamental members and perforated pinnacles are of the most delicate tabernacle work, very full, but preserving an air of chasteness and simplicity. Its peculiar perfection, which immediately strikes the eye, is an exact symmetry of component parts and the judicious disposition of ornaments. The shaft of the tower is equally divided into two stories, correctly repeated in every particular, and the open parapet and pinnacles are examples of the Gothic in its most improved state. The whole length of this fine fabric is 420 feet, its extreme breadth 144, the height of the tower 198 feet, surmounted by pinnacles 24 feet in height, making in all 222 feet. In the tower is a chime of eight bells, the tenor one weighing 6000 pounds. Here are an immense number of sepulchral monuments. The most remarkable are those of Robert, duke of Normandy, and the unfortunate Edward II., the former carved in oak, the latter in alabaster.

Trade.—At what period the quay, which extends along the Severn below the bridge, was first erected, is uncertain. It existed in the time of Edward IV., and letters patent were granted for liting custom in the 22d of Elizabeth. The custom-house was erected the following year, with a new wharf for the loading and unloading of vessels, called the King's quay. The jurisdiction of the port has been generally understood to extend from the sources of the Severn to Chapel-rock, or St Terlas' point; but some late decisions of the lords of the treasury have brought it into doubt whether the jurisdiction be altogether so extensive. The trade of the port is very considerable, and has been materially augmented by the completion of the Berkeley canal, which affords a much speedier passage than by sailing up the Severn. [See article GLOUCESTERSHIRE.] The number of vessels belonging to the port, in 1829, according to the parliamentary returns, was 247, forming an aggregate of 13,026 tons burden. Trade and manufactures appear to have flourished here long prior to the conquest, and of course must have undergone many revolutions and been often changed. At present, iron and pin-making, the latter especially, seems to be its staple manufacture. This apparently trifling business was introduced here in 1625, by John Tilsby, and since that time has given affluence to many individuals, and honest employment and daily bread to a large proportion of the inhabitants. The value of pins sent to the city of London alone, has been estimated at £20,000 per week. Bell-founding has been carried on in one place—Oxbody Lane,—and by one family—that of the Rudhalls—for 150 years, during which they have cast between four and five thousand church-bells of various sizes. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday. For live stock, a market is held the first Monday of every month; and there are fairs on April 5th, July 5th, September 28th and 29th, and November 28th. That in September is principally for cheese.

Municipal Government.—The government of the city is vested in a mayor, 12 aldermen, a high steward, a recorder, a town-clerk, two sheriffs, and four sergeants-at-mace. The city sends two members to parliament. The electors are in number about 1200. The sheriffs are the returning officers. The 40s. freeholders in the city vote for the county. All sons of freemen are free of the city when they arrive at the age of twenty-one. The freedom is also ac-guled by servitude, may be purchased or received as a gift from the corporation. The mayor, the recorder, the aldermen, the bishop, the dean, and two of the prebends are justices of the peace within the city. The mayor is likewise clerk of the market, and steward of the king's household during royal visits to the city. What is called the Tolsay-court—from the place of meeting—is held by the sheriffs; the county-court meets once a month, and there is a law-day twice a year. The custom of Borough-English prevails here.

History, &c.—The origin of the city is said to be British, and by that people it was called Cner-Gloew, or 'the Bright City.' On the reception of Christianity by the Mercians, Gloucester was included in the dio. of Lichfield. It was annexed to the then newly established dio. of Worcester in 679, of which it continued to form a part till it received its present form from Henry VIII. We may add that the Benedictines—introduced by Canute at the instigation of Wolstan—notwithstanding of considerable opposition, kept possession of the monastery under an unbroken succession of 32 abbots, till it was surrendered by the prior Gabriel Morton, to the commissioners of Henry VIII. in the month of January, 1540. The last abbot, William Parker—the newly erected bishopric being given to John Wakeman, abbot of Tewkesbury—went into retirement, which he employed in writing a history of the abbey. The whole of the monastic buildings were destroyed, the church, the chapter-house and cloisters excepted, which were preserved in consequence of their being appropriated to the support of the new ecclesiastical establishment. There was here another very famous monastery of which we have the following account from Tanner: "Some of the legendary writers report that Merwald, viceroy of the western part of Merria, and his wife Donnora, did about the year 660, build a stately monastery here in honour of St Oswald, the king and martyr. It is more certain that A.D. 909, Ethelred, earl of Merria, and the famous Editheda, daughter of King Alfred, his countess, translating the relics of that canonized prince from Bardney to this place, founded here a religious house, from whence the monks being forced to fly in the Danish wars, it became a college of secular priests, which was accounted a free chapel royal, exempt from the jurisdiction of the archbishop of Canterbury or the bishop of Worcester, but King William Rufus gave it to the archbishop of York in lieu of their claims to Lindsey and some parts of Lincolnshire, which they quitted to the bishops of Lincoln. Henry Murdac, archbishop of York A.D. 1153, placed here regular canons of the order of St Austin who continued till the dissolution, at which time here were about seven of them, and their revenues were valued at £90 10s. 2d. ob. per annum, Dugd. Speed." Of the convents belonging to the Dominicans, the Franciscans, and the Carmelites, there is not a vestige remaining. Besides the churches belonging to the establishment, there are here places of worship for the Baptists, the Society of Friends, the Independents, the Methodists of all their various connections, the Roman Catholics, the Jews, and the Unitarians. The educational and charitable foundations are too numerous to be particularized. Of the former, perhaps the most important is the College-school, designed for the youths belonging to the choir. It was founded by Henry VIII. As a classical seminary it has long enjoyed a fair reputation. The school of St Mary's de Crypt was founded and endowed as a free grammar school in the reign of Henry VIII. The Blue-coat hospital for the maintenance and education of 20 boys was founded in 1666. There are also a national school supported by voluntary subscription, and a Lancasterian school intended to accommodate upwards of 200 boys. To these might be added a long list of Sabbath schools. Of charitable foundations the principal are St Bartholomew's hospital, which, out of an endowment of £300 per annum originally belonging to a priory founded in the reign of Henry II., allows salaries to a chaplain, a physician, and a surgeon, with weekly pensions to 54 decayed men and women; St Mary Magdalene's, founded by a prior of Lanthorey for ten men and nine women; St Margaret's hospital, originally founded for lepers. To these, perhaps, we should add the House of industry, liberally endowed in 1703, and under the management of an elective corporation.—Among distinguished natives of this city, may be mentioned Robert of Gloucester, author of a metrical chronicle of English history, who lived in the thirteenth century; Miles Smith, one of the translators of our present version of the Bible; T. Flor, the water poet; and George Whitefield, founder of a religious sect usually distinguished by the name of Calvinistic Methodists.—Distance from Bristol, 34 m. N.N.E.; from London, 107 W.N.W. GODALMING, a hundred in the western division of the co. of Surrey. It occupies the S.W. point of the co., on the borders of Sussex, and comprises 10 parishes, including Godalming—whence its name—and the borough of Haslemere, and in 1831 contained a resident pop. of 10,476 inhabitants.

GODALMING, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Godalming, co. of Surrey. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Surrey, and dio. of Winchester, rated at £23 17s. 11d. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Patron, the dean of Salisbury. The town—named after Gadhelm, its ancient Saxon possessor—is pleasantly seated in a valley, on the river Wey, which is here navigable, and over which it has a handsome bridge. It consists principally of one street, running from east to west, from which several smaller ones diverge. It is intersected by the great roads from London to Portsmouth, Petworth, and Chichester, from which it derives its principal importance. The houses are, with a few exceptions, small, but tolerably handsome, and it has an ample supply of water. The principal manufacture is patent hosiery; and a considerable trade is carried on in timber, bark, and hoops, of which it sends large quantities to London. Besides the Wey, it has the benefit of the Arun canal, which passes through this parish. It has a market on Wednesday for corn, and on Saturday for poultry and vegetables, and two annual fairs, viz. February 13th, and July 10th. By a charter, granted in the reign of Elizabeth, the government is vested in a warden, bailiff, and 8 assistants. The warden is elected annually out of the assistants. The assistants hold their places for life. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county magistrates. The Wey is here famous for fish, especially pike. Besides the established church, there are several dissenting places of worship. Upwards of 400 children are educated in the national Lancasterian school, which is supported by subscription. Distance from Guilford, 4 m. S.S.W.; from London, 34 m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 3403; in 1831, 4529. A. P., £13,889.

GODESTOW, the site of an ancient nunnery in the parish of Wolvercote, hundred of Wootton, co. of Oxford. "John, of St John, in the latter end of the reign of King Henry I., gave some ground here to a religious matron called Editha or Ediva, who, assisted by the contributions of well-disposed persons, built thereon an abbey for Benedictine nuns, which was consecrated, A.D. 1138, to the honour of the Virgin Mary and St John the Baptist, in the presence of King Stephen and his queen, the archbishop of Canterbury and six other bishops, with several of the nobility, who most of them gave toward the endowment of it. King Hen. II. was a great benefactor, on account, as it is thought, of fair Rosamond Clifford, his concubine, here interred. Its revenues, 26th Hen. VIII., amounted to £274 5s. 10d. per ann., Dugd.; £319 18s. 8d. Speed. Upon the dissolution, the site, with the greatest part of the adjoining estates, was granted by Hen. VIII. to his physician, George Owen." Tanner's Not. Mon.

GODLEY, a township in the parish of Mottram, co.-palatine of Chester. The principal business carried on in this township is hand-loom weaving and hat making. It derives its name from Godleigh, the surname of its early possessor. Distance from Stockport, 6 m.

GODMANCHESTER, a corporate town and parish in the hundred of Toseland, co. of Huntingdon. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £17 0s. 5d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Westminster. The town, a place of great antiquity, is seated on the east bank of the Ouse, over against Huntingdon, "as it were," says Camden, "the mother that brought it forth." It has been, time out of mind, famous for its agriculture, and has entertained the kings of England with "the rustic show of nine score ploughs at once." Going to take possession of his long desired Canaan, the throne of England, James VI. of Scotland was met here by a procession of 70 going ploughs, with which he was so much pleased, that he granted the inhabitants a charter of incorporation, under the government of two bailiffs and 12 assistants, with a recorder, high steward, and town clerk. The parish unites with the borough of Huntingdon in returning two members to parliament. The custom of Borough-english prevails here, and males are reckoned to have attained majority at 20, and females at 16 years of age. There is here a free grammar school. P., £7,475.

GODWICK. See TITTLESHELL.

GODWIN-SANDS, a range of sandbanks in the sea, extending about three leagues along the coast of Kent, in the neighbourhood of Deal. They were formed by an eruption of the sea in the year 1100, which swallowed the lands of Earl Godwin, extending to upwards of four thousand acres. They are extremely dangerous, especially to vessels riding in the downs, which are often driven upon them by violent winds, though by breaking the waves that would otherwise roll in upon the shore with immense impetuosity they contribute greatly to the safety of that famous roadstead. They are divided by a very narrow channel into two parts, and are in many places dry at low water. Their position, however, is often shifted by the force of the tides aided by violent storms. Floating lights are placed off them, and in hazy weather a bell is kept constantly ringing to warn the approaching mariner of his danger.

GOGMAGOG-HILLS, a range of hills a few miles to the east of Cambridge, noted for chalk pits and for several rare plants. On the summit of the highest of them are the remains of an ancient fortification or encampment, but by what people or at what time that encampment was formed, has not been determined. See CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

GOODNESTONE, a parish in the hundred of Faversham, lath of Scray, co. of Kent. Living, a discharged rectory annexed to the vicarage of Graveney in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury, rated at £5 2s. 6d. Church ded. to St Bartholomew. Patron, the vicar of Graveney. Distance from Faversham, 2 m. E. Pop., in 1801, 68; in 1831, 74. A. P., £558.

GOODRICH, a parish and township in the lower division of the hundred of Wormelow, co. of Hereford. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, rated at £8. The church, for the beautifying and repairing of which there is a bequest worth £23 per annum, is ded. to St Giles. Patron, the bishop of Hereford. A communication between this parish and the Forest of Dean has been lately established by a beautiful bridge across the Wye, at the estimated expense of £8000. Here are the remains of the ancient castle which formed at one time the principal residence of the noble family of the Talbots. From the old tower of this ruin is obtained a most enchanting view of the windings of the Wye, which nearly encircles the parish, and of a large portion of this most romantic corner of the county. At Flansford there was anciently a priory of Black canons founded and endowed in honour of St John the Baptist, 1317, by Richard Talbot, lord of Goodrich castle. Its revenues at the dissolution were valued at £15 8s. 9d. Distance from Ross, 4½ m. S. W. by S. Pop., in 1801, of the entire parish 512; in 1831, of the township 519, of the entire parish 792. A. P. of the entire parish, £4,174.

GOOLE, a township in the parish of Snaith, W. R. of Yorkshire, situated on the Ouse, near its confluence with the Ditch, or Dutch river. From the recent improvements that have extended the navigation of these streams it is rising rapidly into importance. It has a place of worship for the Independents. Distance from Howden, 5 m. S. Pop., in 1801, 294; in 1831, 1671. A. P., £4,280.

GOOSE-HILL, a hamlet in the parish of St Chad, co. of Salop.

GOOSEY AND CIR COURT, a tything in the parish of Stamford, co. of Berks. Distance from Wantage, 3½ m. N. W. Pop., in 1801, 139; in 1831, 203.

GOOSNARGH, a chapelry in the parish of Kirkham, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, certified to value £3 18s., returned at £109 18s. Patron, the vicar of Kirkham. Here is a free grammar school, and a splendid establishment for decayed persons of the higher orders of society, founded and liberally endowed in 1735, by William Bushel, M.D. The house appropriated for the inmates on this charity, has the exterior appearance of a gentleman's seat, with an excellent garden in front. Distance from Preston, 6½ m. N. N. E. Pop., in 1801, including the township of Newsham, 1559; in 1831, 1884. A. P., £10,508.

GOOSTREY WITH WARNSHAW, a chapelry in the parish of Sandbach, co.-palatine of Chester. Living, a curacy to the vicarage of Sandbach, in the archd. and dio. of Chester, certified to value £10 10s., returned at £82 11s. 11d. Patron, the vicar of Sandbach. The interest of £200 per annum was, in 1681, bequeathed for the purpose of educating the children of the poor by Elizabeth Stappellhurst. Distance from Middlewich, 5½ m. N. E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 231; in 1831, 292. A. P., £2,605.

GOPSALE, an extra-parochial liberty in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, co. of Leicester. This was at one time a cell to the abbey of Merevale in the co. of Warwick. It lies within the honour of Tutbury, duchy of Lancaster. Distance from Market-Bosworth, 4½ m. N. W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 4; in 1831, 7. A. P., £911.

GORE, a hundred in the co. of Middlesex. It lies in the N. W. side of the co., and comprises 7 parishes, including the town of Edgware, and, in 1831, contained a resident pop. of 11,315 souls.

GORE-END, a member of the town and port of Dover, in the parish of Buckington, locally situated in the hundred of Ringslow, isle of Thanet, lath of St Augustin, co. of Kent. Distance from Margate, 4½ m. W.

GOREFIELDS, an extra-parochial liberty in the hundred of Newport, co. of Buckingham. Here was at one time a Benedictine nunnery, ded. to St Mary Magdalene. The particulars of its history are unknown. Distance from Newport-Pagnol, 3 m. N. W.

GORING, a parish in the hundred of Langtree, co. of Oxford. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, returned at £72. Church ded. to St Thomas à Becket. Patron, in 1829, S. Gardener, Esq. There is a bequest, by Henry Alnutt, Esq., of an estate yielding upwards of £450 per annum, which is laid out in educating, partly clothing, and apprenticing children belonging to this parish, with those of the parishes of Cassington, Checkenden, Ipfstone, and South-Stoke. A medicinal well, on the bank of the Thames in this vicinity, was formerly in high repute for the cure of cutaneous disorders, but at present seems to be out of fashion.

GORING, a parish in the hundred of Poling, rape of Arundel, co. of Sussex. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Chichester, rated at £7 10s., returned at £130. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, W. W. Richardson, Esq. Distance from Worthing, 2½ m. W. Pop., in 1801, 419; in 1831, 627. A. P., £3,862.

GORLESTON, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged vicarage with the rectory of South-Town, in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £11. Church ded. to St Andrew. Patroness, in 1829, Mrs Astley. This parish lies along the river Yare, and is bounded on the north by Breden water, a bridge over which connects the village with Yarmouth, and on the east by the sea. An hospital for lepers was in existence here in 1372, and a priory of Augustin friars was founded here also in the reign of Edward I., by William Woderove and Margaret his wife, the site of which, after the dissolution, was granted, says Tanner, "to the great dealer in that kind of houses, John Eyer." This parish now unites with Yarmouth in returning two members to parliament. Pop., in 1801, 1728; in 1831, 2116.

GORRAN, a parish in the W. division of the hundred of Powder, and now eastern division of the co. of Cornwall. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter, rated at £20. Patron, the bishop of Exeter. Mr Anthony Wills, who, with his six sons, joined the prince of Orange, afterwards William III., on his landing in 1688, resided in the vicarage house here. One of the sons rose to the rank of a general in the reign of George I. Distance from Tregoney, 6 m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 1009; in 1831, 1205. A. P., £3,487.

GORTON, a chapelry in the parish of Manchester, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Living, a curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chichester, certified to value £8 15s. returned at £130. Chapel ded. to St James. Patron, the collegiate church of Manchester. Cotton spinning, weaving, and calico printing, are all carried on here upon a large scale. Distance from Manchester, 4 m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 1127; in 1831, 2623. A. P., £4,658.

GORWELL, a hamlet and farm in the parish of Litton-Cheyney, co. of Dorset. Distance from Litton, 2 m. S.E.

GORWYDD, WITH GARTH AND IS-TRAD, a township in the parish of Llan-Idewi-Breli, co. of Cardigan, N. W. Pop., in 1801, 269; in 1831, 720.

GOSBECK, a parish in the hundred of Bosmere and Claydon, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £8 5s. 5d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, in 1829, John Vernon, Esq. Distance from Needham, 4½ m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 284; in 1831, 319. A. P., £1,991.

GOSBERTON, a parish of Kirton wapentake, parts of Holland, co. of Lincoln. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £45, returned at £76. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Lincoln. Distance from Spalding, 6 m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 1189; in 1831, 1951. A. P., £14,878.

GOSCOTES (EAST AND WEST), hundreds in the co. of Leicester. They lie in the N. and N.E. parts of the co., comprising, the former 38 parishes, and, in 1831, containing a pop. of 18,770 souls; the latter, 24 parishes, including the town of Loughton, and a pop. of 47,312 souls.

GOSFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Hincroft, co. of Essex. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, rated at £8. Church ded. to St Catherine. Patron, in 1829, the duke of Buckingham. Distance from Halstead, 2½ m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 460; in 1831, 512. A. P., £3,500.

GOSFORD, a township in the parish of Hidlington, co. of Oxford. Here seems to have been a house of sisters of the order of St John of Jerusalem. Distance from Oxford, 4½ m. N. Pop., in 1801, 47; in 1831, 45. A. P., 353.

GOSFORTH, a parish in the E. division of Castle ward, co. of Northumberland. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham, annexed to the vicarage of St Nicholas. Church ded. to St Nicholas. There are extensive coal works in this parish at which most of the inhabitants are employed. Pop., in 1801, returned under the townships of Brunton East, Brunton West, Coxledge, Fawdon, Gosforth North, Gosforth South, and Kenton East and West, 1385; in 1831, 3546. A. P., £19,676.

GOSFORTH (NORTH AND SOUTH), two townships in the above parish. Distance from Newcastle, the former 4 m. N., the latter 2½ m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, of the former 133, of the latter 63; in 1831, of the former 145, of the latter 237.

GOSFORTH, a parish in Allerdale ward above Darwent, co. of Cumberland. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, rated at £17 14s. 7d., returned at £100. Church ded. to St Mary. Patroness, in 1829, Mrs W. Senhouse. There are two fairs held annually here on Bernwood common, April 25th, and October 18th. Distance from Egremont, 6½ m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, including the townships of Iligh and Low Bolton, Bernwood, &c., 652; in 1831, 935. A. P., £2,485.

GOSPORT, a seaport, market-town, and chapelry in the parish of Alverstoke, and liberties of Alverstoke and Gosport, Portsdown division of the county of Southampton. Living, a perpetual curacy and a peculiar in the dio. of Winchester. The church, which stands to the south of the town, is ded. to the Holy Trinity. Patron, the vicar of Alverstoke. This place, originally a small fishing village, is situated on a projecting point of land on the west side of the harbour of Portsmouth, over which there is a ferry by which it communicates with that town, to which indeed it may be considered as a suburb. It consists of one large street running westward from the harbour with a great number of smaller ones, some of them running parallel with the main-street and some of them crossing it. It is protected by a line of fortifications extending from Weovil to Alverstoke lake. Within these works are the king's brewery and cooperage with an extensive range of houses where wine, malt, hops, &c., are stored for the use of the royal navy. These houses communicate with the sea by a canal leading into a large basin where ships of almost any burden can take in their stores. Here are also barracks capable of accommodating a great number of men. Across the lake is an extensive magazine of powder for the use of the navy, and an iron foundry where are made anchors, bolts, nails, &c., for the use of the navy and the royal docks. At Hasler near Gosport is the royal hospital for the reception of sick and wounded seamen, calculated to accommodate 2000 patients, and having during the late war an annual expenditure of £5000. The approach to Gosport by water is reckoned uncommonly fine, the forts and the various buildings in the vicinity, as well as the town itself, being seen to the greatest advantage. Being entirely dependant on Portsmouth there is scarcely any trade or manufacture carried on but such as is connected with the navy. It has markets on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday, and fairs May 4th, and October 10th. There are places of worship for the Independents, the Wesleyan Methodists, and the Roman Catholics here. Distance from London, 78 m. S.W. Pop., in 1811, 7773; in 1821, 6184.

GOSWICK, a hamlet in the parish of Holy Island, Islandshire, co.-palatine of Durham, contiguous to a small bay of the North sea; it occupies the entrance to the fordable sands between the mainland and Holy Island.

GOTHAM, a parish in the S. division of Rushcliffe wapentake, co. of Nottingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, rated at £19 8s. 6½d. Church ded. to St. Lawrence. Patrons, in 1829, the duke of Portland, Earl Howe, &c., alternately. No reader can cast his eye upon this article without remembering what most probably has amused his childhood, the 'History of the wise men of Gotham.' The bush that was hedged in by these worthies to secure the cuckoo, is said to be still growing at a place in the parish called Court-Hill, and to be still known by the name of 'Cuckoo Bush.' Distance from Nottingham, 7½ m. S.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 475; in 1831, 748. A. P., £2,525.

GOTHERINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Bishop's Cleeve, co. of Gloucester. Distance from Winchcombe, 4 m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 195; in 1831, 229. A. P., £964.

GOUDHURST, a parish, partly in the hundred of Cranbrooke, but chiefly in that of Maiden, lathes of Scray, co. of Kent. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Rochester, rated at £26 19s. 2d. Church ded. to St. Mary. Patrons, the dean and chapter of Rochester. Goudhurst consists of large and well-built houses standing on five different public roads, which unite in the centre of the village. The hill, upon the declivity of which the church is situated, commands a most delightful view over the counties of Kent, Surrey, and Sussex. The clothing-trade was at one time carried on here to a very considerable extent, but has long since gone to decay. Wool-stapling is still carried on to a small extent. The market-day used to be Wednesday, but that too has gone into desuetude. There is one annual fair still observed, August 26th and 27th. A rent charge of £40, bequeathed by John Horsemendon, in 1670, and another of £6, in 1718, by Thomas Bathurst, are applied for educating the children of the poor. Distance from Maidstone, 13 m. S. Pop., in 1801, 1782; in 1831, 2758. A. P., £8,969.

GRAFTON, a hamlet in the parish of Beckford, co. of Gloucester. A singular circumstance took place near this hamlet in 1764. About sixteen acres of land slipped from the side of Breedon-hill, overwhelming a considerable extent of the grounds below. It was at the time supposed to have been occasioned by a long continuance of heavy rains.

GRAFTON, a township which comprehends the parish of All Saints, in the hundred of Webtree, and co. of Hereford. It lies close upon Hereford. Pop., in 1801, 36; in 1831, 56. A. P., £484.

GRAFTON WITH MARTON. See MARTON.

GRAFTON, a township in the parish of Longford, co. of Oxford. Distance from Lechlade, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 66; in 1831, 71. A. P., £807.

GRAFTON-FLYFORD, a parish in the upper division of the hundred of Pershore, co. of Worcester. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, rated at £20 0s. 10d. Church ded. to St John the Baptist. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Coventry. Distance from Worcester, 7 m. E. Pop., in 1801, 184; in 1831, 242. A. P., £2,343.

GRAFTON-MANOR, an extra-parochial manor in the upper division of the hundred of Halfshire, co. of Worcester. Here are the remains of an ancient mansion which belonged to the earls of Shrewsbury. It was burnt down in 1710, and has not been rebuilt. There is a Roman Catholic chapel on this manor, which has been recently repaired by the present earl. Distance from Bromsgrove, 2 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 72; in 1831, 45.

GRAFTON (EAST), formerly a chapelry to the parish of Great Bedwen, co. of Wilts. The chapel has been demolished.

GRAFTON-REGIS, a parish in the hundred of Cleley, co. of Northampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, rated at £9 9s. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Lace-making is the principal business carried on here. Here, in old times, was the seat of the Woodvilles, a noble and very powerful family, one of whom, Richard Woodville, was fined by Henry VI. in £1000, for marrying without his leave, Jacques, dowager of John, earl of Bedford. This same Richard was afterwards, by the same Henry, created Baron Rivers, Grafton, and De la Mote; and his daughter Elizabeth, relict of John Gray of Groby, obtained in marriage the hand of Edward IV., in consequence of which, he was advanced by that monarch to the dignity of constable of England. The connection, however, proved most calamitous to both parties. Distance from Towcester, $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 167; in 1831, 241. A. P., £2,247.

GRAFTON-UNDERWOOD, a parish in the hundred of Huxloe, co. of Northampton. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, rated at £12 16s. 3d. Church ded. to St James. Distance from Kettering, 4 m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 227; in 1831, 290. A. P., £1,469.

GRAFTON-TEMPLE AND ARDEN, a parish in the hundred of Barlichway, Stratford division, co. of Warwick. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, of the clear yearly value of £5 5s. Distance from Alcester, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 216; in 1831, 374. A. P., £3,600.

GRAINE (ISLE OF), or ST JAMES, a parish in the hundred of Hoo, lath of Aylesford, co. of Kent. Living, a vicarage and a peculiar in the dio. of Canterbury, rated at £9 11s. 8d. Church ded. to St Peter. Patroness, in 1829, Miss Smith. This island—about $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles long by $2\frac{1}{2}$ broad—is situated at the mouth of the Thames, opposite to the isle of Sheppey. It is formed by the Yantlet creek, running from the Medway into the Thames on the west, and by the junction of the Medway with the Thames on the east. Yantlet creek, in the early period of our history, was the usual and principal passage for ships trading to and from London to the southwards, but it had for a long period been choked up, and for many years had a road across it. Of late years it has been opened up so as to give about 8 feet of water at high tide, allowing barges to pass, by which a distance of 14 miles is saved, and the danger of going round the Nore avoided. This island lies very flat and low, the greatest part of it being pasture and marshes, which, with the badness of the water, makes it a very unhealthy place. There are pretty extensive salt-works on the south-east side of the island. Distance from Sheerness, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 191; in 1831, 240. A. P., £2,390.

GRAINSBY, a parish in the wapentake of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £9 18s. 4d. Church ded. to St Nicholas. Patron, in 1829, T. Sands, Esq. Distance from Great Grimsby, 7 m. S. Pop., in 1801, 85; in 1831, 116. A. P., £1,221.

GRAINTHORPE, a parish in Marsh division of the hundred of Louth-Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, certified to value £19 14s., returned at £60. Church ded. to St Clement. Patron, Magdalen College, Cambridge. Distance from Louth, $8\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, including the hamlets of Ludney and Wragholme, 408; in 1831, 517. A. P., £5,212.

GRAISLEY, a tything in the parish of Salhamstead-Abbots, co. of Berks. Pop., in 1801, 87; in 1831, 66. A. P., £726.

GRAMPOUND, a borough and market-town, partly in the parish of Probus, but chiefly in that of St Creed, W. division of the hundred of Powder, co. of Cornwall. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter. The chapel—which is situated near the centre of the town, and falling to ruins—is ded. to St Nun. Patron, the rector of St Creed. The town is situated on the river Fal, which is here of a goodly breadth, and is crossed by a stone-bridge. The great road from London through Plymouth to the Land's-end, passes through it. It has no particular manufacture, if we except a small one of gloves. The privilege of a market was granted by John, earl of Cornwall, brother to Edward III. Edward III., after the death of his brother, confirmed the charter, and erected the town into a borough. It did not, however, send members to parliament till the reign of Edward VI., after which, it sent regularly two members till 1824, when it was disfranchised for corrupt practices. It is governed by a mayor, 8 aldermen, a recorder, and town-clerk. The manor is held by the corporation at a fee farm rent of £12 11s. 4d. per annum. The market-day is Saturday; and fairs are held on January 18th, June 11th, and on the Tuesdays next after Lady-day and Michaelmas. Distance from Launceston, 40 m. S. W. Pop., in 1801, 525; in 1831, 715. A. P., £854.

GRANBY, a parish in the N. division of Bingham wapentake, co. of Nottingham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, rated at £6 3s. 6½d., returned at £120. Church ded. to All Saints. Patron, in 1829, the duke of Rutland. Gypsum is found here in abundance, and is generally made use of in this and the neighbouring parishes for flooring. The family of Manners, dukes of Rutland, take the title of marquess from this parish. Distance from Bingham, 4 m. S.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, including Sutton, 329; in 1831, 312. A. P., £3,354.

GRANGE-MILL, a hamlet in the parish of Youlgreave, co. of Derby.

GRANSDEN, a parish in the hundred of Toseland, co. of Huntingdon. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £5 7s. 3½d. Church ded. to St Bartholomew. Patron, Clare-hall, Cambridge. This parish opens a rich field for the geologist, presenting, besides rocks of the primitive and secondary formations, fossils of almost every description. There is here a place of worship for the Baptists, and also an endowed school. Distance from St Neot's, 7½ m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 412; in 1831, 527. A. P., £2,149.

GRANSDEN (LITTLE), a parish in the hundred of Longstow, co. of Cambridge. Living, a rectory exempt from visitation in the dio. of Ely, rated at £18 15s. 2½d. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Patron, the bishop of Ely. A small school is supported here by subscription. Distance from Caxton, 3 m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 232; in 1831, 251. A. P., £1,361.

GRANSMOOR, a township in the parish of Burton-Agnes, E. R. of Yorkshire, 7½ m. from Great Driffield. Pop., in 1801, 49; in 1831, 93. A. P., £2,175.

GRANSTON, a parish in the hundred of Dewisland, co. of Pembroke, South Wales. Living, a discharged vicarage attached to the vicarage of Merthyr, in the dio. of St David's and province of Canterbury, returned at £29 18s. 7½d. Pop., in 1801, 156; in 1831, 195. A. P., £612.

GRANTCHESTER, a parish in Wetherby hundred, co. of Cambridge. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely, rated at £7 14s. 4½d. The church, a portion of the interior of which is light and elegant in a high degree, is ded. to St Mary and St Paul. Patron, Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. "Grantchester is said to be the Camboritum of Antonine, and to have been changed into this name by the Saxons. In Bede's time, it was a little but desolate city, but now a small village. Out of this ruined city the adjoining university of Cambridge is believed to have had its original." Blomfield's Col. Can. p. 224. Distance from Cambridge, 2½ m. S.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 294; in 1831, 488. A. P., £1,717.

GRANTHAM, a borough, market-town, and parish, in the soke of Grantham, parts of Kesteven, co. of Lincoln. Living, the vicarages of North and South Grantham united, both being in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated, the former at £19 4s. 7d., the latter at £17 15s. 7½d. The church—a beautiful stone structure, with a lofty tower, surmounted by an elegant spire, rising to the height of 273 feet—is ded. to St Wulfrin. Patrons, the prebendaries of North and South Grantham, in Salisbury cathedral, alternately. The town is situated on the W. side of the river Witham, on the great road from London to York and Edinburgh. It consists of four principal streets, spacious, well-paved, and lighted. The approaches to the town are particularly admired for the very handsome and substantial seats and villas by which they are adorned. There is a particular manufacture carried on here of any importance. The trade of the town consists principally in malt, corn, coal, &c., of which large quantities are sent into the adjoining counties by means of a canal, commencing within a quarter of a mile of the town: it communicates with Nottingham on the Trent. The market is on Saturday; it is well supplied with corn, and there is every alternate week a large mart for live stock. Fairs are held the first Monday in Lent, Holy Thursday, July 10th, October 26th, and December 17th. Under a charter, granted in 1463, by Edward IV., the town is governed by an alderman, a recorder,

12 common burgesses, a coroner, an escheator, 12 second-men, who are the common-council, and 6 constables. The alderman and burgesses act as justices of the peace for the town and soke, which extends, with the exception of two townships, Harrowby and Spittlegate, over 12 parishes, including that of Grantham. Grantham is one of the polling-places for the members for the parts of Kesteven and Holland. The freedom of the borough is inherited by birth, may be acquired by servitude, by gift of the corporation, or by purchase. Grantham has sent two members to parliament regularly since the time of Edward IV. The electors are about 475 in number, resident or not resident, who are not receiving alms. The alderman is the returning officer. There is here a handsome edifice called the Guildhall, which, besides court-rooms, contains a splendid assembly-room; and there is a gaol, a house of correction, a tread-mill, with all the coercive et cetera for the improvement of morals. Here was built a house for Franciscan or Grey friars, A.D. 1290. The remnants of what was once a preceptory belonging to the Knights Templars, is now the Angel inn. In the vestry-room of the church is a valuable library, presented to the parish by Dr Newcomb. Here are places of worship for the Independents, the Wesleyan Methodists, and the Methodists of Lady Huntingdon's connection. There is also a free grammar school, founded and endowed in 1528, by Richard Fox, bishop of Winchester who was a native of this town. The annual income of this school, at which Sir Isaac Newton received the rudiments of his education, is now upwards of £700, the surplus of which after paying the salaries of the master, is laid out in establishing exhibitions to Oxford and Cambridge. There are also a charity school for girls, and a Lancasterian one for both sexes. Distance from London, 111 m. N.W. Pop. in 1801, of the town, 3303; of the remainder of the parish, returned under the townships of Harrowby, Spittlegate, and Manthorp, with Little Gonerby, 985; total, 4288: in 1831 of the town, 4590; of the remainder of the parish, 2837: total, 7427. GRAVESEND, a market-town and parish having separate jurisdiction, locally situated in the lower half hundred of Toltingtrough, lath of Aylesford, co. of Kent. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Rochester, rated at £15. Church ded. to St George. Patron, the lord-chancellor. The town is situated on the south bank of the Thames opposite Tilbury fort, its principal street forming part of the great road from London to Canterbury, Ramsgate, Deal, and Dover, in consequence of which it is a vast thoroughfare. It has, however, a number of streets leading down to the river, which, though narrow, are well-paved and brilliantly lighted with gas. At the termination of High-street a spacious quay has been erected for the convenience of landing goods and passengers, which in consequence of the steam boats which leave London every morning and return in the evening, are very numerous. Every passenger at landing or embarking, pays here one penny of pier-dues. The easy distance from London, the salubrity of the air, the bathing machines recently erected, the rich gardens, and the fine views of the Thames and Medway afforded by the walks in the neighbourhood, render this a fruitful source of revenue, the visitors through the summer season averaging considerably above 100,000. The town-hall, below which is the poultry-market, is a handsome building ornamented in front with six columns, and there is a small theatre with a brick front, wooden sides, and a projecting wooden portico surmounted by a bust of Shakspeare. A handsome chapel has of late been built on the north side of the London road. At the eastern extremity of the town are two batteries of 16 guns each, erected for the defence of the town. Contiguous to the town quay stands the custom-house, by the officers of which all outward bound vessels must be examined. Here an officer belonging to the East India Company is constantly stationed, whose business it is to examine all recruits going out for the company's service, whether they have entered of their own accord or have been trepanned into the service. It is also his business to examine and to record all natives of India arriving in this country by the company's ships. Here, too, outward bound vessels—it being still within the port of London—for the most part lay in their supplies of fresh provisions, liquors, ammunition, and especially vegetables, the ground in the neighbourhood being mostly under garden cultivation with the view of providing this supply. A number of vessels are employed in the cod and turbot fisheries. Fine shrimps are also caught here in great abundance. If the burning of lime and brick be excepted, there is almost no business carried on here but what is connected with the building, the rigging, and outfitting of ships. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday. The fairs are May the 4th, and October 21th. Gravesend is one of the polling-places for the members for the west division of the county, with the adjoining parish of Milton. It was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth. The charter was somewhat enlarged by Charles I. The head magistrate, called a portreeve, was by this charter turned into a mayor, by whom, with twelve jurats, twenty-four common council-men, and a high-steward, it is now governed. The mayor and jurats are bound to attend all foreign ambassadors who arrive at this port, and to conduct them to London. The Independents and the Wesleyan Methodists have here places of worship, and there is a free school, and various bequests for the relief of the poor. Distance from London, 22½ m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 2463; in 1831, 6097. A. P., £7,925.

GREATHAM, a parish and township in the north-east division of Stockton ward, co.-palatine of Durham. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Durham, rated at £7 1s. 8d. Patrons, the governors of Greatham hospital. This hospital, called 'the hospital of God in Greatham,' was founded and endowed with the manor of Grantham in 1272, for a master, 5 priests, 2 clerks, and 40 poor brethren, by Robert de Stichill, bishop of Durham. That martial bishop, Anthony Beck, enlarged the original endowment, and added a chaplain and a clerk to the establishment. From Edward IV. it received the privilege of a weekly market and two annual fairs. James I., in 1610, reduced the establishment to a master and 13 brethren, whom he incorporated under a common seal, with privilege to purchase lands, &c. At present there are maintained within the hospital, a master, a chaplain, and six brethren. Six out-pensioners and a bailiff are on the foundation, of which the bishop of Durham is patron. The vicar of Greatham reads prayers in the hospital twice a day, for which he receives £12 per annum. The hospital was rebuilt, and the grounds laid out in a style of great taste and beauty, during the mastership of the late earl of Bridgewater. Parkhurst's hospital is endowed with about £100 per annum. Patron, the master of Greatham hospital, who must be a bachelor of laws or a master of arts. Though named after Parkhurst, the original founder of this charity is not known. Distance from Stockton-upon-Tees, 7 m. N.E. GREENWICH.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Blackheath, lath of Sutton-at-Hone, co. of Kent. The principal living is a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Rochester, rated at £21. The church is a substantial and handsome structure, ded. to St Alphege. Patron, the king. Another church, more recently erected stands on the north side of the hospital, of which the living is a curacy, not in charge, subordinate to the vicarage. The chapelry of the hospital is also a curacy, not in charge. The patrons of this are the governors of the hospital.

General Description.—The town of Greenwich is pleasantly situated on the south bank of the Thames, opposite the Isle of Dogs. Towards the river, the streets are narrow, and the buildings irregularly disposed and mean in the appearance. On the higher grounds, toward Blackheath, many splendid mansions have been erected; and a spacious street, leading from the church towards the hospital, forming the thoroughfare to Woolwich, has been recently opened, while many additional improvements are in progress. The streets, which are on partially paved, are lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are supplied with water from the Kent water-works at Deptford, which stands little to the west of the town. A small theatre has been erected here, which is occupied occasionally during the winter-season, and an institution for promoting literary and scientific pursuits has been recently established. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday; and there are two annual fairs, commencing on the Mondays at Easter and Whitsuntide. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold here a petty session once a week, and of whom one or two are in daily attendance. Under the new reform act, Greenwich, with Deptford and Woolwich, returns two members to parliament. The total number of electors is about 6000.

History.—Greenwich is conspicuous in history as having been, during the reign of Ethelred, the station of a Danish fleet for the long period of three years, and the scene of the barbarous murder, by these robbers, of Alphege, bishop of Canterbury, in 1012. Edward I. had here his royal residence, and Henry IV. in 1408, dated his will from his manor of Greenwich. Henry V. granted it for life to Thomas Beaufort, duke of Exeter, on whose death, in 1417, it passed to Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, and uncle to the king, who obtained, in 1433, the royal license to fortify and embattle his manor-house, and to enclose the park, within which he erected a tower on the spot where the royal observatory now stands. Shortly after this, we find it in the possession of Edward IV., who, after enlarging and beautifying the place, gave it with the manor to Elizabeth his queen. Henry VII. made it his favourite residence, and close to the palace founded a convent for a prior and 12 brethren of the order of St Francis, which, after the dissolution, was refounded by Queen Mary, and finally suppressed by Elizabeth. It was the birth-place of Henry VIII., the scene of two of his many marriages, and of much of the festivity by which his court was distinguished. It was the birth-place also of Queen Mary. "But the greatest ornament by far, that Greenwich has," says Camden, "is our Elizabeth, who, being born here by a happy providence, did so enlighten Britain, nay, and even the whole world, with the rays of her royal virtues, that no praise can equal her merit." Charles I., previously to the breaking out of the war with his subjects, often resided here; and the tower in the park was considered of so much importance, that in 1642 it was by special orders secured for the parliament. By an ordinance of the house, the palace and park were, in 1654, settled on the protector and his heirs. With the crown, in 1660, they reverted to Charles II., who ordered the decaying palace to be taken down, and commenced the building of a new one upon a most splendid scale. The erecting, however, of one wing exhausted the means of that specious tyrant and pensioned slave, and it remained a monument of his ambition and his poverty till 1695, when, at the suggestion of the queen, Mary Stuart, the daughter of James VII., the executive having resolved that a public asylum should be provided for old and disabled seamen, it was recommended by Sir Christopher Wren as a suitable station for such an institution. A grant of the unfinished palace and the adjoining lands was accordingly made to commissioners appointed for that purpose the same year. The foundation stone of the new building was laid on the 3d of June, the year following, 1696, and it has been, by a gradual progress, enlarged into its present state of magnificence.

The Hospital.—The architecture is of the Roman character, rather plain in its general details. The whole building, which is mostly of Portland stone, consists of four distinct quadrangular masses of building, distinguished by the names of the respective sovereigns in whose reigns they are founded or built. The grand front, which opens on a terrace skirting the southern bank of the Thames, is 865 feet in length terminated at each extremity by an alcove. In the centre is a landing place by a double flight of steps from the river where the view of this sumptuous pile is strikingly magnificent, extending through a lengthened perspective of elegant building, enriched by the stately domes of the hall and chapel, from each of which is continued a noble colonnade of the Doric order 347 feet in length, and terminating with the palace of Henrietta Maria, consort of Charles II., now appropriated as the naval asylum, above which is seen in the distance the royal observatory rising on an eminence in the park. The ground-plan of the whole edifice forms nearly a square, of which King Charles's building forms the north-west angle, Queen Anne's the north-east, King William's the south-west, and Queen Mary's the south-east; the interval between the two former buildings forms a square 270 feet wide, in the centre of which is a statue of George II., sculptured by Rysbrack out of a block of white marble which weighed 11 tons, and was taken from the French by Admiral Rook. This statue, as an inscription upon it bears, was presented to the hospital by Sir John Jennings, who was governor from 1720 to 1744. The space between the two latter buildings, which includes the hall and chapel with their elegant domes and the two colonnades, forms a lesser square. The buildings immediately fronting the Thames have a general correspondence in style and arrangement. Of each the north and south fronts exhibit the appearance of a double pavilion, conjoined above by the continuation of an Attic order with a balustrade, which surmounts the whole but is separated below by an open portal. Of each pavilion the centre displays an elegant pediment supported by four Corinthian columns, and the sides a double pilaster of the same order. King Charles's building contains the apartments of the governor and lieutenant-governor, the council-room and anti-chamber with 14 wards, wherein 300 pensioners can be accommodated. The council-room is adorned with a number of portraits, the anti-chamber with two large sea pieces and a series of six small pieces, representing the loss of the Luxemburg galley in 1727. Queen Anne's building, erected between 1698 and 1728, contains apartments for inferior officers, with 24 wards for 437 pensioners. King William's building on the south-west of the great square comprises the great hall, vestibule, and dome, designed and erected by Sir Christopher Wren between the years 1693 and 1703. To the inner side of each range is attached a colonnade, 347 feet in length, supported by

Doric columns and pilasters 20 feet in height. The great hall or saloon is 106 feet in length, 56 in width, and 50 feet high. The ceiling and sides are covered with portraits and emblematical figures executed by Sir James Thornhill, for which he was paid by the square yard, for the ceiling £3, for the sides £1, amounting in whole to the sum of £6,685. The west front of King William's building was finished about 1725, by Sir John Vanburgh. The building contains 11 wards wherein are 551 beds. The foundation of the eastern colonnade, which is similar to that on the west side, was laid in 1699, but the chapel and the other parts of Queen Mary's building which adjoin to it were not finished till 1752. It corresponds with King William's and is furnished with 1092 beds in thirteen wards.—The chapel, which forms part of Queen Mary's building, is one of the most elegant specimens of Grecian architecture in the kingdom or perhaps in Europe. It was erected from designs by the late James Stuart, Esq., perhaps more generally known by the name of Athenian Stuart. From the vestibule, in which are placed statues of Faith, Hope, Meekness, and Charity, a flight of fourteen steps leads, through folding doors of mahogany richly carved with an architrave, frieze, and cornice of statuary marble, into the body of the chapel, which is 111 feet in length and 52 in width, having a lofty arched ceiling divided into compartments and elegantly ornamented. It is lighted by two ranges of windows, between which are galleries for the governor, lieutenant-governor, and principal officers. In the lower parts are seats for 1000 pensioners, exclusively of the nurses, inferior officers, and attendants. This chapel is perhaps the most splendid and tasteful in its decorations of any place of worship in the kingdom. The altar-piece is a painting by West, of the shipwreck of St Paul on the island of Melita.—The infirmary without the walls of the hospital was erected in 1763, from a design by Athenian Stuart. It forms an oblong quadrangle 198 feet long by 175 feet broad, consists of two stories, and is divided into two principal parts appropriated respectively to those who require surgical, and those who require medical assistance. It contains 64 rooms, each room being fitted up to accommodate four patients. It also includes a chapel, hall, kitchen, and apartments for the physician, surgeon, and apothecary, with hot and cold baths, &c. Here are also accommodations for 117 helpless pensioners with their nurses.—To the south of the hospital is the Naval asylum or school, for the clothing, maintaining, and educating the children of seamen. The establishment comprises an upper and a lower school. The former consists of 400 boys, sons of commissioned, and wardroom, and wardroom-warrant officers; 100 of them presented by the board of admiralty collectively, the remainder nominated in rotation by the lords and the first secretary of the admiralty, and by the commissioners, governor, and lieutenant-governor of the hospital, individually. The scholars of this class are admitted between the ages of 11 and 12 years, they are instructed in writing, mathematics, navigation, and drawing. Each boy on admission is presented with a bible and prayer book, and during his continuance at school is supplied with all necessary books and instruments, which he is allowed to take along with him on leaving school when he is bound to the sea-service for seven years. The lower school consists of 400 boys and 200 girls, children of inferior warrant and non-commissioned officers and seamen, who are admitted from 9 to 12 years of age, on petition to the governor of the hospital, according to their father's claim for service, which claims are examined monthly and decided upon by a committee appointed for the purpose. They are instructed in reading, writing, and arithmetic, till they are 14 years of age, when they are appointed to the sea-service. The girls till they arrive at the same age are taught reading, writing, and needle-work, and on leaving school are placed out to trades or as household servants. The chaplain is officially head-master of all the schools, and especially charged with the religious instruction of the children, and the general superintendence of the other branches of their education. The schools are supported from the funds of the hospital, to which are added all the money given by strangers to the guides who show the different departments of the institution.—The commissioners for the management of this great national trust, appointed by King William III.—to whom, for the purposes of the institution, he gave an annual grant of £2,000—amounted to nearly two hundred, including the principal officers of state, the archbishops, the judges, the lord-mayor and aldermen of the city of London, &c. &c., and they have been variously ordered and regulated by succeeding monarchs. By an act passed the 10th Geo. IV., “to provide for the better management of Greenwich hospital,” it is placed under the control of the lord-high-admiral, or the commissioners to whom that office is usually intrusted. The establishment at present consists of a governor, a lieutenant-governor, five captains, eight lieutenants, two chaplains, physician, surgeon, and three assistant-surgeons, a dispenser and two assistants, secretary, cashier, steward, clerk of the cheque, clerk of the works, &c. &c. The objects of this noble charity are British seamen, disabled by age, or maimed either in the king's service or in the merchant service, if the wounds were received in defending or taking any ship. Foreigners who have served two years in the British navy are equally entitled with the natives. It was opened in 1705 with 52 pensioners; in three years they were increased to 300; at present they are nearly 3000, who, in addition to their lodging, clothing, and maintenance, receive a weekly allowance of pocket-money. Exclusive of pensioners, there are 3 matrons, and 162 nurses, widows of seamen, each of whom receives £8 per annum, with every necessary of life. Taking into account the necessary attendants, the number of residents within the walls cannot be less than 3500. The annual expense of each pensioner, according to a late report of the commissioners of naval inquiry, was estimated at £27 10s. 9d., of the nurses, £29 15s. each; the annual expense being between £68,000 and £70,000. The means of this immense expenditure have arisen from the annual grant of £2,000 per annum, by King William,—a subscription of £8,000, raised by the original commissioners,—a grant of £19,000, the amount of various fines imposed for breaches of the revenue laws,—a grant by Queen Anne of the forfeited estates of Kid the pirate, in 1705,—the moiety of an estate left by Robert Osbaldeston, Esq., in 1707, amounting to £20,000, together with his unexpired grant of the North and South Foreland lighthouses, which have been renewed to the hospital,—an estate left by Mr William Clapham of Eltham,—the estate of the earl of Darwentwater, in the counties of Durham and Cumberland, containing valuable mines of lead and other ores, forfeited in the rebellion of 1715, and worth £30,000 per annum,—a benefaction, by a person unknown, of £1,000 9s. 8d. in malt tickets,—a legacy by John de la Fontaine, Esq., of £3,381 15s.,—a bequest of £2,000 by Mr Evelyn,—the profits of the market of Greenwich, gifted in 1700 by Henry, earl of Romney,—a contribution of sixpence per month from every seaman in the merchant service,—a per centage on freight, &c. &c., forming an aggregate of £130,000 per annum.

Royal Observatory, &c.—In the park—which is vested in the crown, and was, by James I., surrounded with a wall—are many fine elm and chestnut trees, some of them of a very large size. There are also within it a great number of barrows, out of which have been dug human bones, spear-heads, &c.; but it is chiefly remarkable for the royal observatory, amply furnished with mathematical, chronometrical, and optical instruments, for making astronomical observations under the direction of an astronomer-royal. Flamsteed, the first astronomer-royal, died in 1719; and the place has been successively filled by Drs Halley, Bradley, Bliss, and Maskelyne. It is at present filled by Mr Pond, whose observations are said to be the most accurate that have been made in any of the European observatories. The observations made here are published annually under the authority of the Royal Society.—Besides the established churches, there are here places of worship for the Baptists, the Independents, the Wesleyan Methodists, and the Roman Catholics.—For the purposes of education, the endowments are numerous and liberal. The Grey-coat school educates 120 boys. It was founded and endowed, in 1643, with lands and tenements, now worth about £700 per annum. It is under the management of the vicar, church-wardens, and overseers of the parish.—The Green-coat school maintains, clothes, and educates 20 poor boys. It was founded and endowed in 1772.—The Blue-coat charity school maintains, clothes, and educates 20 girls. It was established in 1770.—A charitable establishment, called Queen Elizabeth's college, was founded in 1576.—Another establishment of the same kind, called Norfolk college, was founded in 1613, by Henry, earl of Northampton, and endowed with estates now yielding about £1,500 per annum, for supporting a warden and 20 pensioners. The managers are the master and wardens of the mercers' company. The jubilee almshouses are eight in number, built by subscription in 1809, to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the accession of George III. To these have been added, in 1814, four more, by the Greenwich volunteer corps of infantry, to commemorate the accession of the house of Hanover to the throne of Britain. Distance from London, 6 m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 14,339; in 1831, 24,553. A. P., £46,738.

GRIMSBY (GREAT), a borough, market-town, and parish, having separate jurisdiction but locally situated in the wapentake of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. The living includes two vicarages, rated, one at £7, and one at £7 18s. 4d., in the parliamentary returns together at £104. The church, which is spacious and handsome, is ded. to St James. Patron, in 1829, Robert Heneage, Esq.

The town is situated on the little river Freshney, near the mouth of the Humber, supposed to be the place where the Danes made their first landing when they invaded Britain about the end of the eighth century. It is one of the most ancient boroughs in the kingdom and was once rich and populous, possessing a large portion of foreign and inland trade. In the reign of King John it was a mayoralty, and it furnished for the siege of Calais, in the reign of Edward III, 11 ships and 170 marines. The harbour, however, became gradually choked up and a dangerous sand bank having formed across its mouth, it was deserted, the trade being transferred to Hull. By the patriotic and spirited exertions of the landed gentlemen in the neighbourhood, the harbour has of late years been greatly improved, wet and dry docks have been constructed at a vast expense, and a canal cut into the Humber; in consequence of which trade has been greatly revived, and the town enlarged by the addition of several new and well-built streets. Grimsby is a port subordinate to that of Hull, and has a deputy, collector, comptroller, and coast-surveyor. It is governed by a mayor, recorder, 11 aldermen, a high-steward, 12 common council-men, two coroners, two bailiffs, two chamberlains, a town-clerk, and three sergeants-at-mace. The mayor with two of the aldermen—who are annually elected justices of the peace—hold a court every Tuesday; the bailiffs every Friday. It sent two members to parliament from the days of Edward I. till the passing of the reform act, which reduced its representation to one. The several parishes of Great Grimsby, Great and Little Coates, Bradley, Luceby, Waltham, Searcho, Clee, Weelsby, and Cleethorpes, are included within the electing boundaries. The market-day is Wednesday, and it has two annual fairs—June 17th for sheep, and September 15th for horses. The exclusive privilege of fishing and fowling on the manors of Grimsby and Clee belongs to the corporation, which also claims all wrecks thrown upon this coast, and collects groundage from all ships driven on shore by stress of weather. Here were at one time a priory of Augustine canons and a monastery of Grey friars. A convent of Benedictine nuns continued till the general dissolution of religious houses, when its revenues—estimated at £12 3s. 7d.—were bestowed first on the dean and chapter of Westminster, and latterly on the master and fellows of Trinity college, Cambridge. In the neighbourhood of this town are a number of those extraordinary fountains called blow-wells, the water of which, though it rises always equal with the surface, never runs over. Besides the established church, there are here places of worship for the Baptists, the Independents, and the Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists. Here is a free grammar school, founded in 1557 by letters patent from Edward VI., and endowed with the revenues of the chantry of St James's church, then, or a little before that, suppressed. The lands of the corporation stand charged to this school with £4 5s. 6d. per annum; and it has a further endowment of £7 per annum, the bequest of Catherine Mason. Archbishop Whitgift was a native of this town. Distance from London, 166 m. N. Pop., in 1801, 1524; in 1831, 4225. A. P., £5,825.

Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, rated at £12 5s. 7d. The church—which is very ancient—is ded. to St Andrew. Patron, the lord-chancellor. This parish is situated on both sides of the Swale, and extends west to the borders of Westmoreland. It has considerable mines of iron, lead, and copper. Here is an endowment for the education of the young. Distance from Richmond, 9½ m. Pop., in 1801, of the township, 518; of the entire parish, returned under the townships of Grinton, Melbecks, Reeth, with the chapelry of Muker, 3139; in 1831, of the former, 696; of the latter 4854. A. P. of the township, £1,649; of the entire parish, £19,001.

GRIST, a hamlet in the parish of Iwer, co. of Buckingham.

GRISTHORPE. See FILEY.

GRISTON, a parish in the hundred of Wayland, co. of Norfolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Norwich, rated at £7 8s. 9d. The church, originally ded. to St Margaret, was, on being partly rebuilt in 1474, ded. to St Peter. Patron, the bishop of Ely. Distance from Watton, 2 m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 180; in 1831, 208. A. P., 242.

GRITTENHAM, a tything in the parish of Brinkworth, co. of Wilts. Distance from Wootton-Basset, 2½ m. W. Pop., in 1811, 132; in 1831, 148.

GRITTLETON, a parish in the hundred of North Damerham, co. of Wilts. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £13 10s. Church ded. to St Mary. Patrons, in 1829, Mrs Pollock and others. The Baptists have here a place of worship. Distance from Chippenham, 7 m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 340; in 1831, 438. A. P., £3,444.

GRONDRE, a township in the parish of Kil-y-maen-llywd, co. of Pembroke, South Wales. Pop., in 1801, 37; in 1831, 23. A. P., £80.

GROOBY, a hamlet, formerly a market-town, in the parish of Ratby, co. of Leicester, 4 m. N.W. by W. from Leicester. Pop., in 1801, 299; in 1831, 335.

GROOMBRIDGE, a chapelry in the parish of Speldhurst, lathes of Sutton-at-Hone, co. of Kent. Living, a curacy to the rectory of Speldhurst, in the archd. and dio. of Rochester, not in charge. Patron, the rector of Speldhurst. Distance from Tunbridge-Wells, 4 m. W.S.W.

GROSMONT, a market-town and parish in the upper division of the hundred of Skenfrith, co. of Monmouth. Living, a discharged rectory with that of Llangun, in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff, rated at £6 5s. 2½d. Church ded. to St Nicholas. Patron, the lord-chancellor. This, though now but a small village, was at one time a town of considerable extent. Here are the picturesque ruins of an ancient castle, belonging to the duke of Beaufort, whence he takes the title of viscount. The village, which forms part of the duchy of Lancaster, is still governed by a mayor and burgesses, and is included in the jurisdiction of a court baron, held occasionally for the three castles of Llandello, Skenfrith, and Grosmont. The market-day is Tuesday; and there are fairs held, principally for cattle, on August 10th and Oct. 9th. A free school was founded here in 1803. Distance from Monmouth, 12 m. N. Pop., in 1801, 519; in 1831, 690. A. P., £4,421.

GROSMONT or GRANDIMONT, a hamlet in the parish of Egmont, east division of the liberty of Langbaugh, N. R. of the co. of York. Here, in the reign of King John, Joanna, the daughter of William Fossard, wife to Robert de Turneham, gave a parcel of land to the abbot and convent of Grandimont in France, who settled it upon a convent of monks of their own order. When these alien priories became objects of jealousy to the English government, the abbot obtained leave to sell his right in this cell to a John Hewit or Serjeant, in consequence of which it seems to have become 'Prioratus Indigena,' and to have subsisted till the dissolution, when there were not above four monks in it, whose revenues were rated at £14 2s. 8d. The site was granted, 35th Henry VIII., to one Edward Wright, and there are still some remains of the building now converted into a farm-house.

GROTON, a parish in the hundred of Babergh, co. of Suffolk. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, rated at £8 1s. 8d. Church ded. to St Bartholomew. Patrons, in 1829, J. W. Willet and others. Distance from Buxford, 1 m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 516; in 1831, 577. A. P., £1,719.

GROVE, a hamlet in the parish of Wantage, co. of Berks. Distance from Wantage, 1½ m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, 397; in 1831, 520. A. P., £3,719.

GROVE, a parish in the hundred of Cottesloe, co. of Buckingham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £4 13s. 4d. Patron, the earl of Chesterfield. Distance from Leighton-Buzzard, 2½ m. S. Pop., in 1801, 25; in 1831, 21. A. P., £791.

GROVE, a parish in South Clay division of the wapentake of Bassetlaw, co. of Nottingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Nottingham and dio. of York, rated at £11 14s. 2d. Church ded. to St Helen. Patron, in 1829, A. H. Eyre, Esq. Distance from East Retford, 2½ m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 117; in 1831, 121. A. P., £1,074.

GROVE-ASH, a tithing in the parish of Sandford, co. of Oxford.

GROVEBURY, a manor in the parish of Leighton-Buzzard, co. of Bedford, given by Henry II. to the nuns of Fontevrault in Normandy, in lieu of a yearly pension granted them out of the exchequer by Henry I., whence it was settled with a convent of foreign monks. In consequence of the wars with France, it suffered the fate of the other alien priories, and after various grants of it by different monarchs it came at last to the dean and canons of Windsor. Vide Tanner, &c.

GROVENING, a hamlet in the parish of Alveston, co. of Gloucester.

GRUMBALD'S-ASH, a hundred in the co. of Gloucester. It lies in the south-east corner of the county, comprises 20 parishes, and in 1831 contained a resident pop. of 9736.

GRUNDISBURGH, a parish in the hundred of Carleford, co. of Suffolk. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £17 11s. 3d. Church ded. to St Mary. The Baptists have here a place of worship, and there is a Sabbath school with a small endowment. Distance from Woodbridge, 3 m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 641; in 1831, 835. A. P., £2,844.

GRUNTY-FEN-HOUSE, an extra-parochial liberty in the south division of the hundred of Witchford, isle of Ely, co. of Cambridgeshire.

GRWYNEY, or GROYNE-VAWR, a hamlet in the parish of Tolgarth, co. of Brecon, South Wales. Pop., in 1801, 39; in 1831, 21. A. P., £100.

GRWYNEY, or GROYNE-VYCHAN, a hamlet in the same parish with the above. Pop., in 1801, 116; in 1831, 108. A. P., £473.

GUAHALL, one of the Scilly Isles. It lies to the west of Brechar, and contains about 10 acres.

GUERNSEY,

An island—the Sarnia of the ancients—lying in the bay of St Michael, about seven leagues from the coast of Normandy, subject to Great Britain. Its form is triangular; its extreme length being about $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles and its greatest breadth about 4. The coast upon the south, from the Ilanols to St Martin's point; and on the east, from St Martin's point to the town of St Peter's, is one continued rock or cliff, rising almost perpendicularly from the sea to the height of 270 feet. The remainder of the east and the north coasts are formed by flat bays, separated by ridges of lofty and rugged rocks. In its whole circuit the coast is indented by small bays, forming natural harbours, exceedingly commodious for the inhabitants. The northern part of the island, with the exception of a few rocky cairns and hillocks, is a level tract, rising but a very little above the sea at high water. The southern part, except for a number of deep ravines by which it is intersected in various directions, lies mostly upon a level with the rocky coast by which it is bounded. Though lying low, the northern part, or the Vile, as it is called, has very few marshes, and the soil in general is remarkable for fertility. The southern and more elevated division, with some exceptions, particularly in part of the parishes of Torveval and the Forest, is fine arable land, and its most rocky elevations afford excellent pasturage, especially for sheep, in many places nearly to the water's edge. The whole island is enlivened and refreshed by fine clear rivulets, sufficiently copious, many of them, to turn overshot mill-wheels. According to Dr MacCulloch, the island is entirely of granitic formation.

State of Agriculture, &c.—Agriculture is studied and carried on with great assiduity, and with much success. The lands are generally enclosed with stone fences; and not only gentlemen's seats, but the farm-houses, and even the cottages are handsomely built, and delightfully situated among orchards and gardens. The orchards are mostly formed of apple-trees, which are very productive, and vast quantities of cider are made and consumed in the island, it being the principal beverage of the inhabitants. Of forest trees, the elm is the most commonly met with, the quality of which is equal to any, and superior to the most, in Europe. The oak is also good, but trees of that kind are not numerous, nor are they allowed to stand till they attain their full maturity. European fruits almost of all kinds grow in great profusion; and so genial is the climate, that myrtles, geraniums, &c. &c. flourish in the open air. The fig-tree grows in great luxuriance, and attains some times a remarkable size. The aloe frequently blossoms here, and the more hardy species of orange-tree—the Seville—bears fruit in winter, though very partially sheltered. Thousands of that most beautiful flower, the Guernsey lily, are exported yearly to England and France, but have never been found to blow a second time out of the island. There is nothing here that can be called a wood. Coppices are equally rare, yet wood-cucks are sometimes met with. There are also a few snipes, but no common game. Most of the British birds of song are occasionally seen, but the nightingale is rarely heard. Fish abound on the coast, and are caught in great abundance and variety. The most common are mackerel, sea-pike, whittings, pollacks, bream, and rock fish. Occasionally there are turbot, mallots, soles, plaice, and conger-eels, the latter weighing often from 30 to 40 pounds. The crabs and lobsters caught upon this coast are of enormous size. The spider-crab—not very large, but highly esteemed among the lovers of good cheer—is almost peculiar to this coast. Neither mole, snake, nor toad, are found in the island. The general produce of the soil may be stated to be nearly the same as that of the west of England. Spade labour was formerly universal, and it is said would still be preferred could a sufficiency of labourers be procured. Of late years a large plough has been introduced, which is drawn by six horses and four oxen, the furrows being drawn to the depth of eighteen inches. As the farms are small—seldom enabling the farmer to have more than two horses and one ox—it has become common for the neighbours to assist one another with their horses and oxen, and thus in rotation ploughing one another's fields. The grass lands are very productive, and yield often two tons and a half per English acre. The cattle upon the pastures are universally pastured in tethers, by which means they eat the fields regularly across, and by the time one side is finished a new math has arisen on the other. Few sheep are bred here, and not many of either sheep or cattle are fattened; fat sheep and fat oxen being generally imported from England and France. There is here an excellent breed of pigs, which are fed on parsnips, and grow to a great size, their flesh being of the very best and most delicious quality. Veal they also feed to the highest perfection. The dairy is very particularly attended to, and especially in the article of butter can hardly be equalled. The breed of cattle here is of peculiar excellence, and many of the cows are exported, being in general excellent milkers, and their milk uncommonly rich in quality. The breed of horses is execrable, and they are in general execrably treated.

Population, &c.—The inhabitants are generally of Norman extraction and their language is a provincial dialect of the French, the higher ranks alone speaking English. They are generally distinguished for good sense, and a character of marked temperance and sobriety. Of late years they have carried on a considerable foreign trade with the Portuguese and Spanish settlements in America, with Newfoundland and with various of the European ports. The island, however, affords few articles for exportation. Cows, we have already mentioned as coming under that description, and we may add granite for paving-stones, which are shipped in almost incredible quantities. A perfectly free and untaxed importation is allowed of every article, tea and spirits excepted. Though annexed to the crown of Britain, Guernsey is considered by some as appertaining to the sovereign in right of his ancient claim to the duchy of Normandy, and of course that the legislative authority lies with the king and council and not with the parliament. It is not upon ordinary occasions, however, that either the parliament or the council interferes with the internal regulations of the island, for managing which their own simple institutions seem to be perfectly competent. Each parish has within itself a douzaine, which consists, in eight of the ten parishes into which the island is divided of twelve, in one of sixteen, and in the tenth of twenty persons, with two constables, chosen by the parishioners from among themselves, supposed to be the most respectable and the most intelligent, who act as their representatives in the choice of the 12 jurats or magistrates, in the assembly of the states, &c., &c. The douzainers are elected for life, the constables from year to year. The royal court consists of the bailiff and twelve jurats with the procureur or king's advocate, comptroller, provost or king's sheriff, greffier or registrar, and king's sergeant. The levying of money for the public expenses is committed to the assembly or convention of the states, composed of the bailiff, the jurats, the procureur, the eight rectors of the ten parishes, the two constables, and the douzainers of each parish, the total number being 174. The consent of the governor or lieutenant-governor must be obtained for every meeting of the states, in which he has also a deliberative voice but no vote. The bailiff presides as speaker.—In meetings of this convention for nominating jurats, &c., which are termed 'States of election,' every member has a distinct vote; but in meetings for the purpose of raising money, which are termed 'States of deliberation,' the officers of the parish have collectively but one vote, by which the votes in an assembly of this kind are reduced to 32. The subjects for this council of deliberation are all prescribed by the governor or by the bailiff and governor together, being inserted in the writs by which it is assembled, and before any tax imposed by it can be levied, except it be for the immediate defence of the island, it must be sanctioned by the king in council. No writ from any British court extends to this island except from the court of admiralty, and though by numerous charters the inhabitants have the privilege of free-born subjects in every part of his majesty's dominions, every Englishman is here considered as an alien, may be arrested for the value of sixpence or even less, and have his bail refused though never so unexceptionable. Admission to the privileges of the island can be obtained only through the royal court, and even after long residence is but rarely conceded. The revenue consists in general taxes, harbour-dues, duties levied upon victuallers or retailers of liquors, and the produce of lotteries. The original feudal rents in kind, viz. in corn, fowls, loaves of bread, eggs, and other articles are still payable to the crown, besides some trifling sums of money in coin current at the time of the original grant. The legal institutions are founded upon the feudal law derived from Normandy, and especially in criminal cases the assessors are rather guided by their own judgment than written statutes.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—In ecclesiastical revenues Guernsey was originally subject to the bishop of Coutances in Normandy. It was, on the loss of Normandy, by King John annexed to the see of Exeter, restored shortly after to Coutances, where it remained till the reign of Henry VII., when it was by a papal bull annexed to the see of Salisbury. It was again in no long period re-attached to Coutances, where it remained till the reign of Elizabeth, who, in 1568, transferred it to the see of Winchester. In 1576 at a general synod held in Guernsey, June 20th, the Presbyterian discipline was unanimously adopted and rigidly adhered to till the famous act of uniformity, passed after the restoration of Charles II., the revisions of which extend to this island. A dean in consequence of that act obtained a commission of official from the bishop of Winchester in 1664, investing him with full power of ecclesiastical jurisdiction in the island and its dependencies. The litany and discipline of the English church, however, was not introduced without difficulty, and even so late as 1755 the dean found it necessary to apply for the aid of the civil magistrate to enforce it. The surplice has never come into general use, nor, though baptism is regularly performed in the church, is there a single font in the island. From the loss of the great tithes originally belonging to them, which by the papal authority were appropriated to the Norman monasteries, and at the reformation seized upon by the crown, the livings are small. The tithe of all grain and flax growing on the island is due to the king, and that of all apples, pears, cider, honey, calves, colts, pigs, lambs, geese, and fish, to the rector; but no tithe whatever is due to either for hay, clover, lucerne, potatoes, parsnips, or other vegetables. The portion of the field reserved by the chief lord in lieu of rent, is the twelfth sheaf of the whole crop. The parsonage-houses are repaired at the expense of the respective parishes to which they belong. Except for the garrison and at the new church of St James, the church service is performed wholly in the French language.

Town of St Peters.—There is only one town in the island, St Peters port, lying about the middle of the eastern coast, and extending along that coast nearly a mile and a half. Including the New town and the suburbs of Hauteville, it cannot be less than three miles in circumference. It seems to have consisted originally of one very narrow street of very high houses, but the buildings have extended all across the ravine and over the surrounding heights. The lower streets are narrow and dirty, though paved and some of them provided with footways; but in the upper or New town they are broad, straight, and clean, and the houses large and well-built. They are mostly dwelling-houses with shops in the under or ground floors, scarcely inferior in appearance to those of the most modern streets of London, while they far surpass them in durability of material and in the solidity of the workmanship. The assembly-rooms, erected by subscription, are particularly worthy of notice. They are raised upon stone-arches, beneath which is the market-place for vegetables. The ball-room is splendid, and is generally occupied by the public authorities for their place of meeting on all important occasions. A small theatre has been handsomely fitted up in the New-street, and is generally occupied in the end of the year by a company of performers from Exeter. A handsome library and reading-room has been fitted up under the patronage of the bishop of Winchester and the governor. The government-house at the top of Smith-street is reckoned handsome, and the new church of St James, the New-college, and Castle-carey, standing on the highest ground in the town, form—especially as seen from the roads and the harbour—very striking objects. The new fish-market is one of the most complete in the kingdom. The harbour is formed by the north and south piers, huge masses of rough masonry formed of granite, extending, the former to nearly 500, the latter to upwards of 700 feet; forming a capacious basin into which vessels of considerable burden can enter at high-water. It is defended by Castle Cornet, a fortress situated on a rock a little to the south-east of the pier, and supposed to have been originally constructed by the Romans. It is a place of considerable strength and has often been successfully defended. Here is an excellent free grammar school called the royal college of Elizabeth, which has been lately rebuilt in a splendid style, and at an expense of £12,000. The mastership is in the gift of the governor, and every boy on the island is entitled to admission. There are also for the benefit of natives of this and the neighbouring island of Jersey, fellowships in the colleges of Jesus, Exeter, and Pembroke, in the university of Oxford, founded by Charles I., with several scholarships in Pembroke-college, Oxford, founded at a later period by Dr Morley, bishop of Winchester. The most striking feature of society here is the entire absence of public beggars. Two establishments, called the town and country hospitals, exist in the island, to one or other of which all persons are sent who are unable to obtain an honest livelihood. The number of inmates in these establishments is about 300, and the annual expense does not exceed £2,000 a-year, which is raised by a tax on all property, averaging about sixpence in the pound. The surplus is applied to the paving and lighting the town.

Parishes, &c.—St Peter's port forms the principal parish in the island. The living is a rectory, rated at £12. The church—which consists of a nave, two aisles, and a chancel, with a low tower in the centre, surmounted by a spire—was, in 1312, dedicated to St Peter. To this church there are two chapels-of-ease—Trinity chapel and Bethel chapel. St James's church, lately built by subscription, may also be accounted a chapel-of-ease. The service is in this chapel performed in English; the government is vested in the elders, and the minister is paid by the congregation, but still it is subject to the jurisdiction of the bishop of Winchester. There are, besides places of worship for the Baptists and the Society of Friends, two for English and three for French Independents; one each for French, Primitive, Wesleyan, and Unitarian Methodists; and there is one Roman Catholic congregation, the members of which are exclusively French and Irish. Pop., in 1821, 11,178.—St Sampson's is also a rectory, with the vicarage of the Vale annexed, rated at £5. The church—the oldest in the island—was dedicated in 1111 to St Sampson. There is here a place of worship for French Methodists. Pop., in 1821, 838.—The Vale is a vicarage, united to the rectory of St Sampson's. The church—consisting of a nave and aisle, with a low tower at one end, surmounted by a spire—was dedicated in 1117 to St Michael the archangel. There is here also a place of worship for French Methodists. Pop., in 1821, 1215.—Torval is a rectory, united with that of Forest, rated at £5. The church—recently rebuilt—was ded., in 1130, to St Philip, and re-consecrated in 1818 by the bishop of Salisbury. In this parish is a natural cavern called La Cave Matrice. Pop., in 1821, 375.—St Saviour is a rectory, rated at £10. The church—which occupies a most picturesque situation—was dedicated to St Saviour in 1154. The ancient chapel of St Apolline, in this parish, still remains entire, but is now converted into a barn. Here are also to be seen some remains of the priory of Lehou, or Lehoumel. Here is a place of worship for French Methodists. Pop., in 1821, 1022.—The Forest is a rectory, united to that of Torval, rated at £7. The church was dedicated to St Margaret in 1163. Here is a place of worship for French Methodists. Pop., in 1821, 611.—St Peter of the Wool is a rectory, rated at £11. The church—which is very beautiful, and stands in a most striking situation—was dedicated, in 1167, to St Peter. There is here a place of worship for French Methodists. Pop., in 1821, 1093.—St Martin's is a rectory, rated at £11 13s. 4d. The church was dedicated to St Martin in 1199. Here is a place of worship for French Methodists. Pop., in 1821, 1429.—St Mary de Castro is a rectory, rated at £13. The church was dedicated to St Mary in 1203. The poor-house, or hospital, for the county parishes, is situated in this parish. Pop., in 1821, 1747.—St Andrew's is a rectory, rated at £6 13s. 4d. The church was dedicated to St Andrew in 1284. French Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have each a place of worship here. Pop., in 1821, 799.—Pop. of the whole island, in 1821, 20,302.

GUESTLING, a parish in the hundred of Guestling, rape of Hastings, co. of Sussex. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Chichester, rated at £12 0s. 7½d. Church ded. to St Andrew. Patron, in 1829, Sir W. Ashburnham, Bart. Distance from Winchester, 3½ m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 496; in 1831, 768. A. P., £2,571.

GUESTWICK, a parish in the hundred of Eynesford, co. of Norfolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £5 0s. 10d. Church ded. to St Peter. Patron, in 1829, W. E. Bulwer, Esq. The Independents have here a place of worship. Distance from Foulsham $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 129; in 1831, 188. A. P., £1,519.

GULDEN-MORDEN, a parish in the hundred of Armingford, co. of Cambridge. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Ely, rated at £7 3s. 6d. Church ded. to St Mary. Patrons, the master and fellows of Jesus' college, Cambridge. Distance from Biggleswade, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. E. Pop., in 1801, 428; in 1831, 676. A. P., £2,614.

GULDEN-SUTTON, a parish in the hundred of Broxtow, co.-palatine of Chester. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester, of the certified value of £12. Distance from Chester, 3 m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 159; in 1831, 132. A. P., £2,111.

GUILDFORD, a borough and market-town, having separate jurisdiction, and comprising the parishes of St Mary, St Nicholas, and St Trinity, in the hundred of Woking, co. of Surrey. The livings are rectories in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester, rated, St Mary's at £12 5s. 5d., St Nicholas, £21 0s. 10d., St Trinity, £11 11s. 0 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Patrons of the first and the last, which are united, the lord-chancellor; of St Nicholas, the dean of Salisbury. The town, which is the capital of the county, is seated on the declivity of a chalk hill on the east bank of the Wey, which has been made navigable thus far, and over which there is here a bridge of five arches. It is large and well-built, and consists chiefly of an excellent and spacious street, which, from its declivity, has to strangers a particularly striking aspect. It is well paved, lighted with gas, and abundantly supplied with water. Besides the churches, the public buildings are the town-hall, in which there is an excellent council-chamber, an elegant county-hall with suitable offices, a theatre, a gaol, and a house of correction. By means of the river, a considerable trade is carried on with the metropolis, consisting chiefly in timber, corn, malt, and beer. The clothing trade, once so prosperous here, has been entirely abandoned. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday; and it has fairs, May 4th and November 22d, for horses and cattle. Guildford is a borough by prescription, the date of its incorporation being unknown. It is governed by a mayor, a recorder, 7 magistrates, and 20 bailiffs, who have the power of adjudging criminals to death. Two of the bailiffs, along with the mayor and recorder, are justices of the peace for the corporation and liberties of Soke-above-Bar. The town has sent two members to parliament since the 23d of Edward I. The right of election is now enjoyed by about 431. The election of the county-members for the western division also takes place here, and the summer assizes for the county are held alternately here and at Croydon. The freedom of the borough is obtained by servitude, one of its privileges being an exemption from serving on juries for the county assizes, on paying a fine of one penny. Here were two monastic institutions, one of which has disappeared, without leaving a single trace behind, the remains of the other serves for holding the assizes. There was formerly here a fine castle, a place of great strength, and often honoured with the royal presence. It is in total ruins. A silver plate, value 100 guineas, left by William III., is annually run for here on Whitsun-week, upon a circular course prepared and preserved for the purpose. Besides the established churches, there are here places of worship for Baptists, Friends, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists. Here is a free grammar school, founded in 1509. A school for educating and clothing 30 boys, was founded here in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, by Mr Thomas Baker; and there are schools, national and Lancasterian, supported by subscription. An hospital for 12 aged men, and 8 unmarried women, was founded here by George Abbot, archbishop of Canterbury, who was a native. Distance from London, 30 m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 2634; in 1831, 3813. A. P., £7,859.

GUILDFORD (East), a parish in the hundred of Goldspur, rape of Hastings, co. of Sussex. Living, a discharged rectory with that of Playden, in the archd. of Lewes and dio. of Chichester, rated at £8 4s. 7d. Church ded. to St Mary. Living, a discharged rectory, annexed to the vicarage of Whitwell, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £15 10s. 5d. Patron, in 1829, G. H. Holley, Esq. Church ded. to All Saints. Pop., in 1801, 467; in 1831, 698. A. P., £3,231.

HACKFORD, a parish in the hundred of Forehoe, co. of Norfolk, 4 m. W. by N. from Wymondham. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £4 15s. 10d. Patron, in 1829, G. H. Holley, Esq. Church ded. to St Mary. Pop., in 1801, 186; in 1831, 229. A. P., £1,144.

HACKFORTH, a township in the parish of Hornly, N. R. of the co. of York, $3\frac{3}{4}$ m. S. from Catterick. This was the native place of Cuthbert Tunstall, bishop of Durham, who died in confinement for denying the supremacy of Queen Elizabeth. Pop., in 1801, 135; in 1831, 142. A. P., £1,735.

HACKINGTON, or ST STEPHEN'S, a parish in the hundred of Westgate, lathe of St Augustine, co. of Kent, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. N. from Canterbury. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury, rated at £5 2s. 3d. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. Church ded. to St Stephen. "In the churchyard here, A. D. 1187, Baldwin, archbishop of Canterbury, began a chapel in honour of St Stephen and St Thomas of Canterbury, wherein he proposed to found a noble college of forty secular priests, and that the king and every one of his suffragan bishops should have a prebend, every one to be worth 40 marks per ann.; but the prior and monks of Christ church made such vigorous opposition to this design in the court of Rome, that after the archbishop had in the next year settled some secular canons here, he was forced to desist, and the chapel was, by the pope's command, levelled with the ground, A. D. 1191."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 255; in 1831, 436. A. P., £3,611.

HACKLESTON, a hamlet in the parish of Piddington, co. of Northampton, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.E. by S. from Northampton. Here is a place of worship belonging to the Particular Baptists. Pop., in 1801, 278; in 1831, 425. A. P., £1,387.

HACKLESTONE, a tything in the parish of Fittleton, co. of Wilts, $\frac{1}{4}$ m. W. by S. from Ludgershall. The General and the Particular Baptists have places of worship here. Pop. returned with the parish.

HACKNESS, a parish in the liberty of Whithy-Strand, N. R. of the co. of York, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. by N. from Scarborough, comprising the townships of Broxa, Hackness, Harwood-Dale with Silpho, and Suffield with Everley. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of the N. R. and dio. of York, of the certified value of £21. Patron, in 1829, Sir J. V. B. Johnstone, Bart. M.P. Church ded. to St Peter. Tanner says, "Here St Hilda built a monastery a little before her death, A.D. 680, which probably by the wars and devastations of the country was demolished long before the conquest. In the time of King William Rufus, the pirates having sacked Whithy, and driven away the monks from thence, William de Percy gave them this place, where they continued some time, and then returned to Whithy, but left some of their number here in the church of St Peter, as a cell subordinate to their abbey." This village stands in a romantic valley surrounded by hills, the declivities of which are finely wooded. The river Derwent passes the village. Here is the elegant mansion of Sir

J. V. B. Johnstone, Bart. Pop., in 1801, 504; in 1831, 749. A. P., £5,089.

HACKNEY, a parish in the hundred of Ossulstone, co. of Middlesex, 3 m. N.E. by N. from St Paul's cathedral, London, comprising three districts: viz. Hackney-St-John, South Hackney, and West Hackney. The hamlets and principal streets in Hackney, are Clapton, Homerton, Dalston, Shacklewell, Kingsland, that part of Stoke Newington on the east side of the road, (Stamford-hill) Church-street, Mare or Meer-street, Grove-street, and Well-street. Until this division into districts, the living was a vicarage and sinecure rectory, rated at £20; but now there are three distinct rectories, in the jurisdiction of the commissary of London, and in conjunction with the consistorial court of the bishop; the rectorial and vicarial tithes, &c., of the whole parish being divided among the incumbents of the three new rectories, each rector being entitled to all the tithes and emoluments arising within his benefice. Patrons, in 1829, S. Tyssen, Esq., and Mr Alderman Birch, alternately. The church, ded. to St John the Baptist—which now belongs to the central district—is a handsome brick edifice, with a cupola and dome of stone, and contains several ancient monuments, among which is that of Christopher Prewick, almoner of Henry VII., and rector of this parish. There is a spacious churchyard, a parsonage-house, lately rebuilt by the present incumbent. The church of West Hackney is a fine building in the Grecian style, erected in 1823, by an act of parliament, at an expense of £15,302 14s.—The church of South Hackney was built in 1810, on land given by J. Dekewer, Esq. There are three chapels-of-ease, and various places of worship of Dissenters; among the ministers who served in the Unitarian chapel of this place, were the celebrated Dr Priestley and Thomas Belsham; among those of the Independents were Matthew Henry the learned Commentator on the Bible, and Dr William Bates. A free school for 12 boys was founded here in 1616. In 1714 a parochial school was established, which is now conducted on the Madras system, and affords instruction to more than 300 poor children; 100 of each sex are clothed at the expense of the institution. The numerous benefactions in aid of the poor have, since the portioning of the parish, been divided into three distinct portions. In Paradise fields there is an establishment for 8 widows of Independent, and 4 widows of Baptist, ministers: it consists of 6 houses, and has a chapel in the centre. This handsome range of buildings was erected at the expense of S. Robinson, Esq. The London orphan asylum at Clapton, founded in 1813, was erected at an expense of nearly £30,000. It is a spacious building, and has a detached chapel. The number of children on this establishment exceeds 300; they are maintained, clothed, and educated; and on leaving the asylum, if not settled in some permanent situation, they are encouraged to good conduct by annual rewards from the board of management.—The Metropolitan female asylum in Grove-street, was established in 1829.

—The Hackney grammar school admits pupils of every denomination.—The academy at Homerton was established in 1769 for the education of Independent ministers. The students are not admitted under 17, nor above 22 years of age: the period for their continuing is six years. The first two are devoted to classical pursuits, and the remaining four to theology and philosophy.—The Hackney church of England school, in conjunction with the King's college, is situated in Back Lane, Clapton, and occupies about an acre of ground. The institution is formed by a proprietary of shareholders: the number of shares is 150 at £15 each, the managers having the power to call for an additional £5. Every proprietor is entitled to nominate a pupil for each share he may hold, paying for each pupil under 10 years of age £10 10s. per ann., and if 12 years of age or upwards, £12 12s. in full of every charge.—Among the celebrated natives of this place we may mention Sir Ralph Sadler, a distinguished statesman and diplomatist; and Dr Robt. Louth, an eminent divine of the 17th century. This extensive village and parish has become almost united to the metropolis by the rapid increase of its buildings. The Regent's canal passes through the western part of the parish, and the Lea river navigation through the eastern. Over the river Lea there is a handsome iron-bridge of one arch. To the south of this bridge are mills, originally belonging to the Knights Templars, who had a palace here, and subsequently used for the manufacture of sheet lead. The chief branches of manufactures carried on here are the preparation of colours, dyeing, calico-printing and calendering, and the making of optical glasses: great quantities of bricks are made in the neighbouring fields. The silk manufactory at Hackney-wick has latterly been discontinued; at one time it gave employment to about 700 persons. The parish is within the jurisdiction of a court of requests, held at Whitechapel, for the recovery of debts under £2, and is included within the limits of the new police act. Pop., in 1801, 12,730; in 1831, 31,047. A. P., £92,674.

HACKTHORNE, a parish in the E. division of the wapentake of Aslaoce, co. of Lincoln. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Stow and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £4. Patron, in 1829, R. HADDON (EAST), a parish in the hundred of Nobottle-Grove, co. of Northampton. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, rated at £15. Patron, W. Sawbridge, Esq. Church ded. to St Mary. Distance from Northampton, 7½ m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 259; in 1831, 644. A. P., £4,090.

HADDON (WEST), a parish in the hundred of Guilsborough, co. of Northampton. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, rated at £13 6s. 8d. Patron, in 1829, S. Spence, Esq. Church ded. to All Saints. Distance from Daventry, 8 m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 806; in 1831, 909. A. P., £4,737.

HADDON (UPPER), a township in the parish of Bakewell, co. of Derby. Here is the magnificent and venerable mansion of the duke of Rutland, called Haddon-hall; it is delightfully seated on the river Wye, and is an object of general interest, being the most complete of our ancient baronial edifices. Distance from Bakewell, 2 m. S.W.

HADFELD, a township in the parish of Glossop, co. of Derby. Here is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists, with a school attached, in which the number of children receiving instruction exceeds 400. Distance from Chapel-in-le-Frith, 1½ m. N.W. At one time this was entirely an agricultural district, but cotton factories have lately been established. It is bounded on the N. by the river Mersey. Cattle fairs are held on the 9th of May and 15th of October. Pop., in 1801, 659; in 1831, 1270.

HADHAM (GREAT), a parish in the hundred of Edwinstree, co. of Hertford. Living, a rectory with the curacy of Little Hadham, in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, rated at £66 13s. 4d. Patron, the bishop of London. Church ded. to St Andrew. Here is a place of worship for Independents. Distance from Bishop's-Stortford, 4½ m. W.S.W. This was at one time the residence of the bishops of London, and was the birth-place of Dr Owen, the celebrated nonconformist divine. Pop., in 1801, 900; in 1831, 1288. A. P., £5,728.

HADHAM (LITTLE), a parish in the above hundred and county. Living, a curacy subordinate to the rectory of Great Hadham. Patron, the bishop of London. Pop., in 1801, 685; in 1831, 878. A. P., £4,203.

HADLEIGH, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Cosford, co. of Suffolk, on the north side of the river Breton, 10½ m. W. from Ipswich, and 64½ m. N.E. from London. Living, a rectory and peculiar in the dio. of Canterbury, rated at £45 2s. 1d. Patron, the archbishop of Canterbury. Church ded. to St Mary. The altar-piece, which is very curiously constructed of wainscot and cane work, was erected in 1744, by Dr Wilkins the incumbent. There is a tomb in this church said to be that of Guthrom the Dane, who died here in 889. Here are places of worship for Independents, Baptists, and other dissenting bodies. Tanner in his Not. Mon. says—"Here was, as is said, a monastery in the Saxon times. Twelve almshouses were built in Magdalen-street here, by William Pykenham, LL.D., archdeacon of Suffolk and rector of Hadleigh; and by his last will, bearing date April 6th, 1497, they were endowed with lands in Whatfield, Aldham, Hadleigh, &c. These houses are yet in being, and 24 poor persons are maintained in them, under the government of the rector and church wardens." Here is a national school, supported by voluntary contributions, for an unlimited number of children. This town was anciently governed by a mayor and corporation, but the charter was surrendered in the reign of James II., under a writ of quo warranto, and has never been restored; it is now with the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, who hold petty sessions here. Courts baron are held for the manor, at which the steward presides. The woollen trade was formerly carried on here to a great extent, but it has given way to the manufacture of silk. The market is on Monday; fairs are held on Whit-Tuesday, and on the 10th of October. Hadleigh is one of the polling places for the members for the western division of the county. Pop., in 1801, 2332; in 1831, 3425. A. P., £7,605.

HAFOD, or EGLWYS-NEWYDD, a township and parish in the hundred of Har, co. of Cardigan, S.W. Living, a perpetual curacy to the parish of Llanfihangel-y-Creiddyn, in the archd. of Cardigan and dio. of St David's, rated at £27 17s. 8d. The church, called Eglwys-Newydd, was built in 1803. Patrons, the landholders of Uwch cell. This place is known to the literary world as the demesne of Thomas Jones, Esq., editor of 'Froissart's Chronicles.' His mansion was in the Gothic style, and built under the superintendence of Mr Baldwyn of Bath; the gardens and pleasure grounds were very tastefully laid out. But what Hafod was most celebrated for, was its invaluable library, collected during a space of 40 years, by the indefatigable industry of the intelligent proprietor, and a gallery of paintings by the first masters. This magnificent accumulation was totally destroyed by fire on the 13th of March, 1807. A short time previous to this lamentable event, a printing-house had been erected in the demesne, where the translations of Froissart, Joinville, Brocquiere, and Monstrelet were printed. In the vicinity of Hafod is what is called the Devil's-bridge; and adjacent to that, the Hafod Arms inn. Distance from Aberystwith, 14 m. S.E.

HAFODRYNOG, or HAVODDRYNNOG, a hamlet in the parish of Llanwonno, co. of Glamorgan, S. W., situated in an iron and coal district near the Rontha Vach. Pop., in 1831, 679. A. P., £1,519.

HAGBORNE, a parish in the hundred of Moreton, co. of Berks, including the liberties of East and West Hagborne. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Berks and dio. of Salisbury, rated at £15 10s. 7½d., and returned at £136. Patron, in 1829, R. V. Canford, Esq. Church ded. to St Andrew. Here is a small endowment for the education of children. Distance from Wallingford, $5\frac{1}{2}$ m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 695; in 1831, 782. A. P., £3,796.

HAGGERSTON, a parish—formerly a chapelry to St Leonard's—in the Tower division of the hundred of Ossulstone, co. of Middlesex. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of London, not in charge. Patron the archdeacon of London. The church—ded. to St Mary—was erected in 1827. The Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here. Haggerston having within the last few years become a very populous district, was constituted a distinct parish in 1830. It is partially paved, and is lighted with gas. Several new streets have been formed; the houses are neat and regularly built, and well supplied with water. The Regent's canal passes through this parish, and contributes greatly to increase the trade of the place: many of the lower class are employed in the lime-works, tile-kilns, dye-houses, and coal-wharfs, which are numerous here. There are manufactories for japanned leather, floor-cloth, and hearth-rugs, also for bone-ashes, and some extensive chemical works. The parish is within the jurisdiction of a court of requests, held at White Chapel. Distance from London, $1\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. by N. The pop. is returned with the parish of St Leonard's, Shore-ditch.

HAGGERSTONE, a hamlet in the parish of Kyle, which is located in Islandshire, near Berwick-upon-Tweed, but belonging to the co. palatine of Durham, 8 m. N.N.W. from Bel-ford.

HAGHMUN-ABBEY, an extra-parochial liberty in Wellington division of the hundred of South Bradford, co. of Salop. Here are the ruins of an abbey, which Tanner informs us was "founded in 1110 by William Fitz Alan of Clun, for regular canons of the order of St Augustine, which was ded. to St John the apostle and evangelist, and had at the dissolution, revenues yearly worth £259 13s. 7d. q. Dugd.; £294 12s. 9d. Speed. The site was granted to Edmund Lyteltton, 3rd Hen. VIII." The remains form part of the demesne of Sundom and consist chiefly of a chapter-house, the south door-way of the church, and a building, probably the abbot's lodging. This was the native place of William Clarke, a celebrated antiquary.

HAGLEY, a parish in the hundred of Halfshire, co. of Worcester. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, rated at £10 6s. 5½d. Patron, in 1829, Lord Lytle-ton. Church ded. to St John the Baptist. It is situated in Hagley-Park, the estate of Lord Lytleton, and contains two elegant monuments to that nobleman and his lady. The beauty of Hagley-hall, the residence and family-estate of this distinguished family, has been celebrated by Pope and subsequent writers. The village is 2 m. S. from Stourbridge. Pop., in 1801, 621; in 1831, 691. A. P., £3,894.

HAGLOE, a tything in the parish of Awn, co. of Gloucester, near the Severn, $\frac{3}{4}$ m. from Blakeney.

HALIFAX,

A market-town and parish in the wapentake of Morley, W. R. of the county of York, comprehending 19 townships and 4 chapelries; namely, Barkisdale, Errington, Flaby, Hipperholme, Langfeld, Midgley, Norland, Overdon, Ousum North, Ousum South, Riahworth, Skell, Skircoat, Soyland, Stainland, Stansfield, Whitworth, and Warley, Elland with Greetland, Heptonstall, Rastrick, and Sowerby.

Ecclesiastical Affairs, &c.—The living is a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York, rated at £84 18s. 6½d. Patron, the lord-chancellor. The church—ded. to St John the Baptist—is a noble Gothic structure, built apparently in the reign of Henry VI. It has an embattled tower, and the interior is adorned with armorial bearings of all the incumbents from the foundation of the vicarage, in 1274, up to the present time, with those of many benefactors of the church, to whom there are likewise several splendid monuments.—There is another church erected in 1798, ded. to the Holy Trinity.—St James's chapel, built by the parliamentary commissioners in 1861, is a fine building.—St Ann's in the Groves is a curacy, of the certified value of £3, both in the gift of the vicar of Halifax. Here are also several places of worship for Independents, Methodists, Unitarians, and other dissenting bodies.—The free grammar-school was founded by Queen Elizabeth in 1565. There are also two national schools on the place of Bell and Lancaster.—A Blue-coat school for 24 poor children, was founded and endowed in 1642.—The charitable institutions are numerous. Archbishop Tillotson was born here in 1650; and among other eminent natives of this parish, we may mention Sir H. Saville and Dr D. Hartley. Sir William Horwath and Daniel Dufresne were residents here.

General Description.—The town of Halifax is about 2 m. in length from E. to W., situated on a gentle eminence surrounded by hills. The soil is unfavourable to agriculture. The houses are well built, chiefly of New-castle, and are abundantly supplied with water. The town is a regular and lighted village. There are a theatre, assembly-room, a public library, and many good baths. Halifax was incorporated in 1280 of Chancery's jurisdiction, but the privilege was withdrawn at the Restoration.

By act of 3^d William IV. this populous city now returns two members to parliament. The number of electors is about 1330. The petty-sessions are holden here; and the magistrates give attendance at their office at Ward's-End every Saturday, for the transaction of business connected with the district. A court of requests is held for the recovery of debts under £2. The market is on Saturday; and fairs are held on the 24th of June and the 1st Saturday in November. Pop., in 1801, 57,526; in 1831, 109,899. A. P., £63,374.

Commercial importance, &c.—The parish of Halifax is said to be larger than the whole county of Rutland. Originally it did not contain more than 13 houses; it is now nearly 20 miles in length, and from 6 to 8 in breadth. Its present prosperity is owing to the vast increase of its woollen manufactures from the reign of Henry VII., when the manufacturers in the Spanish Netherlands, seeking refuge from the tyranny of the duke of Alva, settled in Halifax. Within a century, this place became so populous, that 12,000 men were sent from hence to join Queen Elizabeth's troops during an insurrection in the north. In 1642, the town was garrisoned by the forces of the parliament, whose cause the inhabitants seem to have espoused. Some idea may be formed of the extent and value of the woollen trade by the institution of a law for protection to the clothiers of Halifax against the depredations their goods were exposed to during their manufacture. The clothes being of necessity left all night in the fields to dry, were often stolen. By this local enactment, the magistrates were empowered to try and punish all persons stealing property valued at 1s. 1½d. within the precincts of the forest of Hardwick. The offenders were taken before the bailiff of Halifax, whose business it was to summon the constables of 4 townships within the liberty to require 4 free burgesses to appear and proceed to trial; if the accused was found guilty, he was executed on the principal market-day, by means of a machine resembling the guillotine. The last execution was in 1650. The cloth-hall, or Piece-hall, as it is called, is a handsome edifice of free-stone, containing 315 apartments for the reception of goods in an unfinished state, which are exhibited for sale to the merchants every Saturday from 10 to 12 o'clock. The manufactories are situated in the town and surrounding country, which is covered with villages, the poorer inhabitants of which are employed in spinning, carding, weaving, &c. Several cotton manufactories have been erected here, and succeed very well; and wool-cards of superior quality are made in the neighbourhood, which abounds with coal and free-stone. The Rochdale canal affords a medium of commercial intercourse with Liverpool, Manchester, and the western district; and the Calder navigation with Halifax and Hull.

The church—ded. to St Michael—is an elegant and spacious edifice. The market-day is Thursday. Here is a charity school, and several bequests for the relief of the poor. A singular custom is practised here, according to the will of a person who bequeathed a piece of land to the rector, on condition that he should provide two large pies, a quantity of ale in wooden bottles, and two dozen of small loaves, to be scrambled for by the poor of the parish. Frequent attempts have been made to put down this custom, and appropriate the bequest to some charitable purpose, but without success, and the custom is still practised every Easter-Monday. At a distance of about 1 m. W. from the town, are the remains of an ancient encampment called Hallaton-castle-hill; they consist of a conical eminence, on which stood the keep, surrounded by banks and ditches. HALLOWICKS, a hamlet in the parish of Midmenham, co. of Buckingham.

HALLYSTONE, a parish in the W. division of Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, comprising the townships of Barrow, Dueshill, Hallystone, Harbottle, and Linsheekes. Living, a perpetual curacy, united to that of Allenton in 1311, in the archd. of Northumberland and dio. of Durham, of the certified value of £8. Patronage with Alvington curacy. Church ded. to St Mary. "Here was a small priory for seven or eight Benedictine nuns, founded by — Humfravill of Harbottle castle, whose yearly revenues are certified 26th Hen. VIII., not to exceed £11 5s. 7d. Dugd.; and £15 10s. 8d. Speed."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Lady's Well, supposed to have belonged to the nunnery, is a fine basin of water, surrounded by a wall of hewn stone. Here are the ruins of an ancient castle, in which it is said an ancestress of the present royal family was born. This was formerly a town of considerable importance; it is situated between the Dove-crag-bourn and the river Coquet, on the banks of which are traces of an old building called Barrow Peel, and west of that is Ridlee-carn hill, supposed to have been used as cemetery by the ancient Britons. On the summit of a steep hill near Harbottle-lock, there is an immense stone called the Drake stone. We are told that when Christianity was introduced in Northumbria, 3000 converts were baptized here by Paulinus. Pop., in 1801, 391; in 1831, 462.

HALMER-END, a liberty in the parish of Audley, co. of Stafford. Pop., in 1821, 553; in 1831, 681.

HALSTEAD, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Hinckford, co. of Essex. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, rated at £17. Patron, the bishop of London. Church ded. to St George. Tanner informs us, "a college was begun here by Robert de Bouchier, lord-chancellor of England, 14th Edw. III., and intended for eight priests, but had never probably so many in it. For the endowment of this society, was rated, 26th Hen. VIII., at no more than £26 5s. 8d. in the whole, and £23 16s. 5d. oh. clear. The site was granted, 5th Edw. VI., to William, marquess of Northampton." Here are places of worship for Independents, Baptists, and the Society of Friends. A free grammar school was founded here in 1594, by Lady Ramsey. Thomas Bourchier, archbishop of Canterbury in the reign of Edward IV., was born here. The town of Halstead is pleasantly situated on an eminence arising from the river Colne, on the high road from London to Norwich, through Bury-St-Edmund's. This place was formerly noted for its extensive manufacture of baize and toys, which was introduced by the French Protestants who took refuge here in the reign of Elizabeth; but that branch of trade is now almost discontinued, and many of the inhabitants are employed in a silk manufactory lately established in the town. The lord of the manor holds courts leet and baron, once a year. And the petty-sessions for South Hinckford division are held here every Friday. The bridewell is an ancient building in which a treadmill has lately been erected. The market, which is chiefly for corn, is held on Friday. There are cattle fairs on the 6th of May and 29th of October. Distance from Chelmsford, 17½ m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 3380; in 1831, 4637. A. HAMMERSMITH, a chapelry in the parish of Fulham, co. of Middlesex, on the road to Brentford on the N. bank of the Thames, $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. from London. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London. Patron, the bishop of London. Chapel ded. to St Paul. A new district church was erected here in 1829 by a grant from the commissioners, at an expense of £12,223 8s. 4d. The places of worship for dissenters are and respectable. Here are a national and other schools supported by subscription; also a nursery, which originated in a boarding-school for young ladies of the Roman catholic persuasion, it has a chapel attached to it. The village of Hammersmith forms one of the most populous districts at the west end of London, and is one of the polling places for the county members. It comprises Brook-Green, Stanbrook-Green, and Shepherd's-Bush. Its streets (with the exception of that which extends along the turnpike road,) are narrow, but the houses have a good appearance, and there are many handsome seats and villas in the vicinity. Brandenburg house stood in this village, on the banks of the Thames. Near the church is a mansion said to be of the same antiquity with Hampton-court. The most remarkable object in this place is the suspension-bridge over the Thames to Barnes and Surrey, commenced in 1825 and finished in three years; the road-way is suspended by massive iron chains; the carriage road is 20 feet broad, and the foot path 5 feet. There is a navigable creek from the Thames to the village. Among the distinguished individuals who once resided here, were Thomson the poet, Catherine, queen dowager of Charles II., and Philip de Louthborough, an eminent landscape painter. The petty sessions for the Kensington division are held here every Monday, and courts leet and baron in November and at Easter. HAMPSTEAD, a parish in the Holborn division of the hundred of Ossulstone, co. of Middlesex. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London. Patron, in 1829, Lord Arden. The church is

ded. to St John, and contains several handsome monuments. Here are places of worship for Dissenters. The national schools here are well-supported. There are numerous bequests for relief of the poor. Among the distinguished individuals interred in this parish, were Anthony Askew, M.D. Archdeacon Travis, J. P. Andrews, author of a history of Great Britain, and J. Carter, the antiquary. The village of Hampstead is delightfully situated on the side of a hill, on the summit of which is an extensive heath, divided into the Upper and Lower Heath, the Vale of Health, and other subdivisions. The salubrity of the air makes it a favourite resort of invalids, and there are several elegant villas in the environs. Among these is a fine old mansion said to have belonged to Sir H. Vane, one of the judges of Charles I. On the side of the hill is an ancient structure, which was occupied as a hunting-seat by James II. To the N.E. is situated Caen-wood, the estate of the earl of Mansfield. The telegraph on Hampstead heath is the first on the line of communication between Chelsea hospital and Yarmouth. Hampstead was formerly in great repute on account of several chalybeate springs, the waters of which were sent to all parts of the metropolis. The parish is within the jurisdiction of a court of requests, held in Holborn, within the limits of the new police act. Pop., in 1801, 4343; in 1831, 8588. A. P., in 1815, £37,421; in 1828, £72,490.

HAMPTON-COURT, a royal palace situated about a mile from the town of Hampton, comprising three large quadrangles, named the entrance-court, the clock-court, and the fountain-court. The first two are in the Gothic style; but the fountain-court—rebuilt by Sir C. Wren—has a colonnade of the Ionic order leading to the state apartments, which are decorated with numerous portraits of distinguished individuals, and other paintings, by the most eminent artists. The gardens and park are about three miles in circumference. The former have borders and plantations exhibiting mathematical figures, laid out in the Dutch style, and are ornamented with several pieces of sculpture. In the parterres are four brass statues of Apollo, Diana, Saturn, and a gladiator. On the south of the palace is the privy garden, with a fountain in the centre. This palace was originally commenced by Cardinal Wolsey, with an intention of making it his principal residence; but before its completion he presented it to his royal master, who finished it according to the design of Wolsey's architect. Edward VI. was born in it, Oct. 12th, 1537; and here Henry was united to Catherine Parr in 1543. Charles I. retired to this palace during the plague in 1625; and in 1647 was imprisoned here till his escape to the isle of Wight. It was the residence of Queen Anne before her accession to the throne; and her son, William, duke of Gloucester, was born in it, 24th July, 1689. George II. was the last monarch who used Hampton-Court as a permanent residence.

Pop., including that of the hamlet of Weald and Greenhill, in 1801, 2485; in 1831, 3861. A. P., in 1815, £23,978; in 1828, £31,106.

The chief interest of Harrow-on-the-Hill is derived from its famous school, in which many persons distinguished for genius and great attainments have received their education: but, even before the existence of this establishment, Harrow was a place of some consideration, having been formerly the occasional residence of the archbishop of Canterbury. In the year 1170, Thomas à Becket, being about to visit Woodstock, to pay his respects to the young Henry Plantagenet, then lately crowned, and associated with his father in the government of the kingdom, received a command, whilst on his journey thither, to give up his visit; upon which the prelate repaired to his manor of Harrow. It is not certain where the site of the archbishops' mansion was: but Archbishop Winchelsey dates from Harrow in 1300. In consequence of the occasional sojourn of the archbishops, this place received certain benefits and privileges.

The hill upon which the village is built, rises out of a widespread and fertile vale, and is in some degree of a remarkable form, as its brow is considerably depressed in the centre, — rises into two very conspicuous heights at the extremes. The approach from London, from which Harrow is ten miles distant, ascends the more southerly of these eminences: that towards the north is crowned by the church, at the west end of which, on a tower of great elevation, is erected a lofty spire, a prominent feature throughout the whole of Middlesex, and many of the adjoining counties, and a landmark for the surrounding districts to a great extent. The prospects obtained at several points of this hill are various in their character; and, on a bright clear day, extremely beautiful. Towards the north the view is comparatively limited, as the high ground in the neighbourhood of Stanmore presents a kind of screen. Here, however, rich masses of wood, and frequent inequalities of surface, give a pleasing variety to the landscape. On the west and south-west, the prospect is very extensive, but the neighbouring country is flat. In the distance may be observed Windsor castle, and parts of Berkshire and Buckinghamshire. The view towards the east is terminated by London.

The free school of Harrow was established in 1571. The person to whose benevolence and care England is indebted for one of her best public schools, was John Lyon, a wealthy yeoman, who had previously spent a considerable sum in teaching poor children. In the year 1590, two years before his death, he drew up a set of statutes for the school, with full instructions for the disposal of the estates which he intended to appropriate to various charitable uses, at the same time appointing six trustees of his property; the election of successors to be made by themselves as a body. The revenues of Mr Lyon's estates—to which it is remarkable that not the smallest additional endowment has ever been made—are now considerable. But it has happened, unfortunately for the interests of the foundation, that those portions of his property which have, from their situation, acquired the greatest increase of value, such as certain lands near London, at Kilburn, and in the parish of St Mary-le-bone, were appropriated by him to other charitable purposes, especially the repairing of roads in the neighbourhood of his own house.—The rules to be observed in the management of the school were drawn up by Mr Lyon. These are precise, and, in some particulars, extremely curious. The system of education is marked out as a classical one. The modes of correction are specified. The amusements of the scholars are limited to “driving a top, tossing a hand-ball, running, shooting, and no other.” The twenty-second rule contains the provision “that no girls shall be received to be taught in the same school.”

—The practice of archery was common in the school from the period of its foundation. Every boy was entitled by the statutes to possess "bow-shafts, bow-strings, and a brace, to exercise shooting." Archery was a sport formerly used at many schools. The name which a part of the play-grounds at Eton college retains—that of the shooting-fields—may be attributed to a similar custom: and the term, the Butts, will be found in the immediate neighbourhood of other schools besides Harrow. There is an instance of this in the college-school at Warwick, and at other places. The public exhibitions of archery at Harrow were annual, and can be traced back for more than a century. The last silver arrow was contended for in July 1771. There were good and sufficient reasons for the abolition of this practice, and the more scholar-like and intellectual one of public speeches has taken its place. These are held every year in May, June, and July.

HARTLAND, a market-town, parish, and seaport in the hundred of Hartland, co. of Devon, on the coast of the Bristol channel, 14 m. W. by S. from Bideford, and 215 $\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. by S. from London. It was made a seaport by act of parliament in the reign of Elizabeth; it is governed by a portreeve. There is a handsome pier to the west of the town where coasting vessels discharge their cargoes of coal and limestone, and take in their export loadings of corn, &c. Here is an extensive herring fishery in which the inhabitants of the town have some share. The market is on Saturday, and fairs are held on the Wednesday in Easter week, and on the 25th of September. Living, a donative in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter, endowed with £800 parliamentary grant, and in the patronage of the governors of the Charter-house, London. The church is ded. to St Nectan, and from its situation serves as a land-mark for mariners. Tanner says, "Githa, wife to Earl Godwin, is said to have placed secular priests in the church of St Nectan here, who enjoyed the prebends of it till the time of King Hen. II., when Jeffrey de Dinham, by the authority of that king, and of Bartholomew bishop of Exeter, and by the assistance of Richard, archdeacon of Poitiers, changed the seculars into an abbot and convent of Black canons, whose revenues were rated, 26th Hen. VIII., at £306 13s. 2d. q. Speed. per ann. And granted, 37th Hen. VIII., to William Abbot." Pop. of this parish, in 1801, 1546; in 1831, 2143. A. P., £9,091.

HARTLEBURY, a parish in the lower division of the hundred of Oswaldslow, co. of Worcester. Living, a rectory in the dio. of Worcester, exempt from visitation, rated at £30. Patron, the bishop of Worcester. The church, ded. to St James, is a handsome Gothic structure. Here is a free grammar school which has existed since the year 1400; its income is £120 per ann. There are also a school for 12 girls, and a Sunday school. Hartlebury-castle has been for many years one of the residences of the bishops of Worcester; the present mansion was built about the time of the Restoration, and has been greatly improved by its successive proprietors; the ancient castle, erected by Bishop Cantelupe in the reign of Hen. III., was taken possession of and destroyed by the parliamentary forces in 1646. The Staffordshire and Worcestershire canal passes through the N.W. part of the parish. Distance from Kidderminster, 4 m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, including the hamlet of Milton-Upper, 1681; in 1831, 1948. A. P., £8,267.

HARTLEPOOL, a seaport, borough, and parish in the N.E. division of Stockton ward, co.-palatine of Durham. As a seaport it is not very considerable and is dependent upon Newcastle. The original harbour is now closed up and the present one is only fitted to admit vessels of light burden. The limits of the port extend from the Black shore in the river Tees on the south, to the Blackhalls on the sea-shore northward. The pier extends 154 yards from E. to W. As a borough, the government, according to charter granted by King John and renewed by Queen Elizabeth, is vested in a mayor, recorder, and 12 burgesses, with other officers; the former is justice of peace for the borough; the freedom is obtained by gift of the corporation, patrimony, or servitude, and descends to the eldest son only or to the next surviving son. Courts leet and baron are held twice a year. The market is on Saturday, and fairs are held on the 14th of May, 21st of August, 9th of October, and 27th of November. Hartlepool, in the reign of Edward III., was of great importance, and on the insurrection of the northern lords it was seized and garrisoned by them. In 1647 it was transferred with many other towns to the parliament, and seems to have been very strongly fortified, and at that time had such a capacious harbour that 100 large vessels could anchor in it. The town consists of one principal and several small streets; the neighbouring scenery is delightful, particularly along the sea-shore where some good houses have been erected for the accommodation of those who resort to town for sea-bathing quarters. Here are two fine chalybeates impregnated with sulphur. At a short distance from the town are some extensive coal-works. Living, a vicarage subordinate to that of Hart in the archd. and dio. of Durham, rated at £11 17s. 1d., and returned at £110. Patron, the vicar of Hart. The church, ded. to St Hilda, is a spacious edifice in the early English style with portions of the late Norman architecture, consisting of a nave, aisles, and chancel. Here are a place of worship for Wesleyans, and a free school for the education of 30 boys. "At or near this place was the ancient monastery called Heorthis, founded upon the first conversion of the Northumbrians to Christianity, about A.D. 640, by a religious woman named Hieu, or, as some copies have it, St Bega, whereof St Hilda was some time abbess.—A house of Grey friars, founded before A.D. 1275, and after the dissolution, viz., 37th Hen. VIII., granted to John Dryley and John Scudamore." Tanner's Not. Mon. Pop., in 1801, 993; in 1831, 1330. A. P., £738.

HASTINGS, a rape in Sussex, being the E. point of the county, as far as Pevensey bay. Pop., in 1831, 50,209.

HASTINGS, a cinque-port, borough, and market-town, having a separate jurisdiction, but located in the hundred of Balstow, rape of Hastings, co. of Sussex. It is a place of great antiquity, and is said to have derived its name from one Hastings, a Danish pirate, in the time of Alfred. The harbour—which was formerly a very considerable one—has fallen into disuse, being now only capable of admitting vessels of 100 tons burden. Hastings is one of the oldest cinque-ports, and was anciently required to furnish for the king's service, at 40 days' notice, 21 ships with their crews, to be maintained 14 days by the townsmen, but if detained beyond that period, the expense was defrayed by the crown. The charter of incorporation was granted by Elizabeth in 1588, and its privileges confirmed and augmented by Charles II. The town is governed by a mayor and 12 jurats, with a town-clerk, chamberlain, and other officers, and returns two members to parliament. The mayor is the returning officer. The electors are about 1125 in number. The town-hall—erected in 1823 by the corporation—is a very neat edifice; a custom-house, also, has been established here. The town of Hastings is pleasantly situated in a valley, formed into an amphitheatre, open to the sea on the S. and sheltered by the hills on the N., so that the climate is mild even in winter; and it has long since been ranked among the most favourite watering-places. It consists chiefly of two streets, running north and south, which are well paved and lighted. The houses are well built, and supplied with water from a bourne, which divides the town into two parts. Here are the remains of the castle which William the Norman occupied when he took up his station in this town, previous to that memorable and decisive battle which extinguished the Saxon dynasty, and led to many important political changes. "Within the castle was a royal free chapel, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary, wherein were a dean and several secular canons, or prebendaries, to which Henry de Augo, or Ewe, who lived temp. Hen. I., was a benefactor, and it might perhaps be founded by him or his father. It was said, 27^o Edw. I., that the gift of the prebends had been in the crown ever since the barony of Hastings came into the king's hands; but before that, Cornan Augi was patron. In 26^o Hen. VIII., the deanery was valued at £20 per ann., and all the prebends at £41 13s. 5d. per ann. The college and deanery were granted, 38^o Hen. VIII., to Sir Anthony Brown."—Tanner's Not. Mon. The town of Hastings contains six parishes, but only two of them have churches, viz. All Saints and St Clements, both in the archd. and dio. of Chichester. The livings are rectories; that of All Saints is rated at £19 12s. 9d., that of St Clements at £23 6s. 10d. Both are in the patronage of the Rev. G. G. Stonestreet. Here is a chapel-of-ease; the living a perpetual curacy. Patron, the earl of Chichester. Tanner also informs us—"Here was a priory of Black canons, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, as early as the time of King Richard I. Sir W. Bricet is said to have been its founder. But the church and house being overflowed and destroyed by an inundation of the sea, Sir J. Pellham gave them lands at Warblinton, 14^o Hen. IV., whereon to build a new church and monastery; however, it doth not appear that this design ever fully took effect; but by the charity of some other well-disposed persons, a new priory was erected near this town, which was founded, 26^o Hen. VIII., and was granted to John Baker, 29^o Hen. VIII. Its yearly revenues were valued at £57 19s." Independents and other dissenting bodies have places of worship here. The schools are numerous. The trade of this town was formerly very considerable; but at present it is almost confined to fish sent to London, and the curing of herrings for sale in various markets. The market is on Wednesday and Saturday; the latter for corn. Pop., in 1801, 2982; in 1831, 10,097. A. P., £11,981.

Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of York, rated at £15 5s. Patrons, in 1829, Lord and Lady Deerhurst. Church ded. to St Lawrence. Here is a place of worship for Independents. Hatfield chase, which was originally covered with water, was sold by Charles I. to Sir C. Vermuyden, who expended £400,000 on its improvement and cultivation. Near the town are some vestiges of Roman entrenchments. William of Hatfield, second son of Edward III., was born here. A desperate battle was fought at this place betwixt Edwin, king of Northumberland, and Penda, king of Mercia, in which the former was slain. Distance from Thorne, 3½ m. S.W. by S. Pop., in 1801, 1773; in 1831, 3000. A. P., £16,661.

HATFIELD-BISHOP'S, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Broadwater, co. of Hertford. Living, a rectory with the curacy of Totteridge, in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £36 2s. 1d. Patron, in 1829, the marquess of Salisbury. The church—ded. to St Etheldreda—is a handsome structure, and consists of a nave, chancel, aisles, and embattled tower. North of the chancel is the family vault of the marquess of Salisbury. Here are a place of worship for Independents, two charity schools, and six almshouses. This town derives its second name from its having belonged to the bishops of Ely, who had a palace here, which was subsequently a royal residence till the reign of James, who gave it to the earl of Salisbury in exchange for Theobald. It is a magnificent building, with a portico of 9 arches, and a lofty tower, bearing the date 1611. The park and grounds are very extensive, and exhibit some fine scenery, the beauties of which are increased by the windings of the river Lea. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, who hold a petty-session for the division; and the marquess of Salisbury, as lord of the manor, holds a court-leet. Hatfield is one of the polling-places for the county members. The market is on Thursday; and fairs are held on the 23d of April and 8th of October. Distance from Hertford, 7½ m. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, rated at £7 11s.; in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge. The church—ded. to St Mary—is an ancient Gothic structure, and contains a curious wooden effigy, said to have been carved by Robert de Vere, third earl of Oxford. "Aubrey de Vere, the second of that name, father to the earl of Oxford, before A.D. 1140, gave the church of St Mary here to the monks of St Melanious, at Redon in Britany, upon which it probably became a cell to that foreign abbey. Aubrey de Vere the third, or his second son Robert, earl of Oxford, might increase the revenues, and make it an independent priory of Black monks, for as such it continued till the suppression; about which time here were nine monks, and its yearly income was valued at £157 3s. 2d. ob. Speed. The site was granted, 32^d Hen. VIII., to T. Noke."—Tanner. Distance from Harlow, 6 m. N.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 1436; in 1831, 1825. A. P., £10,917.

HAVANT, a liberty in Portsdown division, co. of Southampton.

HAVANT, a market-town and parish in the liberty of Havant, co. of Southampton, on the high road to Chichester. It consists of one long street. The market, granted by King John, is held on Saturday; and there are fairs on the 22d of June and 17th of October. Living, a rectory and peculiar in the dio. of Winchester, rated at £24 6s. 0½d. Patron, the bishop of Winchester. The church:—ded. to St Faith—is a handsome cruciform edifice, presenting fine specimens of various styles of architecture. Here are two places of worship for dissenters, and a Roman Catholic chapel, a national school, and a school on the Lancasterian system. There is a swing-bridge across the channel, affording communication with the island of Hayling, about 1 m. S. of Havant. This parish is within the jurisdiction of the cheyney court, held at Westminster for the recovery of debts to any amount. The manufacture of parhement is carried on here to a great extent. Distance from Southampton, 22 m. E. by S. Pop., in 1801, 1670; in 1831, 2083. A. P., £6,229.

HAVERCROFT, a joint township with Cold-Hundley, in the parish of Folkirk, W. R. of Yorkshire. Pop., in 1801, 180; in 1831, 153. A. P., £850.

HAVERFORD (WEST), the principal town in the co. of Pembroke, S.W. comprising the parishes of St Martin, St Mary, and part of St Thomas, all in the archd. and dio. of St David's. St Martin's is a rectory not in charge, returned at £47. Patron, H. W. Bowen, Esq. St Mary's is a discharged vicarage, returned at £101 13s. 1d. In the patronage of the corporation. St Thomas's is a rectory not in charge. Patron, the lord-chancellor. Here are several chapels for dissenters.—The situation of this town is extremely picturesque, upon an eminence overhanging the river Cleddare, but the streets are narrow, and in many parts so steep as to be unsafe for carriages and horses. The houses are irregularly built, and the town owes its chief advantage to its being the high road to Milford-Haven. The county assizes are held here. The town-gaol, guild-hall, and custom-house, are handsome buildings. Here is a dock-yard with convenient quays, at which vessels of 100 tons burden can unload. * The manufactures are those of paper and wool, but the chief trade consists in supplying the surrounding country with English manufactured goods. This place was anciently the capital of the Flenings, and protected by a strong castle. Llwellyn-ap-Jorweth burned the town in 1221, but was compelled to a truce with the garrison. Of this noble castle, (supposed to have been erected by Gilbert de Clare, first earl of Pembroke), but little remains except the keep, on the south side of which is a singular echo. The town was first chartered by Edward IV., and is now governed by a mayor, 24 aldermen, a sheriff, two bailiffs, and two sergeants-at-mace; it returns one member to parliament, and is a polling place in the election of the county member. The market is on Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on April 12th, May 12th, June 12th, July 18th, Sept. 4th and 24th, and Oct. 18th. Pop., in 1801, 2880; in 1831, 3915. A. P., £8,281.

HAVERHILL, a parish and market-town, partly in the hundred of Hinckford, co. of Essex, and partly in the hundred of Risbridge, co. of Suffolk. Here are chapels for Independents and Baptists, and two charity schools. The town is pleasantly situated in a valley, and consists of one long and wide street. Its manufacture those of silk, fustians, checks, and cottons. The market is on Wednesday; and fairs are held on the 12th of May and 26th of October. Distance from Claro, 8 m. W. Pop. of the entire parish, 2025.

HAVERHILL, a hamlet in that district of the above parish which is in the hundred of Hinckford, co. of Essex.

HAVERHOLME, an extra-parochial district in the wapentake of Flaxwell, co. of Lincoln. It consists of an island formed by the river Slea, and was first given by Alexander, bishop of Lincoln, to the Cistercian monks of Fountains in Yorkshire, A. D. 1137, that they might build an abbey of that order, but, after some progress, they pretended not to like the situation and removed to Louth Park. The bishop quickly disposed of the island to the nuns and canons of the new and strict order of St Gilbert of Sempringham, who settled there A. D. 1139, and continued till the dissolution, when their income was rated at £88 5s. 5d. Speed. It was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The site was granted 30th Henry VIII., to Edward, Lord Clinton.—Tanner's Not. Mon.

HAVERING-ATTE-BOWER, a liberty in the S. W. of the co. of Essex, containing 3 parishes, including the town of Romford.

HAVERING-ATTE-BOWER, a parish in the above liberty and co. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Essex and dio. of London, valued at £83 10s. 8d., endowed with £600 royal bounty, and £400 private benefaction. Patron, in 1829, J. Heaton, Esq. Church ded. to St John the Evangelist. Distance from Romford, 3 m. N. Pop., in 1801, 188; in 1831, 332. A. P., £2,650.

HAVERINGLAND, a parish in the hundred of Eynesford, co. of Norfolk. Living, a discharged vicarage held by sequestration in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £4 12s. 1d. Church ded. to St Peter. The following is from Tanner's Not. Mon.—“In a place called Thweyt in this parish, William de Glaneto, temp. R. Joan, founded first a chapel dedicated to St Laurence, and gave it to the prior and convent of Wyndham, who were to keep two or three of their monks here, where afterward were settled a prior and several black canons. This monastery was suppressed among others 20th Hen. VIII.; after the cardinal's fall it was granted to —; but it is doubtful whether the cardinal ever got possession of it, for on its dissolution, William Hals, the patron, is said to have seized it as an escheat, and it has since gone along with the manor." Distance from Reepham, 3 m. S. E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 143; in 1831, 181. A. P., £1,252.

HAVERSHAM, a parish in the second division of the Newport hundred, co. of Buckingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £15. Patron, in 1829, Mr Kitelee. Church ded. to St Mary. It contains several elegant monuments, particularly that of the lady Elizabeth Clinton, heiress of the De la Planches. Pop., in 1801, 223; in 1831, 313. A. P., £2,186.

HAVERTHWAITE, a township in the parish of Coulton, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Pop. returned with the parish.

HAWTHAT-GREEN, a hamlet partly in the parish of Burrington and partly in that of Wrington, co. of Somerset.

HAW, a hamlet in the parish of Tirley, co. of Gloucester. Pop. returned with the parish.

HAWARDEN, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Mold, co. of Flint, N. W. It is on the high road from London to Holyhead, through Chester, and is connected with the banks of the river Dee by means of a rail-road. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of St Asaph, rated at £66 6s. 5⁴d., but supposed to be worth £3000 per ann. Church ded. to St Deiniol. Patron, Sir S. R. Glynne, Bart., lord of the manor. Here is a free grammar-school founded and endowed in 1666. The town is large, well-paved, and the houses have a very respectable appearance. Between the town and the river Dee are the ruins of the castle of Pen-y-llich, supposed to have been built about the time of the conquest. It was at one time possessed by the crown, at another by the Montalt family, subsequently by the Stanleys, earls of Derby, and lastly by the ancestors of the present lord of the manor. During the civil wars it experienced various fates, but was not totally destroyed till between 1665 and 1678. There is a tradition preserved in this parish, supposed to be translated from a Saxon MS., that in the year 946 there was a Christian temple containing an image of the Virgin Mary bearing a huge cross, and called the Holyrood. It happened to be a summer of great heat and drought, and the people went regularly to pray to the Holyrood for rain. Amongst them was Lady Trawst, wife of the governor of the castle, who, in the act of supplication, was killed by the falling of the Holyrood. It was resolved that the image should be tried for the murder, and a jury was impannelled, who found it guilty of the murder, and also of contumacy in not replying to the prayers which had been made. It was sentenced to be laid on the sands below the castle, which being done, it was borne by the tide to Chester, where it was buried by the inhabitants on a spot called Rood-Die, or Dee. This parish abounds in mineral productions; coal is raised in large quantities. Three kinds of clay are found here, fire-clay, stone-clay, and a less durable kind, all used in the manufacture of earthenware. Here are some extensive foundries for cannon and all kinds of wrought-iron work. Petty sessions are held monthly in this town. The market is on Saturday. Fairs are held on the last Mondays in April and June. Distance from Chester, 7 m. W. by S., and from London, 195 N. W. Pop., in 1801, 4071; in 1831, 2381. A. P., £18,900.

HEREFORDSHIRE.

An inland county in the W. of England, bounded, N. by Shropshire, E. by Worcester, S. by Gloucester and Monmouth, W. by Brecknock and Radnor. The length of this county from N. to S. is about 38 m., the breadth 35 m. It contains 621,440 statute acres; 11 hundreds; 176 parishes; 1 city; 2 boroughs, and 7 market-towns. The hundreds in Herefordshire are, Wigmore, Wolphy, Broxash, Stretford, Huntingdon, Grimsworth, Radlow, Greytree, Wornelow, Webtree, and Ewas-Lacy. The only city is Hereford. The boroughs are Leominster and Weobly. Three members of parliament are returned for this county, who are polled at Hereford, Leominster, Bromyard, Ledbury, Ross, and Kington. Pop., in 1801, 89,191; in 1831, 110,300. A. P., £604,614.

Rivers.—The principal rivers are the Wye, Lugg, Munnow, Arrow, Frome, Teme, and Leddon. Of all these, the Wye is the most celebrated for its picturesque beauties; it enters the county near Clifford, and is navigable to Hereford in barges from 18 to 40 tons, but the navigation is sometimes interrupted by a scarcity of water, or by the violence of the stream when swelled by the torrents from the mountains. The Hereford and Gloucester canal, begun in 1791, is not yet completed. There is another canal from Kington to Leominster and Stourport; on it are two tunnels, one of 125, the other of 3850 yards.

General Aspect, Soil, &c.—The general aspect of this county is very beautiful, diversified with hill and dale. The climate varies much in different districts, but on the whole is considered healthy. The soil, which is extremely fertile, is, for the most part, a mixture of clay and marle. The agricultural plantations consist principally of hop-grounds and orchards. About 527,000 acres of land are in cultivation. The average produce of wheat per acre is 20 bushels, barley 18. oats and pease about 20.

The waste lands are chiefly on the E. of the Hatterell or Black mountains. The cattle of Herefordshire are considered superior to any other breeds in the island, they are mostly of a reddish-brown colour, with white faces. This county has long been famed for a peculiar breed of sheep, highly valuable for the fineness of their wool. There are no manufactures of any extent in this county, on account of the superior advantages arising from agriculture, but woollen cloth is made at Ledbury and other places.

History.—The earliest inhabitants of this county, of whom we have any intelligence, were the Silures, a powerful tribe of ancient Britons, under Caractacus, who, after the most strenuous opposition, submitted to the Romans. During the heptarchy, it formed part of Mercia, and was the last which submitted to Saxon authority. Bordering on the territories still held by the Britons, or Welsh, it was subjected to their frequent incursions, but, on the conquest of Wales by Edward I., that prince issued orders for raising a body of infantry in Hereford to quell this petty war. It was garrisoned for Charles I., and successfully defended against the Scots, since which time no military event of any importance has taken place in this county.

HEREFORD,

An ancient city, with separate jurisdiction, but located in Grimsworth hundred, co. of Hereford, bordered S. by the river Wye, over which it has a stone bridge. Pop., in 1801, 6828; in 1831, 10,280. A. P., £18,647.

General Description.—The streets are spacious, and the houses in general have a respectable appearance. The public buildings most worthy of notice are the cathedral, bishop's palace, college, county jail, and theatre. The present cathedral, which is a cruciform structure, was begun by Robert de Losin, (the second Norman bishop,) after the destruction of the original edifice by the Welsh in the reign of Edward I. The length of the interior from E. to W. is 325 feet, the height from the area pavement to the vaulting 91 feet, and from the central tower, 244 feet. It contains monuments of 34 bishops of this see.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—The diocese comprehends Herefordshire and part of Shropshire, and is rated at £768, its real value is about £3,000. This city contains 6 parishes, all in the archd. and dio. of Hereford. The livings of All Saints and St Martin's are consolidated, being discharged vicarages, rated at £18 10s., and returned at £140 3s. Patrons, the dean and canons of Windsor. St John the Baptist's is a discharged vicarage, rated at £7 12s. 1d., and returned at £146 10s. Patrons, the dean and canons of Hereford. St Nicholas is a discharged rectory, rated at £10, and returned at £14. Patron, the lord-chancellor. St Owen's is a rectory with the vicarage of St Peter's, rated at £14 0s. 2d. Patron, the Rev. H. Gipps. There are places of worship for dissenters, and a Roman catholic chapel.

Schools and Institutions.—The college grammar-school, erected by the dean and chapter under statutes of Edward VI. and Elizabeth, is endowed with several scholarships and exhibitions at each of the universities. The blue-coat schools were established in 1710, for clothing and educating 70 children. A school for the sons of freemen was established in 1809. There are also a national school for girls, several Sunday schools, an infant school, and a female adult school, the latter established in 1816, in which about 100 persons assemble twice a-week, and are taught to read by ladies. The infirmary, which originated in a donation of £500 from the late Dr Talbot, rector of Ullingswick, is fitted up for the accommodation of 70 patients, with every appropriate convenience. Dr Harris, chancellor of the diocese, bequeathed £5000 to the support of this institution, and the annual subscriptions amount to £700. The lunatic asylum, for the reception of 20 patients, was opened in 1801. There are many other charitable institutions and bequests.

Municipal Government and History.—Hereford was first incorporated by Richard I. It is now governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, high-steward and his deputy, a recorder, town-clerk, 31 common-councilmen, sword-bearer, and 4 sergeants-at-mace. The city returns two members to parliament. The new electors are about 800 in number. The assize and quarter-sessions for the county are held here. In the reign of Athelstane, this city occupied an area of 1800 yards in circuit, and was almost surrounded by walls 16 feet high, but these, as well as a castle built by Edward I., have been entirely destroyed. In the wars between the houses of York and Lancaster, Hereford was frequently the seat of hostility. At the commencement of the parliamentary war it was garrisoned for the king, and was twice besieged, as already noticed. The Devereux family receive the title of viscount from this city.

HERTFORDSHIRE, or HERTS,

An inland county of England, bounded on the N. by Cambridge and Bedfordshire; E. by Essex; S. by Middlesex; and W. by Buckingham. It is about 30 m. in length, and 35 in breadth, and contains 385,000 acres, three-fourths of which is under tillage, and the rest pasture land. It comprises 2 boroughs, 8 hundreds, 18 market-towns, and 135 parishes; and is included in the home-circuit. Hertfordshire lies partly within the diocese of London, and partly in that of Lincoln, the whole being included in the province of Canterbury.

Rivers, &c.—The principal rivers are the Lea, Rib, Quin, and Colne. The canals are the Grand Junction, and the Watford. Six great leading roads pass through this district. The climate is mild and the general aspect of the county is pleasant; it is most hilly towards the north where several streams take their rise, and by their clearness show the nature of the soil to be rather hard in this part, which is not the case on the western side, the land being there rich and well-cultivated. The produce in wheat, barley, and oats is very considerable, and of the best quality. The grass lands are confined chiefly to the south side in the vicinity of Barnet.

Trade, &c.—The chief trade of the county is in corn and malt, which is conveyed to London by means of the navigation of the river Lea. The manufactures, with the exception of some extensive paper-mills, are not of any importance. This county returns three members to parliament, who are polled at Hertford, Stevenage, Buntingford, Bishop's-Stortford, Hoddesdon, Hatfield, and Hemel-Hempstead.

Antiquities and History.—Among the most interesting antiquities in this county, is the British city of Verulam—now called St Alban's, in the vicinity of which Cesar defeated Cassivellaunus, Boadicea conquered and massacred 70,000 Romans and Britons, and two battles were fought between the houses of York and Lancaster. Before the Roman invasion this county was inhabited by the Cassii and the Trinobantes, and under the Saxons it was divided between the Mercians and the kings of Kent. Pop., in 1801, 89,191; in 1831, 110,300. A. P., £604,614.

HERTFORD, or HARTFORD, a borough and market-town in the hundred and county of Hertford, on the river Lea, 21 m. N. from London. The corporation consists of a mayor, high-steward, recorder, 10 aldermen, 10 capital burgesses, a town-clerk, two sergeants-at-mace, and several subordinates. The county sizes, and petty-sessions for Hertford division, are held here. The borough returns two members to parliament. The mayor is the returning officer. Number of voters, 463. The trade of this town depends on the navigation of the Lea, and the chief articles of commerce are wheat, flour, malt, and wool. The market is on Saturday; and fairs are held on Saturday-forenight before Easter, 12th of May, 5th of July, and 8th of November. Hertford contains 5 parishes, viz. All Saints, St Andrew's, St John's, St Mary's, and St Nicholas. The churches belonging to the last three are demolished, and the benefices are annexed to the others. All Saints is a vicarage, rated at £10 8s. 6d. The living of St Andrew's is a rectory, rated at £12 7s. 3d.; both in the patronage of the king as duke of Lancaster. Here are places of worship for dissenters. At the entrance into the town is a school in connection with Christ's hospital, London, appropriated for the reception of junior boys, prior to their being sent to the metropolis. The East India college, instituted in 1805, is situated 2 miles on the London side of the town, and is a handsome building, with accommodation for 105 students, who are instructed on the plan pursued at the universities. Every student going to India is furnished with a certificate of his academic attainments. Here are four almshouses and a dispensary. Among the principal buildings are the castle, founded by Edward I., now belonging to the marquess of Salisbury; the town-hall, sessions-house, gaol, penitentiary, and the market-house. At a short distance from the town, on the river Lea, are the gas-works, erected in 1825, and since purchased from the company by private individuals. The streets are neat and clean, but the houses are irregularly built. The inhabitants are amply supplied with water. Pop., in 1801, 3360; in 1831, 5247. A. P., £13,491.

HEYWOOD-IN-HEAP, an extensive village and chapelry in Bury parish, co. of Lancaster. Living, a curacy in the archd. and dio. of Chester, returned at £111 10s. and endowed with £2,200. Patron, the Rev. G. Hornby. The district of Heap extends along the south and east banks of the small river Roch, which wanders through a romantic woody glen, ornamented by many gentlemen's seats, calico-print and paper-works, and large cotton-mills; the southern part of the township is entirely agricultural, being inhabited by farmers, while the northern or more unlevel portion is covered by the wide stretching populous manufacturing village of Heywood, reaching above a mile in length east and west, forming a regular street on the Rochdale and Bury roads, which towns are both equi-distant from this place. The cotton manufacture is the staple trade; the village being situated within 8 miles of Manchester, and plentifully supplied with coal from the numerous pits in the neighbourhood. There are twenty or more steam-engines employed in moving machinery, and manufacturing powerloom and woollen-cloth, spinning fine cottons, making paper, and constructing wheels. There are no fairs held here, nor a regular market except on Saturdays; but there is an annual village festival. The government of the place is intrusted to the church-warden and constables of Heap. Here is a post-office, news-room, and assembly-room. Thirty or forty years ago this now extensive town was a mere country hamlet, known only for its chapel which was erected prior to the restoration. Adjoining the yard is a national school, erected by the wealthy inhabitants of the township, in 1815, where a large number of poor children are educated by subscription. The Independents, the Methodists, and the followers of Emanuel Swedenborg, have each a neat place of worship in the village, all of them erected within a few late years. The commanding situation of Heywood affords several fine prospects of the hills to the north, and the rich valley in front; disclosing Heywood-hall, a rural edifice, amongst trees, lately the seat of James Starkie, Esq., formerly the residence of the Heywood family, one of whom, Peter Heywood, was the first person that seized Guy Faux when he was proceeding to blow up the parliament house. Whittle-in-Heap is a secluded village to the south of Heywood. Heap-Bridge is a populous hamlet to the west; and Hooley-Bridge, a similar place, lies to the north. Distance from Bury, 3 m. E. by S. The population of Heap, according to the last census, is 10,429.

HUDDERSFIELD,

A market-town and parish in Aghrigg wapentake, W. R. of Yorkshire, 45 m. S.W. from York, and 187 m. N.N.W. from London. It comprises the townships of Golcar and Lindley, with the chapelries of Longwood, part of Marsden, Scammonden and Dean-Head, and Slaithwaite. This town, which derives its name from Oder or Hudder, the first Saxon colonist in the place, stands on the river Colne, which, rising near the source of the Don above Holmfirth, falls into the Calder near Nunbrook. The valley formed by this stream, with a small quantity of level ground upon its banks, comprehends the parish of Huddersfield. The great, and almost the sole proprietor of this town is Sir John Ramsden, Bart., whose family had a grant of the market by patent, dated as early as the 23d of Charles II. The revenue derived from this property by the Ramsden family is at the present day more than princely.

Navigation.—The inland navigation of Huddersfield affords to the trade the most ample facilities both to the east and to the west. The Ramsden canal, which commences at the king's mills, close to the town, crosses the high road to Halifax, and passing Blackhouse brook near Deighton, unites with the Calder at Cooper's bridge. In this way a communication is opened with the great trading towns of Halifax, Wakefield, Leeds, and York, as well as Hull, from whence the merchandise is shipped to foreign countries. The Huddersfield canal, which joins the Ramsden canal at the south end of the town, conveys goods westward by way of Linthwaite, Slaithwaite, and Marsden. There is a tunnel, nearly $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. in length, cut through the English Apennines to within 2 m. of Dobeross, from which the canal, after crossing the river Tame in several of its windings, comes within a mile of Lydgate, by Mosley and Staley-bridge, and unites with the Ashton and Oldham canal near Ashton-under-line. The navigation to Manchester is then direct, and from thence the communication by water and land is made daily to Liverpool, the great depot of commerce on the western coast.

Manufactures.—The manufactures of this town and neighbourhood are principally woollens, and consist of narrow and broad cloths, serges, kerseymeres, and various other woollen fabrics. Formerly, the buyers and sellers of cloth met in an open square; but in the year 1766 a commodious hall was erected for their accommodation by Sir John Ramsden. Here, in brisk times, an immense quantity of business is done in a few hours. The doors are opened early in the morning of the market day, which is Tuesday, and closed at half-past 12 o'clock at noon; they are again opened at three in the afternoon, for the removal of cloth, &c.

Population.—Pop., in 1801, of the town, 7268; of the entire parish, 14,848: in 1831, of the former, 19,035; of the latter, 31,041. A. P., of the town, £17,998; of the entire parish, £30,224. A century ago, the population and opulence of Huddersfield did not amount to more than one-half of either Halifax or Wakefield; but it is now equal to the largest of them, and promises fair to maintain the commercial and manufacturing consequence which it has so deservedly acquired. According to a calculation made by Dr Walker, who has published a topographical account of Huddersfield, it would appear that the place is healthy in a very eminent degree; and that, on an average of five years, the annual number of deaths, in proportion to the population, was only as one to 54 and a fraction.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—The living of St Peter's is a vicarage, rated at £17 13s. 4d. Patron, Sir J. Ramsden, Bart. Trinity church is a handsome edifice, opened in 1819. St Paul's church was founded in 1829 by the parliamentary commissioners, who have also built another at Paddock. Here are 2 Methodist chapels, 2 Independent chapels, and a Friends' meeting house.

Franchise.—Huddersfield now returns one member to parliament, and is one of the polling places for the W. R.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE,

An inland county, bounded N.W. by Northamptonshire; S.W. and S. by Bedfordshire; and E. by Cambridgeshire. It is divided into 4 hundreds, contains a county-town, 6 market-towns, and 104 parishes. It is included in the diocese of Lincoln and province of Canterbury, and forms an archdeaconry, comprising the deaneries of Huntingdon, St Ives, Leightonstone, St Neots, and Yaxley. There are 22 acting magistrates; the civil government is included under the same shrievalty with Cambridgeshire. Huntingdonshire returns two members to parliament, who are polled at Huntingdon and Stilton. Pop., in 1801, 37,568; in 1831, 53,100. A. P., £320,188.

Rivers.—The principal rivers are the Ouse and the Nen. Its greatest extent is 24 m. each way, but it is generally much less. There are three distinct varieties of surface in this county. The borders of the Ouse consist of fertile meadows; the middle and western parts are fruitful in corn, and varied with fine woodlands; the N.E. is chiefly fen land. The soils consist chiefly of clay and loam of various qualities. The chief native products are corn, oats, mustard and hemp; but agriculture is not in a very thriving state here, nor are the manufactures of any note except those of wool-stapling, and spinning yarn. The breed of sheep on the enclosed lands resembles the Leicester and Lincolnshire kinds, those on the open fields and commons are very inferior. The cattle also, are of the poorest sort. The high roads in impassable.

History.—This county, before the Roman invasion, formed the western extremity of Icen; after that event, it was included in the Flavian province, and subsequently, was attached to the kingdom of Mercia. William the Conqueror gave the earldom of Huntingdon to a noble baron, named Waltheof, who was afterwards executed for a treasonable conspiracy against the government. The title was next enjoyed by David, king of Scotland and his descendants, till 1219, when the possession of the counties of Cumberland, Huntingdon, and Northumberland, was disputed by Henry II. and Malcolm. This dispute terminated in a stipulation that Malcolm should receive back the two former counties, but surrender Northumberland. In the subsequent wars between Bruce and Baliol, this earldom was finally seized by the king of England.

HUNTINGDON, a borough and market-town with separate jurisdiction, but located in Toseland hundred, Huntingdonshire, 58½ m. N.N.W. from London. Its position is on a rising ground, N. of the river Ouse, over which there is a stone-bridge leading to the village of Godmanchester. It consists of one principal street, extending in a N.W. direction, with several lanes branching off at right angles. The houses are mostly large and of a handsome appearance; the town is well-paved and lighted. The first charter was granted by King John, but it is now governed by that of Charles I., the corporation consisting of a mayor, recorder, 12 aldermen, and a common council. It has returned two members to parliament ever since the 23d of Edward I. The new boundaries comprise the parish of Godmanchester. The electors are 405 in number. This borough comprises the parishes of All Saints, St Benedict, St John the Baptist, and St Mary, all in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln. The living of All Saints is a rectory, united with St John the Baptist, rated at £12 19s. 4½d., and returned at £123 19s. 8d. St Mary, a discharged rectory with St Benedict's, rated at £10 5s., and returned at £111 6s. 9d. Each, in the patronage of the lord-chancellor. The churches are all fine buildings. Here are a free grammar school, green-coat school, and national schools, richly endowed. The town-hall is a handsome structure; the ground floor contains the civil and criminal courts where the assizes are held. The county-gaol is a commodious building at the W. side of the town. The brewing trade is carried on here, and there is a vinegar manufactory; coals, wood, &c., are brought to the town by barges which come up the river from Lynn to Norfolk, and return with corn. IPSWICH,

A borough, port, and market-town in the liberty of Ipswich, Suffolk, 25 m. S.E. by E. from Bury-St-Edmund's, and 69 m. N.E. from London. It was first chartered by King John, and at present is governed by a high-steward, recorder, 12 portmen, including 2 bailiffs, 24 chief constables, a town-clerk, and other officers. The bailiffs and recorder, with 4 portmen, are justices of the peace. The jurisdiction of the corporation is extended over the estuary of the Orwell, on the Essex coast, beyond Harwich, and on both sides the Suffolk coast, beyond Landguard fort. The freedom of this borough is inherited by all the sons of a free burgess, born after the parent has taken up his freedom. No freeman can be compelled to serve on juries out of the town. Among other privileges peculiar to itself, Ipswich has an admiralty jurisdiction. It returns 2 members to parliament. The voters are 1800 in number. The number of vessels belonging to the port is 129. The coasting trade consists principally of corn and malt, and in timber for ship-building.

The principal trade of Ipswich is in the exportation of corn, malt, cheese and butter. The market days are Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. Fairs, May 4th and 13th for lean cattle and toys; July 25th for toys; August 22d for horses and lambs; September 25th for butter and cheese. The only manufactures carried on to any extent here, are the spinning of woollen yarn, sail-making, and ship-building.

JERSEY.

An island in the English channel, 10 leagues S.S.W. from Cape de la Hogue, and 7 m. S.W. from the isle of Guernsey; its extreme length from E. to W. is 12 m., from N. to S. 7 m.; its superficial area, 62½ square miles, or 40,000 acres. The surface of Jersey is an inclined plane, rising abruptly from the sea on the north side, where its cliffs are from 100 to 200 ft. in height. The south side is nearly level with the sea, which varies considerably in depth around this island, owing to the numerous banks and shoals environing the coast. The centre of the island is mountainous. The principal bays are St Auen, St Aubin, Gronville, St Catherine, and Baulay. It is intersected by numerous small valleys, watered by streams issuing from the banks. The coast abounds with fish; the conger eels are so numerous among the rocks, that "the sea about Jersey may be styled the kingdom of congers."

Climate, Soil, &c.—The climate and soil are extremely favourable to the growth of apples, which are extensively cultivated; melons, strawberries, and other fruits, are brought to the greatest perfection. There are no woods of forest trees throughout the island, but a kind of sea-weed called erica, growing all around the rocky shore, is cut—by proclamation of the magistrate—twice a-year, and when dried is used as fuel; in its green state it is taken to manure the land. The horses are small, but strong and hardy. The cows are of that breed distinguished by the name of Alderney cows. The sheep are of inferior kind. The manufactures are not on an extensive scale, with the exception of cider, which is one of the principal exports. The imports from England are corn, flour, seeds, live and dead stock, cloth, linen, crockery and glass ware, and most articles necessary for subsistence, apparel, and furniture. It has commercial relation with almost the whole of Europe, and also with America.

Government.—The civil government consists of a court of judicature, composed of a bailiff and 12 jurats; the dignity and prerogatives of the bailiff's office are very great; he keeps the public seal, but cannot use it without the concurrence of three jurats. No final proceedings can take place, unless he is present. The military government is vested in a governor appointed by the crown, who enjoys all the revenue arising from the royal demesne. No civil assembly can be held without his permission, though his voice is merely negative. His residence is Elizabeth castle, situated about ¾ m. from the town of St Heller's, on an eminence surrounded by the sea at high water; it comprises three wards, defended by strong batteries, and contains extensive barracks. His duties are discharged by the lieutenant-governor, who is always a military officer, and has the command of the garrison. The ecclesiastical government is vested in a dean, assisted by the rectors of the different parishes. The laws of this spiritual court are regulated by the canons of James I., which empower the dean to grant special licenses for marriages, probates of wills, and letters of administration of the goods of intestates dying without heirs.

Parishes.]—This island comprises the parishes of St Brelade, St Clement, Gronville, St Helier, St John, St Laurent, St Marie, St Martin, St Auen, St Pierre, St Sauvier, and La Trinité. The livings are all rectories in the deanery of Jersey. A parsonage house is attached to each, but the incomes are very inconsiderable. All the churches are handsome structures, most of them arched with stone and covered with blue slate. The church of St Helier is the principal, or town church. Two free grammar schools were founded in 1498: their endowments are but small. The chief buildings are the court-house, a new prison situated at the western extremity of the town of St Heliers, and the hospital, and the work-house. The public subscription-library, erected in 1736, is furnished with a valuable collection of books. The total pop. of Jersey, in 1806, was computed at 22,885; in 1830, 28,600.

History.]—Jersey is supposed to have been the Cæsarea of the Roman geographers. It is mentioned in history as the place to which Prætextatus, archbishop of Rouen, was banished in 577; but these early notices are obscure and indefinite. Having originally belonged to Normandy, it became an appendage of the British isles when William the Conqueror subdued England. The French, however, conceiving that, by geographical position, it pertained to their kingdom, made frequent endeavours to regain the possession of it, and during the civil wars between the houses of York and Lancaster, they reduced about half the island, but were subsequently expelled. In the civil wars of Charles I. and his son, it was occupied by the royalists, under Sir G. Carteret, who, in 1651, was obliged to surrender to Admiral Blake. In January, 1781, a capture of the island was attempted by Baron de Rullecourt, who effected a landing during the night, and proceeding unobserved, secured a small battery of 4 guns, in which they left a company for the protection of their ships, and, in case of necessity, to cover their retreat, established themselves in the town of St Helier, and took prisoner the lieutenant-governor, whom they compelled to sign an order to the commanding officers to remain in their quarters, but, learning that this order had been given while under restraint, the officers refused obedience, and Major Pierou, the second in command, bravely attacked the invaders, and compelled them to surrender as prisoners of war. This gallant officer and his antagonist were slain in the contest. Since that period, Jersey has not been assaulted, though subjected to many alarms.

KENDAL, a ward, forming the southern part of the co. of Westmoreland. It is divided into 6 parishes, including the towns of Kendal, Ambleside, Milnthorpe, and Bowness, 28 townships, and 17 chapeltries. This ward derives its name from the river Kent, which rises within its limits. The beautiful lakes of Windermere, Grasmere, and Rydal, are situated here. Pop., in 1831, 17,237.

KENDAL,

A market-town and parish, locally situated in Kendal ward, co. of Westmoreland. It comprises the chapeltries of Crook, Greyrigg, Helsington, Kentmers, Hugil, Long Sleddale, Natland, New Hutton, Over Staveley, Old Hutton with Holmescales, which last is a township of the parish of Burton-in-Kendal, Sel-side with Whitwell, Underbarrow with Bradleyfield, and Winstor; and the townships of Docker, Kirkland, Lambrigg, Nether Grave-ship, Nether Staveley, Patton, Scathwaite-ri-gg-Hay with Hutton-in-the-Hay, Skelsmergh, Kettle-Strickland, Strickland-Roger, Whin-fell, and a portion of Fawcet Forest, in Kendal ward, and the township of Dilliker in Lonsdale ward. From numerous relics of antiquity found in this place, it evidently occupies the site of a Roman station. According to Horsley, the station of Concangium, mentioned in the Notitia Imperii, was situated near this place; while Dr Gale supposes it to have been the Brovonacis of Antoninus. Eastward from the town are the ruins of two square and two round towers, the remains of a baronial castle, which was probably raised on the site of a Roman fortress. This castle is celebrated as being the birth-place of Catherine Parr, the last queen of Henry VIII. Opposite the castle is an artificial circular mount, called Castle-law-hill. This eminence is about 30 feet in height, and is surrounded by a deep ditch and fortified rampart: It is of a more ancient date than the castle. On the summit of this mount is an obelisk, erected in 1788 at the expense of the inhabitants of Kendal, in commemoration of the Revolution in 1688. The town—which is the largest in the county—is situated in a valley on the bank of the river Ken, or Kent, from whence is derived its appellation: Kendal being a contraction of Kirkby-Kendale, or the Church in the Vale of the Ken. Pop. of this town, in 1801, 6892; in 1831, 10,015. A. P., £21,202.

Living.—The livings of Kendal are a vicarage and a perpetual curacy, in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester; the former valued at £92 5s., and in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge; the latter, not in charge, returned at £112 18s., and in the patronage of the vicar of Kendal. Church ded. to the Holy Trinity. It is a large Gothic fabric, with a low square tower, and presents in its structure a variety of styles of architecture. The interior is divided into five aisles by four rows of pillars, which support the roof. Here are several ancient monuments. The chapel—ded. to St George—stands in the centre of the town, and was erected in 1754. The building is after the modern style of architecture.

Trade, &c.—In the latter part of the 14th century, the manufacture of woollen cloth was introduced at Kendal by emigrants from the Low Countries; and laws were enacted by parliament for the regulation of this branch of industry, in the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV. The green druggets made in this place, formed, for several centuries, the common wear of the lower classes, and became celebrated under the denomination of 'Kendal green.' Before the introduction of these manufactures, the wool of this country was exported to the Netherlands. At present, the principal articles of manufacture are, cottons, linseys, druggets, coarse woollens, worsted stockings, hats, bonnets, and serges. In the neighbourhood are numerous corn and paper-mills, together with several of various descriptions for the preparation of cloth. Below the town are mills where gunpowder is manufactured. The sawing and polishing of marble—which is brought from the adjacent mountainous neighbourhood—furnishes employment for many of the inhabitants. The manufacture of combs of all descriptions, and spinning of wool, are also among the sources of commercial industry pertaining to this town. The neighbourhood abounds with limestone, of which many of the houses are built. The lands in the vicinity are rich, and in general well-cultivated, abounding in orchards, which are still increasing, and the roads in all directions are kept in good repair. Fairs are held annually for horned cattle, sheep, and pedlery, on the 22d of March, the 29th of April; and on the 8th of November for horned cattle, horses, and sheep: these are much frequented by the Yorkshire farmers and clothiers. A statute fair for hiring servants is held on the Saturday of Whitsun-week. The market, established by charter of Richard I., is held on Saturday, and is held almost exclusively for grain. A canal was opened in 1819 from the river Kent to Lancaster, which affords communication with the rivers Mersey, Dee, Ouse, Severn, Humber, Thames, &c., and by the inland navigation extending about 500 miles through most of the interior counties.

Municipal Government.—This town received a charter of incorporation in 1576 from Queen Elizabeth, afterwards extended by Charles I. under which, the municipal government is vested in a mayor, 12 aldermen, 24 capital burgesses, a recorder, town-clerk, and other officers. The mayor is chosen annually, by the mayor of the preceding year and the aldermen; the aldermen and other members of the corporation are selected in a similar manner. The two senior aldermen and the recorder are, by virtue of their office, justices within the borough. The mayor is clerk of the market, and has the appointment of two constables; and the senior aldermen act as coroners. Along with the township of Kirkland and the adjoining parts of the township of Nether Gransheip, Kendal returns one member to parliament. The electors are about 490 in number. By charter of 1684, sessions are held here quarterly for the borough, and every three weeks a court of record for the recovery of debts from 40s. to £40; likewise the adjourned sessions from Appleby, for the wards of Kendal and Lonsdale. A court baron, under the earl of Lonsdale, is held here occasionally; and one annually under the Honourable F. Greville Howard.

Public Buildings, &c.—Here are seven trading companies, each having its hall. At the east end of the town stands a house of industry, or workhouse, erected in 1771, and near it is the house of correction, built in 1786. Among the public buildings and institutions, are a theatre, assembly-rooms, natural history and philosophical societies, a mechanics' institution, and a public library. Many of the streets are narrow, but those extending towards the outskirts of the town are more spacious and elegant; the houses are in general built of hewn free-stone, roofed with blue slate, and the whole town is well lighted with gas, and tolerably paved. Here are three stone-bridges across the Kent, two of which were erected by the county, the other in 1744 by the corporation. The river abounds in salmon and trout. Races are held in August. Here are a charity school and hospital. The free grammar school was founded in 1525. Dr Shaw, the celebrated traveller, and Dr Edmund Law, bishop of Carlisle, were educated in this school. A national school, wherein 186 boys are educated, was built by subscription in 1818. The national school for girls was built by subscription in 1824; it contains about 100 children, and is supported by voluntary contributions. The Green-coat Sunday school was founded in 1813. The of industry, which the corporation of both sexes are instructed and employed, was founded in 1799, and is partly supported from the interest of two bequests, and partly by voluntary contributions. A dispensary, with a fever-house adjoining, was established in 1783: the medical establishment consists of a physician, five surgeons, and an apothecary. "The hospital, or house of lepers, near this town, ded. to St Leonard, is as ancient as the reign of Henry II. It had, 26th Hen. VIII., yearly revenues valued at £11 4s. 3d. in the whole, and £6 4s. 5d. clear; but those with the hospital itself were granted, 38th Hen. VIII., to Alan Bellingham and Alan Wilson."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Here is a savings' bank, established in 1816; it is held in the committee-room of the school of industry.—Kendal is the head of a barony, comprising the whole of the Kendal and Lonsdale wards, and was bestowed by William the Conqueror on Ivo de Talbois, who thus became its first baron. Prior to the conquest, Kendal was included in the principality of Cumberland, which was then in the possession of the crown of Scotland. John, duke of Bedford, brother of Henry V., Prince Charles, third son of James II., Prince George of Denmark, and other celebrated persons, have borne the title of earl of Kendal. George I. created Madame Schulenberg, a German lady, duchess of Kendal, but the title has been long extinct. The present earl of Pembroke has that of Baron Ross and Parr of Kendal. Dr Thomas Shaw, the celebrated oriental traveller and divine, was born about 1692 in this town; likewise John Wilson, a distinguished botanist.

KENDER-CHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Webtree, co. of Hereford. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, valued at £2 15s. 2½d.; and in the patronage of the earl of Oxford. Church ded. to St Mary. Distance from Hereford, 11 m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 72; in 1831, 75. A. P., £722.

KENEILM (St), a township and chapelry in the parish of Hales-Owen, co. of Salop. Living, a curacy subordinate to the rectory of Hagley, in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, not in charge; and the patronage with Hagley rectory. Chapel ded. to St Kenelm. It is a small ancient building, of the time of Henry I. Pop. returned with the parish.

KENFIG, a town and parish in the hundred of Newcastle, united with Pile, co. of Glamorgan. Great part of the land near the sea side is covered with sand-hills, which are continually shifting with the wind. The inhabitants have a vote for the member for the Swansea district of boroughs. Distance from Bridgend, 7 m. Pop., in 1831, 222.

KENILWORTH, a market-town and parish in the Kenilworth division of the hundred of Knightlow, called also Killingworth, co. of Warwick. This place is supposed to have derived its name from Kenelm, or Kenulph, one of its Saxon possessors. After the conquest, the manor was bestowed on Geoffrey de Clinton. "A monastery of regular canons, of the order of St Austin, built and endowed to the honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary, by Geoffrey de Clinton, chamberlain and treasurer to King Henry I., about A.D. 1122. It was at first a priory, but made an abbey before the dissolution, when its possessions were valued at £643 14s. 9d. ob. per ann. in the whole, but clear, after reprisals, £538 19s.; or £533 15s. 4d. as Dugd. Warwic. The site was granted, Henry VIII., to Sir Andrew Flamok."—Tanner's Not. Mon. The town of Kenilworth principally consists of an irregularly built street, extending for nearly a mile along the turnpike road. It is now a place of little importance; and its chief claim to notice arises from the magnificent ruins of its ancient baronial castle.

Here are several chemical works. The principal manufacture carried on here is that of horn combs. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates; and at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, two headboroughs and two constables are appointed. The market is on Wednesday; and fairs are held for cattle and pedlery on the 30th of April and the 30th of September. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, valued at £6 13s. 4d.; and in the patronage of the king. The church—ded. to St Nicholas—is an ancient building, with a square embattled tower and a spire. In the interior are several curious monuments. The Baptists, Independents, and Presbyterians, have places of worship here. Here is a free school, founded in 1724. Distance from London, 95 m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 1968; in 1831, 3097. A. P., £8,461.

The magnificent castle of Kenilworth was founded by Geoffrey de Clinton in the reign of Henry I. On the death of Geoffrey it descended to his son, from whom it was transferred to the crown, and was garrisoned by Henry II. during the rebellion of his son. In the reign of Henry III. it was used as a prison, and in 1254, the king, by letters patent, gave to Simon de Montfort, who had married Eleanor the king's sister, the castle in trust for life. Simon soon after joined the rebellion against the king, and, together with his eldest son, was killed at the great battle of Evesham, in 1265. His youngest son, Simon, escaped, and with other fugitives took shelter in the castle, where they became regular banditti. The king, determined to put an end to their excesses, marched an army against them. Simon fled, and escaped to France, but his companions held out against a six months' siege. The place was well-stored with provisions; and the tradition is, that various formidable engines of war were for the first time brought into use on this occasion, by means of which the besieged were enabled to hurl enormous stones with the most destructive force against their assailants. Some of these stones are still pointed out lying in the neighbourhood of the ruins. At length their provisions failed, a pestilence broke out, and the governor surrendered the castle to the king, who bestowed it upon his youngest son, Edmund, earl of Leicester, afterwards created earl of Lancaster.—In 1286, a grand chivalric meeting of one hundred knights of high distinction, English and foreign, and the same number of ladies, was held at Kenilworth; and at this festival, it is said, that silks were worn for the first time in England.—In the reign of Edward II. the castle again came into the hands of the crown, and the king intended to make it a place of retirement for himself; but in the rebellion which soon followed, he was taken prisoner in Wales, and brought to Kenilworth: here he was compelled to sign his abdication; and soon after was privately removed to Berkeley castle, where he was inhumanly murdered in 1327. Edward III. restored the castle to the earl of Lancaster, whose granddaughter brought it in marriage to the celebrated John of Gaunt, afterwards duke of Lancaster, who made many additions to the castle, which still retain the name of Lancaster's buildings. On his death it descended to his son, afterwards Henry IV.—During the civil wars between the houses of York and Lancaster, it was alternately taken by the partizans of the white and the red roses: and very long after their termination, Queen Elizabeth bestowed it upon her ambitious favourite, Dudley, earl of Leicester. That wealthy nobleman spared no expense in beautifying the castle, and in making many splendid additions, called after him Leicester's buildings. But the most memorable incident in the history of Kenilworth castle, is the royal entertainment given by the aspiring earl to his queen. Elizabeth visited him in state, attended by thirty-one barons, besides her ladies of the court, who, with four hundred servants, were all lodged in the castle. The festival continued for seventeen days, at an expense estimated at one thousand pounds a-day (a very large sum in those times). At the commencement of the civil wars Kenilworth was in all its glory. But it was also on the eve of its destruction. On the ascendancy of the republicans, Cromwell bestowed the property upon some of his officers, who demolished the castle, and sold such of its materials as could be removed for what they would bring. For many years after this, its bare and crumbling walls were left exposed to the depredations of all who chose to make a quarry of them, till the place was reduced to the state in which it now is. Still the ruin is an extensive and magnificent one. Mr Britton in his Architectural Antiquities, has given a ground-plan of the building, from which a good idea may be formed of what it was in its prouder days. Every thing essential to it, either as a residence or a fortress, seems to have been contained within the ample sweep of its encompassing battlements. Its south, east, and west sides were surrounded by a broad belt of water, which could also be carried round the north. Out-jutting towers of defence guarded it at every point. The interior comprehended two ample courts, named the upper and the lower ward, a large garden and a tilt-yard, surrounded with splendid galleries for the accommodation of the spectators. At the end farthest removed from the chief buildings stood the stables; near them was the water tower; and not far off, another erection, probably used as the prison of the castle. The inhabited part consisted of various suites of apartments, many of which seem to have been of the most superb description. The great hall, which was built by John of Gaunt, and the walls of which are still standing, was of the dimensions of 86 feet in length by 45 in width. The appearance of Kenilworth in its present dilapidated state is picturesque in the extreme. Much of it is covered and overhung with ivy and other clinging shrubs, intermixing their evergreen beauty with the venerable tints of the mouldering stonework. The noble moat, or lake, as it might more properly be called, in the midst of which it once stood, and which in former times used to be stored with fish and fowl, is now almost dried up. But, besides the hall already mentioned, vast portions of the pile are still standing in the same dismantled state. The walls of the hall are perforated by a series of lofty windows on each side; and spacious fire-places have been formed at both the ends. Another remarkable part of the ruin is a tall dark-coloured tower, near the centre, supposed to have been built by Geoffrey de Clinton, and to be the only portion now existing of his castle. "Of this lordly palace," says Scott, "where princes feasted, and heroes fought, now in the bloody earnest of storm and siege, and now in the games of chivalry,—where beauty dealt the prize which valour won,—all is now desolate. The bed of the lake is but a rushy swamp; and the massive ruins of the castle only show what their splendour once was, and impress on the musing visitor the transitory value of human possessions, and the happiness of those who enjoy a humble lot in virtuous contentment." On the departure of Elizabeth, the earl of Leicester made Kenilworth his occasional residence, till his death in 1538, when he bequeathed it to his brother, Ambrose, earl of Warwick, and after his death to his own son, Sir Robert Dudley; but, his legitimacy being questioned, Sir Robert quitted the kingdom in disgust; his castles and estates were seized by a decree of the court of Star-Chamber, and given to Henry, son of James I. The castle on Henry's death went into the possession of his brother, Charles I., who granted it to Cary, earl of Monmouth. On the restoration of Charles II., the estate and ruins of the castle were granted to Lawrence, Viscount Hyde of Kenilworth, second son of the celebrated lord-high-chancellor, created baron of Kenilworth, and earl of Rochester; and by the marriage of a female heiress descended from him, passed in 1752, into the possession of Thomas Villiers, Baron Hyde, son of the earl of Jersey, who was advanced in 1776 to the dignity of the earl of Clarendon; in the possession of whose son it still remains.

KENINGHAM, a hamlet in the hundred of Humbleyard, co. of Norfolk. Living, a rectory with Mulbarton. Church in ruins. Pop. returned with Mulbarton.

KENLEY, a parish in the hundred of Condover, co. of Salop. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Salop and dio. of Lichham and Coteney, of the annual value of £33, and with the patronage of Harley rectory. Pop., in 1801, was 300; in 1831, 281. A. P., £1293. Distance from Much-Wenlock, 4 m. W.N.W.

KENNARTH, a parish in the hundred of Elvet, co. of Carmarthen. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Cardigan, and dio. of St David's, rated at £4 6s. 8d., and returned at £94 16s., in the patronage of the bishop of St David's. Pop., in 1831, 1935. A. P., £2,928. Distance from Carmarthen, 12 m.

KENNARTON, a township in the parish of Old Radnor, and in the liberty of the new town of Radnor, co. of Radnor. Pop. returned with the parish. Distance from New Radnor, 2 m. N.E.

KENNEL, a hamlet in the parish of Simonburn, Northumberland.

KENNERLEY, or KENWARDLEIGH, a parish in the hundred of Crediton, co. of Devon. Living, a perpetual curacy subordinate to the vicarage of Crediton, in the archd. and dio. of Exeter, not in charge, valued in the parliamentary returns at £114, and in the patronage of the governors of the Crediton charity. Church ded. to St John the Baptist. Pop., in 1801, 94; in 1831, 110. A. P., £573. Distance from Crediton, 5 m. N. by W.

KENNET, a parish in the hundred of Staplehoe, co. of Cambridge. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, valued at £11 10s. 10d., and, in 1829, in the patronage of O. Godfrey, Esq. Church ded. to St Nicholas. Pop., in 1801, 111; in 1831, 195. A. P., £902. Distance from Newmarket, 5 m. N.N.E.

KENNET (EAST), a parish in the hundred of Selkley, co. of Wilts. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Wilts and dio. of Sarum, not in charge, valued in the parliamentary returns at £114, and in the patronage of Richard Mathews, Esq. Pop., in 1801, 102; in 1831, 103. A. P., £1763. This parish is situated near the source of the river Kennet, and is supposed by some antiquaries to occupy the site of the Roman station of Cunatio. Within this parish is situated the great tumulus, called Selbury-hill. This place is famous for a brewery of strong ale, commonly known by the appellation of Kennet ale. Distance from Marlborough, 5 m. W.S.W.

KENNET (WEST), a tything in the parish of Avebury and hundred of Selkley, co. of Wilts. Pop. returned with the parish.

KENNET (THE), a river in Wilts and Berks, which falls into the Thames at Sunning. It is noted for the excellence of its water, which is used in brewing the famous ale, known by the name of Kennet ale.

KENNINGHALL, a parish in the hundred of Guilt-Cross, co. of Norfolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, valued in the king's books at £5 17s. 1d., and in the parliamentary returns at £130, and in the patronage of the bishop of Ely. The church, ded. to St Mary, is situated upon a hill; it has a door in the Norman style, and a large square tower at the west end, with the crest of Norfolk upon the buttresses. Pop., in 1801, 1052; in 1831, 1251. A. P., £6,226. The Baptists have a meeting-house here. A weekly market was formerly held in this place, but it has now fallen into disuse. The site of an ancient castle, said to have been the residence of the kings of East Anglia, is clearly visible. This estate was granted by William the Conqueror to De Albini and his successors. A manor house was afterwards erected on the site of this palace, which was destroyed by Thomas, duke of Norfolk, who replaced it with a most splendid building facing the north-east. By the attainder of Thomas Howard, duke of Norfolk, in the time of Henry VIII, it was forfeited to the crown, and bestowed upon the Princess Mary. In the seventeenth century, this edifice was taken down, and the only remaining traces are a few bricks in the walls of some of the houses in the village, bearing the arms of Arundel and Howard. Fairs are held here for cattle and toys on the 18th of July and 30th of September. Distance from East Harling, 3 m. E. by S.

KENNINGTON, a township and chapelry partly in the parish of Radley, and partly in the parish of Sunningwell, hundred of Hormer, co. of Berks. Pop. included in the returns made from Radley and Sunningwell. Distance from Abingdon, 3½ m. N.N.E.

KENNINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Chart and Longbridge, lathe of Scray, co. of Kent. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Canterbury, valued at £12, and in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. The church, ded. to St Mary, is built after the earlier style of English architecture. Pop., in 1801, 314; in 1831, 461. A. P., £2,464. Distance from Ashford, 2 m. N.E. by N.

KENNINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Lambeth, eastern division of the hundred of Brixton, county of Surrey. The name of this place is said to be derived from the Saxon words,—Cyning, king, and Walla, palace; there having been a royal palace here prior to the conquest. Kennington is distinguished in history as the scene of a marriage feast of a Danish nobleman, at which Hardicanute, third son of Canute the Great, put an end to his life in 1041, by excessive intemperance in eating and drinking. In the reign of Edward the Confessor this place formed a distinct manor, called, in doomsday-book, the lordship of Chenintune. Henry III. is supposed to have had a palace here, which was subsequently the favourite residence of the Black Prince, and the occasional resort of Henry IV., VI., and VII., and which appears to have been pulled down when the manor was farmed out by Henry VIII. When the palace was demolished, it was superseded by the manor-house, in which Charles I. resided when prince of Wales. In the survey of 1656, mention is made of part of the ruins of the palace, consisting of a barn built of flint and stone, 180 ft. in length; and, in 1709, this barn was the receptacle of the distressed Palatine Protestants. In 1795, the ruins were pulled down, and the site, called Park-place, Kennington-cross, is now covered by modern buildings. Kennington common, an enclosed tract of ground annexed to the duchy of Cornwall, was formerly the place of execution for malefactors in the county of Surrey; and after the suppression of the rebellion in 1745, several of the insurgents here underwent the sentence of the law. On the southern side of the common a church was erected in 1822, under the authority of the commissioners for building new churches. The building, ded. to St Mark, is a spacious structure, with a Grecian Doric portico, surmounted by a tower and cupola at the west end. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester, and in the patronage of the rector of Lambeth. There is an episcopal chapel belonging to the establishment, called Carlisle chapel; and four places of worship for the Dissenters. In Kennington-lane are the licensed victuallers' schools, in which 89 boys and 89 girls receive clothing and education, instituted under the patronage of his present majesty, then duke of Clarence in 1803. A national school was erected in Kennington-oval in 1824, at an expense of £2500, in which 200 boys and 160 girls receive education: here is also an infant school for this district, established in 1828. On the south-eastern border of Kennington common, partly within the parish of Newington Butts, are several manufactories for oil of vitriol and wadding. Kennington is within the jurisdiction of a court of requests held in the borough of Southwark, for the recovery of debts under 40s.; also within the limits of the new police. Pop. returned with the parish. Distance from London, 1 to 2 m. S. S. W.

KENNYTHROPE, a township in the parish of Langton, wapentake of Buckrose, E. R. of the county of York. Pop., in 1801, 50; in 1831, 75. A. P., £470. Distance from New Malton, 4 m. S. by E.

KENOL, a hamlet in the co. of Brecknock. Pop. 235.

KENSEY (THE), a river in Cornwall, which, after a short course, falls into the Tamar.

KENSHAM, a hundred in the northern part of the co. of Somerset, lying between Bath and Bristol.

KENSINGTON, a parish and village in the Kensington division of the hundred of Ossulstone, co. of Middlesex. The village is situated on the great western road, about a mile and half from Hyde-park corner. In doomsday-book this place is called CHENISISTUN, probably from some ancient Saxon proprietor. Kensington palace was originally the seat of Sir Heneage Finch, afterwards lord-high-chancellor and earl of Nottingham, and was purchased from his son, the second earl, by William III. in 1691. It was subsequently the favourite residence of Queen Anne, George I. and George II., whose death took place here, and it has since been entirely deserted by the reigning monarchs. The late duke of Kent had apartments in this palace, which are now occupied by his duchess. The palace is a spacious, irregular building, comprising three quadrangles built of red brick, and ornamented with columns, quoins, and cornices of stone. The state-apartments consist of a suite of twelve rooms, in which are a considerable number of paintings by the most eminent masters. The gardens attached to the palace were enlarged by Queen Anne, and more considerably by Caroline, the wife of George II., who added 350 acres out of Hyde-park, laid out by Bridgman, and comprehend the scenery of Hyde-park, and a view of the serpentine river, over which a bridge of five arches was erected in 1824. Westward from the palace on the Brantford road, is Holland house, built in 1607 by Sir Walter Cope, and now the seat of Lord Holland, a large brick building, affording a good specimen of the Elizabethan style of architecture; and Camden-house erected by Baptist Hicks, created Viscount Camden in the reign of James I. Between Kensington-Gore and Knightsbridge is Kingston, or Ennismore-house, the seat of the earl of Listowel, also several stately mansions and villas on Camden-hill and Notting-hill, belonging to the nobility and gentry. This parish includes the hamlets of Brompton, Earl's-Court, Kensington-Gore, the Gravel Pits, and a part of Little Chelsea; but the royal palace and several houses on the north side of the High-street are within the parish of St Margaret, Westminster. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Middlesex and dio. of London, rated at £18 8s. 4d., and in the patronage of the bishop of London. The church, ded. to St Mary, is a large brick building, erected in 1694. In the church and in the adjoining burying ground have been interred several persons of eminence, including William Courten, Esq., a celebrated virtuoso, Dr John Torton, vicar of Kensington, and author of several theological works; Dr R. Warren, an eminent physician; Rev. Martin Madan, author of the Thelyphora, and Geo.

ment of Edward Henry Rich, earl of Warwick and Holland, who died in 1721. There are two new churches in the parish, erected under the authority of the parliamentary commissioners; one in Addison-road, ded. to St Barnabas. Living, a perpetual curacy in the patronage of the vicar; the other at Brompton, ded. to the Holy Trinity. At Baywater is a proprietary episcopal chapel, besides places of worship for Baptists and Independents, and a Roman Catholic chapel. Pop. of this parish in 1801, 8,556; in 1831, 20,902. A. P., £63,686. An extensive charity school for both sexes was here founded in 1645. The school is now conducted on the national plan, and new buildings for the use of the seminary were erected in 1818; these comprise two large school-rooms, capable of receiving 500 children, with apartments for the master and the mistress. From the same funds, aided by subscription, 100 children receive instruction at a Sunday school. Several Sunday schools are established here in connection with the dissenting congregations. Here are several large nurseries and gardens; and in different parts of the parish are some chalybeate springs, which, though formerly of repute, have now fallen into disuse. The village is well supplied with water by the West Middlesex company, who have a reservoir at Kensington-Gravel-Pits, raised 120 ft. above the level of the Thames. Kensington was the birth-place of Charles Boyle, earl of Orrery, and of Charles Pratt, earl of Camden, lord-high-chancellor, who died in 1794, at the advanced age of eighty. The family of Edwardes derive the title of Baron Kensington from this place.

KENSINGTON-GORE, a hamlet in the parish of Kensington, co. of Middlesex. Pop. returned with the parish.

KENSINGTON-GRAVEL-PITS, a hamlet in the parish of Kensington, co. of Middlesex. It was formerly nothing but gravel-pits. The pop. returned with the parish.

KENSWICK, a parish and chapelry in the lower division of the hundred of Oswaldslow, co. of Worcester. Living, a curacy subordinate to the rectory of Knightwick, in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, not in charge, and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Worcester. The chapel—now in ruins—was ded. to St John the Baptist. Distance from Worcester, 4 m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1831, 16. A. P., £580.

KENSWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Dacorum, co. of Hertford. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, valued at £150, and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of St Paul's, London. The church—ded. to St Mary—is a small Norman edifice, with a tower at the western extremity; both door-ways are built of Caen stone, and that within the tower has capitals representing birds and human heads. Here is a school where 16 children are instructed in reading, founded in 1754, and endowed by Mr and Mrs Burgis, with a rent-charge, the annual income of which is £12 10s. Distance from Market-street, 2 m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 510; in 1831, 732. A. P., £2,514.

KENT,

A maritime county of England, forming the south-eastern angle of the island. The name is derived from an old Celtic word, signifying a corner or angle. Its form is nearly quadrilateral, and it is bounded on the N. by the Thames and German ocean; on the E., and partly on the S., by the Straits of Dover and British channel; on the S. and S.W., by the co. of Sussex; and, on the W., by the co. of Surrey. Its extreme length, reckoning from Deptford to the point of the North Foreland, is about 63 m.; and its greatest breadth, from the North Foreland to Dungeness Point, is about 40 m. The whole circumference is supposed to exceed 160 m. The superficial extent of the co. has been variously stated by different calculators. That which is highest gives 12,000,000 acres; the lowest is 832,000. The measurement on which most confidence seems to be relied, is that of Mr Boys, whose estimate is 983,680, or about 1537 square miles. Pop., in 1700, 153,800; in 1750, 190,000; in 1801, 317,800; in 1821, 426,016; and, in 1831, 479,155. The poor rates amounted in 1776 to £86,832; in 1803, to £213,989; from which 41,632 poor persons obtained relief. The rates raised for the year ending March 29th, 1827, amounted to £384,120 11s., of which sum £337,832 18s. were expended for the relief of the poor.

Divisions.—This county is in the province of Canterbury, and is divided between the dio. of Canterbury and Rochester. The dio. of Canterbury extends over the northern part of the co. It forms an archd., and comprehends 11 deaneries, with 282 parishes. The dio. of Rochester is formed by the southern part of the co., and contains three deaneries; the archd. of Rochester, and the deanery of Shoreham, with 132 parishes. Of the whole number of livings, 169 are rectories, 162 vicarages, and the rest curacies. The civil divisions of the co. are, first, the great divisions, called lathes. These are five in number, and are called St Augustine, Aylesford, Scray, Shepway, and Sutton-at-Hone. The next divisions are the hundreds, of which there are 63. The lath of St Augustine contains 12 hundreds; that of Aylesford, 13; that of Scray, 17; that of Shepway, 15; that of Sutton-at-Hone, 7. There are 15 liberties, two cities, 39 market-towns, and six boroughs, four of which are cinque ports. The co. is under the jurisdiction of the home circuit, and has 168 justices of the peace, whose jurisdiction extends over all the co. except in Sandwich, Deal, Dover, New-Romney, Hythe, Folkestone, Faversham, and Tenterden, which lie within the liberties of the cinque ports. The cities of Rochester and Canterbury, the town of Maidstone, and the liberty of Romney-Marsh, have also a separate jurisdiction. The co. is divided for the convenience of the magistrates into E. and W. divisions. The quarter sessions for the eastern division are held four times yearly at Canterbury; for the western division they are held at Rochester. This co. now returns four members to parliament, viz., two for the eastern division, who are elected at Canterbury; and two for the western division, who are elected at Maidstone.

Surface.—The general aspect of Kent is very agreeable, and in some places the scenery is very fine, more particularly in the neighbourhood of Maidstone, Sittingbourne, and Tunbridge. The surface is irregular, and two chains of hills run in a direction from east to west across the co.; distant from one another about 8 miles.

Sea-coast.—The coast of Kent joins that of Sussex at the debouchement of the Rother. Proceeding along the coast from this point, the first interesting object is the embankment called Dymchurch-wall, which defends the tract called Romney-marsh from the inroads of the sea. This embankment is about 3 miles in length, rises about 18 or 20 feet above the level of the marsh, and is 20 or 30 feet wide on the top, shelving gradually out towards the sea. The lands are drained by means of sluices passing through this, and the annual expense of supporting the embankment and sluices is said to be not less than £4000. Passing by Folkestone, the shore is found to rise into the lofty chalk cliffs, especially around Dover. Still farther on the shore becomes sandy, and opposite Deal lies a vast bank called the Goodwin Sands. Between Deal and these sands is a roadstead, well known by the name of the Downs, which these sands shelter from the east winds. Pilots are always in readiness here to take vessels into the Thames. A little further on we come to the isle of Thanet, the shores of which are composed of chalk cliffs. Much new land has been formed here, so that Richborough-castle, which formerly defended the entrance of the Stour, is now considerably inland. "In the isle of Thanet," says Mr Lyell, "Bed farm, belonging to the hospital of that name, has lost 8 acres in the last 20 years, the land being chalk from 40 to 50 feet above the level of the sea. It has been computed that the average waste of the cliff, between the North Foreland and the Reculons, a distance of about 11 m., is not less than two feet per annum. The chalk cliffs on the south of Thanet, between Ramsgate and Pegwell-bay, have, on an average, lost three feet per annum for the last ten years." Turning the North Foreland, we come to the isle of Sheppey, at the entrance of the river Medway. "The isle of Sheppey," says Mr Lyell, "which is now about 6 m. long by 4 broad, is composed of London clay. The cliffs on the N., which are from 60 to 80 feet high, decay rapidly, 50 acres having been lost within the last 20 years. The church at Minster, now near the coast, is said to have been in the middle of the island 50 years ago; and it is computed, that at the present rate of destruction, the whole isle will be annihilated in about another half century. On the coast to the E. of Sheppey, stands the church of Reculon, on a sandy cliff about 20 feet high. In the reign of Henry VIII., it is said to have been nearly a mile distant from the sea. In the Gentleman's Magazine there is a view of it about the middle of last century, which still represents a considerable space as intervening between the north wall of the church-yard and the cliff. About 20 years ago, the waves came within 150 feet of the boundary of the church-yard, half of which has been since washed away. The church is now (1829) dismantled, and is in great danger; several houses in a field immediately adjoining, having been washed away." Towards the N. end of the isle of Sheppey is the roadstead called the Nore.

Rivers.—The principal rivers of this co. are the Thames and Medway. There are also the smaller rivers called the Cray, the Darent, the Ravensbourne, the Rother, and the Greater and Lesser Stours. The Thames touches the co. at Deptford, and for 40 m. below this forms the northern boundary. It receives here the waters of the Ravensbourne, Cray, and Darent. It terminates at the Nore, above the mouth of the Medway. The Medway is formed by the confluence of four streams, one of which rises in this co. It falls into the sea at Sheerness. It is navigable for large vessels as high as Chatham, and for barges as high as Tunbridge, the navigation having been improved about a century ago by artificial deepening. It abounds in fish; and at its mouth are the long celebrated oyster fisheries of Rochester. The Greater Stour rises in the eastern part of the co., and is joined by the Lesser Stour about a mile from Stourmouth. Trout and salmon are plentiful in these rivers. The lower part is navigable for coasting vessels. The Rother rises at Gravel-hill in Sussex, and merely skirts this co. for a few miles. The Darent rises in Surrey, passes Dartford, where it becomes navigable, and falls into the Thames at Long-Reach. The Ravensbourne likewise falls into the Thames, and is navigable for about a mile for small craft. The Cray is a very small river. It falls into Dartford creek about a mile from the Thames.

Canals.—The artificial navigation of Kent is extremely limited. There is a cut from Gravesend to Rochester, joining the Thames and Medway, and navigable for barges. The Grand Military canal begins near Sandgate. It extends along the coast to Hythe, and terminates, after a course of 23 m., at Clifford in Sussex. It is 6 yards in depth, and 30 yards in breadth.

Wells.—Water is obtained in some places from a great depth. At Sheerness is a well 328 feet deep, and at Queenborough is another very nearly as deep. There are numerous mineral wells in this co.; most of these are chalybeate. Of these, that of Tunbridge is the best known. It is cold, and contains sulphate of iron, carbonate of lime, muriate of soda and magnesia, and carbonic acid, oxygen and nitrogen gases. At Sydenham, near Dulwich, are some saline springs resembling those of Epsom.

Climate.—The north-easterly and south-westerly winds prevail in this county; the climate of which, from the vicinity of the sea, is rather small, but it is in great quantity here. Some tracts are very unhealthy, from effluvia arising from marshy land. This is particularly the case about the Isle of Sheppey and Romney marsh.

Soil.—Mr Boys, in his agricultural survey of the county of Kent, divides the land into eight districts, and the following description is condensed from his work, by a writer in the Edinburgh Encyclopedia:—The divisions are, "1. The Isle of Thanet.—2. The upland farms of East Kent.—3. The rich flat lands in the vicinity of Faversham, Sandwich and Deal.—4. The hop-grounds of Canterbury and Maidstone.—5. The Isle of Sheppey.—6. The upland farms of West Kent;—and 8. Romney marsh. The soil of the arable land in the Isle of Thanet is a light loam on a chalky bottom, highly fertilized by manure and judicious cultivation. The soil of the marshes is a clay mixed with sea-sand and small shells. The soils in the second district vary very much. They consist principally of chalk, loam and clay, intermixed with flint, gravel and sand. The stiff clays are principally found on the hills near Dover, and the flint soils in the valleys near that town and Maidstone. The flat lands in the vicinity of Faversham, Sandwich and Deal, consist of a rich sandy loam, in which the sand prevails in different proportions, and a stiff wet clay. The fourth district, or hop-grounds, which extend from Maidstone to Canterbury, and thence to Sandwich, consist for the most part of a rich, deep loam, with a sub-soil of a deep brick earth. The Isle of Sheppey consists, for the most part, of a deep, still, strong clay. This also forms the substratum of the marsh-land in the Isle, but it is there covered with a rich, black vegetable mould. The upland farms of West Kent consist of a great variety of soils. In this district is the range of chalk hills, which run from near Westerham to the sea coast at Folkestone. The soil on the top of these hills is a cold, flinty clay. The weald of Kent, which stretches along the south side of the county from Romney marsh to Surrey, consists principally of clay of different degrees of tenacity and fertility." Romney marsh is about 12 m. long by 8 m. broad, and contains about 44,000 acres, consisting of a fine, soft, rich loam and clay.

Minerals.—The minerals of Kent are not numerous. Chalk is the most prevalent rock. Marl is found in many places, and the flints which are found in the chalk are very numerous. The chalk and marl are extensively employed in agriculture. The flints are used by the potters of Staffordshire and other places. Many petrifications are found in various places. Ragstone abounds on the Medway, and an inferior kind of grey, turbinated marble is occasionally met with. Pyrites abounds in the rocks of the Isle of Sheppey, and is much used in making copperas, which is exported in large quantities from that district.

Estates.—The property of Kent is divided into a large number of freeholds. These are said to be about 9000 in number, without including the estates of the ecclesiastical and corporate bodies. Copyhold estates are very rare. The lands were anciently held by socage tenure. The most remarkable circumstance connected with landed property in Kent is the custom of Gavel-Kind, as it is called. The most important part of this is the inheritance of land by all sons in equal proportions, and failing of them by all daughters. The widow likewise inherits a certain share. These lands do not escheat to the king, from whom, as lord of the manor, they are held, except in cases of treason. All brothers may jointly inherit the estate of a deceased brother, and where no nearer heirs intervene, all nephews share alike. The consequence of this has been the large number of freehold estates. All lands in the county are regarded as subject to this, unless a special act of parliament can be adduced to prove the contrary.

Husbandry.—The most remarkable part of the Kentish husbandry is the curious plough which is used. It is called the turn-wrest plough, and is of prodigious size and weight, requiring 5 or 6 horses to pull it. It can force its way through any kind of land, but works very slowly. From one, to one and a half acres a-day, form a good day's work. The crops are chiefly wheat, barley, beans, oats and pease; besides which, hops, canary-seed, turnips, colewort, and radish seed, are extensively cultivated. There are few dairy farms. The hay-meadows are in general inferior. There is much excellent down-land in East Kent, on which sheep are fed. The garden-grounds are chiefly near London, and in the vicinity of large towns. Orchards are not numerous. The most extensive are near Maidstone.

Cattle.—No breed of cattle is peculiar to this county. Many are brought from Wales to be fattened on the rich pastures of the marshes. Cattle of the Sussex and Staffordshire breed are also common, especially in the weald and West Kent. The sheep of Romney are celebrated, and are in great demand for the London market. They become fat at a very early age, and have remarkably fine fleeces. The horses of Kent are strong, but in general crossed with so many breeds, that there is little peculiarity in their appearance. A small variety has been bred in the Isle of Sheppey from time immemorial.

Manufactures.—Kent has very few manufactures. Silk was formerly made extensively at Canterbury. There are extensive paper-mills at Maidstone and Dover. There are also salt and copperas works, iron-foundries, gunpowder-mills, bleaching and printing-works, and corn-mills.

Commerce.—Much corn is sent to London on the Thames. Fish of various kinds are caught on the coast and in the rivers, much of which is sought for in the London market. There are many celebrated oyster-beds, which are frequented even by vessels from Holland.

Antiquities.—It is impossible in this place to do more than merely enumerate the antiquities of this county. The Roman stations were Andrida at Newenden, Dubris at Dover, Du- robriæ at Rochester, Durolevum at Newington, Durovernum at Canterbury, Lemanica at Lynton, Novismagus at Crayford, Regulbium at Reculon, Rutupium at Richborough, and Vigniaca at Northfleet. There were in this county 7 abbeys, 20 priories, 6 nunneries, 2 commanderies, 5 colleges, 15 hospitals, besides hermitages, chantries and free chapels. There are some fine old parish churches, especially that of Barfreston, which is of Saxon architecture. The cathedrals of Canterbury and Rochester are ancient and interesting structures. There are ancient castles at Canterbury, Chilham, Dover and Rochester. At Eltham are some fine remains of a palace, and various ruined castles are scattered about the county.

KENTBURY. See KINTBURY.

KENTCHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Webtree, co. of Hereford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, rated at £10 12s. 3 $\frac{1}{4}$ d., and in the patronage of the lord-high-chancellor. Church ded. to St Mary. Here is a small school. A rail-road runs through this parish. Distance from Hereford, 13 m. S.W. by S. Pop., in 1801, 229; in 1831, 320. A. P., £2,444.

KENTFORD, a parish partly in the hundred of Lackford, and partly in that of Rishbridge, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, rated at £7 3s. 4d., and in the patronage of Trinity-hall, Cambridge. Church ded. to St Mary. Distance from Newmarket, 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 120; in 1831, 173. A. P., £620.

KENT-GREEN, a hamlet in the parish of Church-Lawton, hundred of North, copalatine of Chester.

KENTISBERE, a parish in the hundred of Hayridge, co. of Devon. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Exeter, rated at £27 18s. 11 $\frac{1}{4}$ d., and, in 1829, in the patronage of the Hon. P. C. Wyndham. Church ded. to St Mary. Distance from Columpton, 3 m. E. Pop., in 1801, 1042; in 1831, 1336. A. P., £5,354.

KENTISBURY, a parish in the hundred of Braunton, co. of Devon. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Barnstaple and dio. of Exeter, rated at £12 10s. 7 $\frac{1}{4}$ d., and in the patronage of Mr and Mrs Sweet. Here is a small rent-charge for the instruction of children. The Baptists have a meeting-house here. Distance from Barnstaple, 9 m. N.E. by N. Pop., in 1801, 241; in 1831, 340. A. P., £1,856.

KENTISH-TOWN, or CANTELOWS, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of St Pancras, Holborn division of the hundred of Ossulstone, co. of Middlesex. In doomsday-book this place is described as a manor belonging to the canons of St Paul's. The prebendary of Cantelows, now lord of the manor, derives his title from this place. A court-leet and court-baron are held here. The chapel is a neat, modern structure surmounted by a turret. It was erected in 1784 near the site of one which formerly existed in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The Independents and Wesleyan

Methodists have places of worship here. A national school for 300 children of both sexes, belonging to this place and Campden town, is supported by voluntary subscription. The village consists of several handsome attached houses, and a line of new streets extending along the road. Here is a public brewery, and the land in the vicinity is almost entirely occupied by cow-keepers and dairymen. The southern side of this village is bounded by the Paddington canal, on the banks of which are coal wharfs. Distance from London, 2 m. N. Pop. returned with the parish.

KENTMERE, a township and chapelry in the parish of Kirkby-in-Kendal, Kendal ward, co. of Westmoreland. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, of the certified value of £8 9s. This township is situated in a narrow vale, shut in by lofty fells. The river Kent, which rises a little to the northward, forms a lake here one mile in length, abounding with trout, perch, and wild ducks. Here are blue slate and limestone quarries. Bernard Gilpin, an eminent Protestant reformer, was born at this place in 1517. Distance from Kendal, 9 m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 166; in 1831, 191. A. P., £1,409.

KENTON, a parish in the hundred of Exminster, co. of Devon. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Exeter, valued at £34 13s. 4d., and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Salisbury. The church—ded. to All Saints—is a handsome edifice in the later style of English architecture, with a tower at the west end 100 feet in height, ornamented with battlements and pinnacles. In the interior are several old monuments, and some fine specimens of carving in wood. There is a chapel-of-ease at Star-cross, in this parish. This parish is situated at the confluence of the rivers Ken and Ex, the latter of which is navigable for large ships along the eastern boundary. It is the custom of this manor, that if the heirs of any of the tenants retain their tenements for three descents in succession, they may establish their claim to it as their inheritance. Kenton had at one time a weekly-market, but it has lately fallen into disuse. A court leet and court baron are held here annually by the lord of the manor. Distance from Exeter, 6 m. S.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 1639; in 1831, 2050. A. P., £8,345.

KENTON, a township, comprising East and West Kenton, in the parish of Gosford and western division of Castle ward, co. of Northumberland. This place produces coal and free-stone in abundance. Distance from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 3 m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 885; in 1831, 1204.

KENTON, a parish in the hundred of Loes, co. of Suffolk. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, valued at £8, returned at £130, and in 1829, in the patronage of Lord Henniker. Church ded. to All Saints. Distance from Framlingham, 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 243; in 1831, 261. A. P., £1,496.

KENTON, a hamlet in the parish of Har-

sex.

KENTON-MANDEVILLE, a parish in the hundred of Catsash, co. of Somerset. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells, valued at £6 13s. 9d., and, in 1829, in the patronage of the Rev. George Stone. Church ded. to St Magdalene. In this parish is dug a kind of hard blue stone, used for paving. This parish is bounded on the S.E. by the old Roman fosse-way. Distance from Somerton, 4 m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 206; in 1831, 459. A. P., £775.

KENWYN, a parish in the western division of the hundred of Powder, co. of Cornwall. Living, a vicarage with that of St Kea, in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter, valued at £16, and in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter. Church ded. to St Cuby. A considerable part of the environs of the town of Truro is comprehended in this parish. Distance from Truro, $\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 4017; in 1831, 8492. A. P., £13,296.

KENYON, a township in the parish of Winwick, hundred of West Derby, co.-palatine of Lancaster. Distance from Newton-in-Makerfield, 3 m. E. by N. Pop., in 1801, 284; in 1831, 349. A. P., £2,270.

KEPIRE, or KYPIEA, a hamlet in the parish of St Giles, southern division of Easington ward, co.-palatine of Durham. "Randal, bishop of Durham, built an hospital here, A. D. 1112, for a master and brethren, in honour of St Giles, which, by the bounty of Hugh, bishop also of Durham, and other benefactors, was so well endowed, as, 26th Henry VIII., to be rated at £186 8s. 10d. in the whole, and at £167 2s. 11d. per annum clear. It was surrendered January 14th, 36th Henry VIII., and granted that same year to Sir William Paget."—Tanner's Not. Mon.

KEPWICK, a township in the parish of Over-Stilton, N. R. of the co. of York. Distance from Thirsk, 6 m. N.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 167; in 1831, 152. A. P., £1,186.

KERDISTON, a parish in the hundred of Eynesford, co. of Norfolk. Living, a discharged rectory with that of Reephram, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, not in charge, and in the patronage with Reephram rectory. Church ded. to St Mary. Distance from Reephram, 2 m. N.W. by N. Pop., in 1801, 162; in 1831, 211.

KEREBY, a hamlet in the parish of Kirby-over-Blows, W. R. of the co. of York. Pop. returned with the parish.

KERESLEY, a hamlet in the parish of St Michael, co. of Warwick. Distance from Coventry, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 312; in 1831, 412.

KERIOG (THE), a river in Denbighshire, which falls into the Dee, 5 miles from Wrexham.

KERIOG (THE), a river in Merionethshire, which falls into the Dovy, near Llanweryng.

KERMINCHAM, a township in the parish of Swetenham, co.-palatine of Chester.

Distance from Congleton, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 179; in 1831, 174. A. P., £1,796.

KERNE, a hamlet in the parish of Brad-ing, Isle of Wight, co. of Southampton.

KERRIER, a hundred situated at the southern extremity of the co. of Cornwall, containing 18 parishes and the borough of Helstone. Pop., in 1831, 15,313.

KERRY, or CERI, a parish and hamlet in the hundred of Montgomery, co. of Montgomery. The village is pleasantly situated on a small eminence in the centre of the beautiful vale of the same name. Living, a vicarage in the dio. of St David's, rated at £17 8s. 4d., and in the patronage of the bishop of St David's. The church is a venerable structure, with a quadrangular tower, terminating in regular turrets. The living was formerly claimed by the bishop of St Asaph, but wrested from him by Giraldus Cambrensis. Here is a free school. The petty sessions for the upper division of the hundred of Montgomery are held here. Flannel and baize are the principal articles manufactured in this place. Distance from Newton, 3 m. E. by S. Pop., in 1831, 2199; A. P., £1,194.

KERSALL, a small but interesting hamlet of Broughton township, in the parish, and 3 m. N.N.W. of Manchester, co. of Lancaster, on the E. bank of the Irwell, near Prestwich. Before the dissolution a monastic cell or hermitage existed here; for it was granted, 32^o Hen. VIII., to Baldwin Willoughby. The hall is supposed to be on the site of the cell, as coffins and bones have been dug up there. The Kersall family granted the place to the monks. The Willoughbys, Kenyons, Levers, from 1640 to 1690, Stanleys of Broughton, and Byroms of Manchester, have been the successive possessors. John Byrom, M.A., poet and stenographer, was born here in 1691, and died at Manchester, Sept. 28th, 1763. Miss Byrom is the present owner of Kersall. Kersall-moor was converted into the Manchester race-course in 1730, and is still used for that purpose. These races are not unfrequently attended by 150,000 persons. The new road to Bury passes here. The banks of the Irwell are beautifully romantic at this spot, being well wooded.

KERSALL, a hamlet in the parish of Kneesall, co. of Nottingham. Kersall is in the honour of Tutbury, duchy of Lancaster. Distance from Ollerton, 5 m. S.E. Pop., in 1801, 50; in 1831, 94. A. P., £612.

KERSEY, a parish in the hundred of Cosford, co. of Suffolk. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, of the certified value of £150, returned at £60, and in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge. Church ded. to St Mary. "A priory of canons of the order of St Austin, ded. to St Mary and St Anthony, in being before 3^o Hen. IIk, but when, and by whom founded, or upon what occasion dissolved, I have not yet met with. Edmund, earl of Kent, had the advowson by the gift of King Edward III. John Holland, earl of Huntingdon, was patron in the year 1431, and Sir Henry de Grey, Lord Powis shortly after; and he, 2nd Hen. VI., gave the monastery, with all the revenues thereunto belonging, to King's college in Cambridge."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Distance from Hadleigh, 2 m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 513; in 1831, 700. A. P., £2,339.

KERSLEY, a small township in the parish of Dean, co. of Lancaster, 4 m. S.S.E. of Bolton-le-Moors, and 6½ N.W. of Manchester, on the W. bank of the Irwell. Here is an old hall; and Broadstone, the seat of Wm. Hulme, Esq., the munificent founder of several rich exhibitions at Oxford for Manchester grammar school in 1691. The cotton trade is pursued here; and on Kersley-moor there are coal mines.

KERSULL, a hamlet in the parish of Manchester, co. palatine of Lancaster. Pop. returned with the parish.

KERVENT. See CAERWENT, Monmouth.

KERSWELL, or CARESWELL-ABBOT'S, a parish in the hundred of Haytor, co. of Devon. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter, rated at £11 ls. 3d., and in the patronage of the crown. Church ded. to St Mary. "A small monastery of Clunian monks, for which reason it has been sometimes reckoned among the alien priories, but it was only a cell to Montacute in Somersetshire, a house of that order, and, as parcel of its possessions, was granted to John Etheberge, 38th Hen. VIII."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Distance from Abbot's-Newton, 1½ m. S. Pop., in 1801, 389; in 1831, 437.

KERSWELL-KING'S, a parish in the hundred of Haytor, co. of Devon. Living, a perpetual curacy, subordinate to the vicarage of St Mary-church, in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter, not in charge, and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Exeter. Church ded. to St Mary. Here is a school for the instruction of children, founded by the Rev. A. Hicks, and supported by voluntary contributions. The dissenters have two places of worship here. Distance from Abbot's-Newton, 4 m. S.E. by S. Pop., in 1801, 532; in 1831, 771. A. P., £2,746.

KESGRAVE, a parish in the hundred of Carleton, co. of Suffolk. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, not in charge, and returned at £40, endowed with £800 royal bounty, and £400 parliamentary grant, and, in 1829, in the patronage of Sir T. G. Shaw, Bart. Distance from Ipswich, 4 m. E. by N. Pop., in 1801, 73; in 1831, 101. A. P., £965.

KESSINGLAND, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Suffolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £10, and in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich. The church—ded. to St Edmund—was erected in 1694, and is a handsome building, surmounted by a lofty square steeple, containing five bells. Kessingland was formerly a place of much greater importance than it is at present, as may be seen from the ruins of its once magnificent church. At one time a weekly-market was held here, but it has now fallen into disuse. The Wesleyan Methodists have a meeting-house here. This parish is bounded on the E. by the German ocean. Distance from Lowestoft, 6 m. S.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 475; in 1831, 666. A. P., £2,419.

KESTEVEN, a division on the western side of the co. of Lincoln, bordering on Nottinghamshire.

KESTON, a parish in the hundred of Ruxley, latho of Sutton-at-Hone, co. of Kent. Living, a discharged rectory in the exempt deanery of Shoreham, rated at £6 10, and under the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. In this parish is Holwood-hill, the seat of the late Right Hon. William Pitt; and on the western side of it are the remains of an immense Roman encampment, enclosing an area of 100 acres: its form is elliptical, but approaching to a circle, and is surrounded by triple ditches, and ramparts of vast height and depth. This is supposed by some to have been a Castra castrica of the Romans; and, at different times, coins, tiles, and two stone coffins have been found. At a short distance from the outer ditch is the spring-head of the river Ravensbourne, the water of which is considered to possess excellent tonic qualities. Distance from Ipswich, 5 m. S. by E. Pop., in 1801, 475; in 1831, 391. A. P., £1,905.

KESWICK, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Crosthwaite, ward of Allerdale, below Darwent, co. of Cumberland. This town is situated on the eastern side of the vale of Keswick, on the banks of the lake Derwentwater, encompassed with vast mountains, full of mines and minerals, and watered by the rapid river Greta. At the northern extremity of the vale stands the lofty mountain of Skiddaw, rising more than 1000 yards in perpendicular height above the level of the lake; and near its base are the lakes of Bussenthwaite or Broadwater and Ellswater. The manor is now vested in the commissioners of Greenwich hospital, as part of the forfeited estates of James, third earl of Derwentwater, who, having taken part in the rebellion of 1715, was beheaded in the following year on Tower-hill. The town consists of one long street, and the houses are principally of stone, and generally well built. It appears that a customary market was held here about the beginning of the 14th century, which afterwards fell into disuse, and in 1814 a market-house was erected by the commissioners of Greenwich hospital for the transaction of public business. Here are two museums, containing specimens of most of the minerals and fossils with which this part of Cumberland abounds. The manufactures consist chiefly of woollen goods, consisting of blankets, kerseys, and swandowns; black lead pencils are also made in considerable quantities. Formerly copper mines were wrought in this neighbourhood, but were given up as unprofitable; and a vein of lead ore, which is very productive, is now worked not far from the lake of Derwentwater. On the Greta are corn-mills, and a forge for the construction of spades, scythes, and edge-tools. Fairs are held on the first Thursday of May, and every other Thursday for six weeks following, for horses and cattle, and on the 2d of August for leather and woollen yarn. The market is held on Saturday. The commissioners of the hospital hold the manor courts in May and October, when a constable is appointed for the government of the town. The parish church stands about three quarters of a mile north-westward from the town, and within the parish are five chapels-of-ease, besides two places of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists and Independents. Here is an endowed free school for the instruction of children. Greta hall, near Keswick, is the residence of Robert Southey, LL.D., the celebrated biographer and poet-laureate. The lake of Keswick or Derwentwater has already been described under the latter head. On the summit of a hill about two miles from the town, is a druidical monument, composed of stones of various sizes, some of the largest being 8 feet in height and 15 in circumference. Distance from London, 291 m. N.W. by N. Pop., in 1801, 1350; in 1831, 2159. A. P., £3,229.

KESWICK, a parish in the hundred of Humbleyard, co. of Norfolk. Living, a rectory with that of Intwood, in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £5, and, in 1829, in the patronage of T. Mushet, Esq. Church ded. to St Mary. Distance from Norwich, 3 m. S.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 64; in 1831, 120. A. P., £1,085.

KESWICK, a hamlet in the parish of Bacton. Distance from North Walsham, 5 m. N.E. by E. Pop. returned with the parish.

KETLEY, a township in the parish of Wellington, co. of Salop. A canal passes this place, communicating with that of Shropshire. Here are some considerable iron-works. Distance from Wellington, 2 m. E. Pop. returned with the parish.

KETSBY, a parish in the hundred of Wells, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. Living, a rectory with that of South Ormsby, united to the vicarage of Calceby and the rectory of Driby, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln. Distance from Spilsby, 8½ m. N.N.W. Pop. returned with the parish of South Ormsby.

KETTERING, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Huxloe, co. of Northampton. The town, which is but indifferently built, many of the houses being small and thatched, is situated on a gentle ascent, near a rivulet that runs into the Nen. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough, rated at £34 13s. 4d., and, in 1829, in the patronage of Lord Sondes. The church, ded. to St Peter and St Paul, is a handsome building in the later style of English architecture, consisting of a nave, north and south aisles, and a chancel, with a fine tower and spire at the west end. The tower consists of three stories, ornamented with double buttresses, and octagonal turrets at the angles, and the whole is surmounted by a handsome hexagonal crocheted spire, with three windows diminishing in their size towards the top: round the base of the spire is an embattled parapet connected with the angular turrets, and under that an ornamented fascia, with a small hexangular turret raised at each corner. Here are several meeting-houses for different sects of Dissenters. Here is a free school for poor children. Here are likewise a national school which is supported by voluntary contributions, and a small charity school for girls, with several other bequests for charitable purposes. The market is on Saturday, and fairs are held on the Thursday before Easter, Friday before Whit-Sunday, Thursday before old Michaelmas-day, and the Thursday before the festival of St Thomas, for horses, horned cattle and pedlery. The inhabitants are principally employed in working, combing, and spinning wool; the manufacture of shoes and weaving of silk-shag for hats, likewise affords employment to a considerable number of persons. The petty sessions for the county are held here. In 1726, some antique remains were discovered here, consisting chiefly of Roman coins of several different emperors. Dr John Gill, a celebrated Baptist divine and oriental scholar, was born at this place in 1697. Distance from London, 74 m. N.W. by N. Pop., in 1801, 3011; in 1831, 4099. A. P., £7,390.

KETTERINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Humbleyard, co. of Norfolk. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Norfolk and dio. of Norwich, rated at £6, and returned at £131, and, in 1829, in the patronage of E. Atkins, Esq. The church, ded. to St Peter, contains several handsome monuments. Distance from Wymondham, 4 m. E. by N. Pop., in 1801, 181; in 1831, 215. A. P., £1599.

KETTLEBASTON, a parish in the hundred of Cosford, co. of Suffolk. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Sudbury and dio. of Norwich, rated at £13 6s. 8d., and, in 1829, in the patronage of the Rev. Thomas Fiske. Church ded. to St Mary. Here is a small endowment, by means of which the children of a Sunday school, in this parish, are partially clothed. Distance from Bildeston, 2 m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 145; in 1831, 202. A. P., £1144.

KEW, a parish in the second division of the hundred of Kingston, co. of Surrey. The village is agreeably situated on the southern bank of the Thames, over which is a good stone bridge of seven arches, besides a land-arch on each side, erected in 1789, and which is now the property of a private individual. In a court-roll of the manor of Richmond in 1496, this place is called Kay-hough, probably from a quay on the hough, by the river side. Here is a royal palace, formerly the residence of Frederick, prince of Wales, who held the property on lease from S. Molineux, Esq. The freehold was purchased by Geo. III., who greatly improved and enlarged the gardens, and began to erect a palace in the Gothic style, eased with artificial stone, which, after remaining several years in an unfinished state, was, in 1828, taken down. The botanic garden is supposed to contain the most extensive and complete collection of exotic trees and plants in Europe. This collection has been the subject of several botanical publications, by L'Heritier de Brutelle and others, and a catalogue of the plants was published in 1789 by Mr Aiton, under the title of 'Hortus Kewensis.' The pleasure grounds are embellished with various fanciful structures in different styles of architecture. The one most in height, from the summit of which may be obtained a most extensive view of the scenery on the Thames. The old palace, called the nursery, in which most of the royal family were brought up, and Queen Caroline died, is still standing, and is occasionally visited by the royal family. Kew was formerly a hamlet of the parish of Kingston, but by act of parliament in 1770, it was constituted a distinct parish. Living, a vicarage with that of Petersham in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester, rated at £5, in the patronage of king's-college, Cambridge. The church, ded. to St Anne, is a brick structure, erected in 1714 at the expense of the inhabitants, on a piece of ground granted to the parish by Queen Anne. It was designed as a chapel-of-ease to Kingston, but was made parochial in 1770. The church was greatly enlarged by Geo. III., and his late majesty Geo. IV. erected the organ gallery, and likewise presented the parish with the organ on which his royal father had been accustomed to play. Here is a charity school founded in 1721, by Dorothy, Lady Capel, with an endowment of one-twelfth of an estate, producing £450 per annum. Here is also another seminary called the king's free school, founded and endowed in 1821, and partly supported by yearly contributions. Distance from London, 6 m. W. Pop., in 1801, 424; in 1831, 837. A. P., £2,493.

KIDDERMINSTER,

A parish in the lower division of the hundred of Halfshire, co. of Worcester. It comprises the market and corporation town of Kidderminster—which has a separate jurisdiction—the chapelry of Lower Mitton, and the hamlet of Wribbenhall. The town stands on the eastern bank of the river Stour, not far from its confluence with the Severn. In the time of William the Conqueror this place was a royal manor, and continued so till after the reign of Henry II., when it passed into private hands. The town is of an irregular form, the houses are generally well built, and the streets are tolerably paved, and well lighted with gas. Kidderminster was noted in the reign of Henry VIII. for the manufacture of broad cloths, afterwards for linsey-woolseys, friezes, and tamines, and at a subsequent period for poplins, crapes, and flowered stuffs. The manufacture of carpets now constitutes the staple trade of the town, and gives employment to upwards of 3000 people. The Scotch and flat carpets, known by the name of Kidderminster, were introduced here about 1735; and in 1745 the manufacture of Wilton and Brussels carpets was established, which latter has subsequently been brought to a high degree of perfection. The water of the Stour is said to contribute much to the celebrity of this manufacture, from its peculiar property of striking and fixing the dyes. In 1772, the number of carpet looms in the town and neighbourhood amounted to upwards of 250, and since that period the number has increased to nearly 1600. A silk manufactory was erected here in 1753, also another in imitation of the Marseilles quilting. On the banks of the Stour are several dye-houses, in connexion with the different manufactories. The Staffordshire and Worcestershire canal passes close to this town, and opens a communication with Hull, Liverpool, Manchester, Bristol, and other trading towns. The market is held on Thursday, and is principally for corn and provisions. The fairs are Palm-Monday for cattle, sheep, and pedlery; Holy Thursday, June 20th, September 4th, and November 26th, for horned cattle, horses, cheese, linen, and woollen cloths. In the reign of Edward I., members were returned to parliament for Kidderminster, but since that time the privilege fell into desuetude till restored by the reform bill. It now returns one member. The number of electors is about 500. A charter of incorporation was granted by Charles I., in the 12th year of his reign, but the charter at present in force was granted in 1827, under which, a high steward, a recorder, 12 aldermen, 25 common-councillmen, &c., are empowered to make by-laws for the regulation, government, and police of the town. The high bailiff, who is one of the quorum, acts as justice of the peace, and is annually elected by the aldermen, with the concurrence of the common-councillmen. The lord of the manor holds a court baron for the prevention of public encroachments, and a court of requests is held once in three weeks for the recovery of debts under 40s., the jurisdiction of which extends over the whole parish. The town-hall is a commodious brick building, the lower part of which is occasionally used as a prison. There is a spacious assembly-room, and a council-chamber for meetings of the corporation. The Gentleman's Magazine notices a singular custom at Kidderminster. On the election of a bailiff, the inhabitants assemble in the principal streets to throw cabbage-stalks at each other. The town-house bell gives signal for the affray. This is called 'lawless hour.' This done, the bailiff elect and corporation, in their robes, preceded by drums and fifes, visit the old and new bailiff, attended by the mob. In the meantime, the most respectable families in the neighbourhood are invited to meet and sling apples at them on their entrance. We believe the custom of distributing apples amongst the populace, on election day, is still kept up at Kidderminster. The livings are a vicarage and curacy in the archd. and dio. of Worcester, the former rated at £30 15s. 7d., and in the patronage of Lord Foley, the latter, not in charge, and in the patronage of the vicar of Kidderminster. The church—ded. to St Mary—is a venerable Gothic structure, with a square embattled tower, strengthened with buttresses and crowned with pinnacles. In the interior are several curious monuments and recumbent figures. In 1824, another episcopal place of worship was erected, under the sanction of the parliamentary commissioners, at an expense of £16,131 4s. 2d., to which £2000 was added by the inhabitants. The building is ded. to St George, and is a handsome edifice, built in the Gothic or pointed style of architecture, with a lofty and richly ornamented tower: the altar-piece is embellished with a beautiful specimen of carpet-weaving. The subject is a representation of the descent from the cross. It is to be lamented that this characteristic piece of workmanship has been much cut and damaged, but by whom, and for what motive, has not been discovered. The Independents, Unitarians, Baptists, and Wesleyan Methodists, have chapels here. At the E. end of St Mary's church, and adjoining the choir, is an ancient chapel, which has for several years been appropriated to the use of a free grammar school. By charter of Charles I., this school was made a royal foundation, and it has an endowment of lands and property. In 1795 another free school was founded here, in which 25 boys receive the rudiments of a classical education. In 1827, St George's national school was erected, partly by subscription, and partly aided by a grant from the national society, for the instruction of 250 children of both sexes. A national school for 230 boys was erected in 1817, and another for girls, originally founded as a small charity school in 1730, in which 190 children receive instruction in reading, writing, and arithmetic. Here is an infant school for 150 children; also several Sunday schools connected with the church, and others supported by dissenters. Here is a dispensary for the gratuitous supply of medicines for the poor, partly supported by voluntary contributions, and partly by the aid of several friendly societies. The building was erected in 1824. Between Stourport and Bewdley are the ruins of a hermitage and chapel, now occupied as an out-house for agricultural purposes. "King Æthilbald, A. D. 736, gave to the Earl Cyneberht lands upon the river Stour to build a monastery, which seems to have come afterwards to the church of Worcester."—Tanner's Not. Mon. Near the Severn are the remains of a small camp, supposed by Dr Nash to have been occupied by Henry IV., after the burning of the city of Worcester, in his pursuit of Owen Glendower. In this parish are several useful chalybeate springs, of which that at Sandburn is the strongest impregnated; and on Burlish common is the dropping-well, celebrated for its efficacy in cases of ophthalmia. Richard Baxter, the celebrated nonconformist divine, was, in 1610, minister of this parish. Distance from London, 126 m. N.W. by N. Pop. of the town, in 1801, 8036; in 1831, 20,865. A. P., £25,242.

KIDDINGTON (NETHER), a parish in the hundred of Wootton, co. of Oxford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, rated at £7 9s. 4½d., and in the patronage of Lord Viscount Dillon. The church—ded. to St Nicholas—is supposed to have been built about the year 1400, but the chancel bears marks of an earlier date, and probably belonged to the original structure. Here is an ancient mansion, in the garden of which is a stone font, found in the chapel at Islip, in which it is said Edward the Confessor was baptized in 1010; it is of an octangular shape, handsomely ornamented by tracery work. In Hill wood, in the vicinity, are some visible traces of a Roman encampment. The ancient road, Akeman-street, runs through this parish. The hamlet of Over-Kiddington, in the hundred of Chadlington, is included in this parish, from which it is separated by a branch of the river Isis. Distance from Neat-Eastone, 3 m. E.S.E. Pop. in 1801, 189; in 1831, 292. A. P., £1,660.

KIDDINGTON (UPPER), a division in the parish of Kiddington, hundred of Chadlington, co. of Oxford. In this division is the ruin of an ancient parochial cross, consisting of part of the shaft and base. Distance from Neat-Eastone, 3 m. S.E. by E. Pop. returned with Nether-Kiddington.

KID-HALL, a hamlet in the parish of Berwick-in-Elmet, W. R. of the co. of York. Distance from Leeds, 8 m. N.E. Pop. returned with the parish.

KIDLAND, an extra-parochial liberty in the western division of Coquetdale ward, Northumberland. Here are the remains of some ancient British entrenchments. Distance from Rothbury, 12 m. N.W. by W. Pop. in 1801, 60; in 1831, 69.

KIDLINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Wootton, co. of Oxford. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, not in charge, and the patronage annexed to the headship of Exeter college, Oxford, without institution. Church ded. to St Mary. Distance from Woodstock, 4 m. E.S.E. Pop. in 1801, 657; in 1831, 1217. A. P., £4,944.

KIDWELLY, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Kidwelly, co. of Carmarthen. It is situated on each side of the river Gwendraeth, at a short distance from the shore of Carmarthen bay, and is divided into the new and old town by the river, and united by a bridge. The old town, now in an almost ruinous state, was formerly surrounded by a strong wall, and one of its ancient gates is now converted into the present town-hall and prison. This place was formerly noted for cloth manufacture, but the chief article of traffic now consists of coals, raised at a colliery about four miles distant. In the town is an extensive foundry, and, about a mile distant, a tin-mill. The port has lately undergone considerable improvements, at the expense of Lord Cawdor. Kidwelly is within the jurisdiction of the duchy of Lancaster. It was incorporated in the reign of Henry VI., and is under the government of a mayor, recorder, 12 aldermen, and 12 common-councillors. Two courts are held by the mayor for the recovery of debts not exceeding £100. The market is held on Tuesday and Friday. Fairs are held on the 24th of May, the 22d of July, and the 29th of October, for cattle. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Carmarthen and dio. of St David's, rated at £7 10s., returned at £80, and in the patronage of the crown. The church is a handsome building, with an elevated spire and steeple. Here are two places of worship belonging to dissenters, also a good grammar school. In the old town, on an elevated spot, are the ruins of an extensive castle, said to have been erected, as likewise great part of the town, in 1189, by Rhys, prince of Wales. Distance from London, 226 m. W. Pop. in 1831, 1715. A. P., £6,189.

KIFTSGATE, a hundred on the northern side of the co. of Gloucester, between the hundred of Tewksbury and Slaughter. It contains 37 parishes, including the towns of Chipping-Camden and Winchcombe. Pop. in 1831, 15,687.

KIGBEARE, a hamlet in the parish of Oakhampton, co. of Devon. Pop. returned with the parish.

KILBOURNE, a township in the parish of Horsley, co. of Derby. Distance from Derby, 7 m. N.N.E. Pop. in 1801, 374; in 1831, 590. A. P., £1,186.

KILBURN, a hamlet in the parish of St John, Hampstead, co. of Middlesex. The village contains several good houses, occupied by genteel families, and the place has been rapidly increasing in extent and population for some years past. Colbourne stream passes through this place to Bayswater, and after supplying the Serpentine reservoir in Hyde Park, it falls into the Thames at Ranelagh. The water of Kilburn wells was at one time celebrated for its medicinal qualities. In the latter part of the reign of Henry I., a nunnery of the order of St Benedict, ded. to the Blessed Virgin Mary and St John the Baptist, was founded here on the site of a hermitage, granted by Herebert abbot, Osbert de Clara prior, and the convent of Westminster, the revenue of which, at the dissolution, amounted to £121 16s. Distance from London, 6 m. N.W. by W. Pop. returned with the parish.

KILBURN, a parish and township, partly within the liberty of Rippon, W. R., and partly in the wapentake of Birdforth, N. R. of the co. of York. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York, of the certified value of £20, returned at £65, and in the patronage of the archbishop of York. Church ded. to St Mary. Distance from Easingwold, 7 m. N. by W. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 468; in 1831, 504: of the parish, in 1831, 520. A. P., £1,45k.

KILBURN-GILL, a hamlet in the parish of Arlecdon, Cumberland.

KILBY, a parish in the hundred of Guthlaxton, co. of Leicester. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, not in charge, returned at £44, and, in 1829, in the patronage of Sir Henry Holford, Bart. Church ded. to St Mary Magdalene. Distance from Leicester, 6 m. S.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 242; in 1831, 434. A. P. £2,003.

KILDALE, a parish in the western division of the liberty of Langhaugh, N. R. of the co. of York. Living, a discharged rectory in the archd. of Cleveland and dio. of York, rated at £10 3s. 4d., returned at £150, and, in 1829, in the patronage of R. Bell Livesay, Esq. The church is an ancient building ded. to St Cuthbert. In the park of Sir Arnald de Percy, in this parish, about 1312, the friars of the Holy Cross began to build an oratory, but the place being interdicted by Archbishop Grenfield, it was left unfinished. The site now goes by the appellation of Percy Cross. Here was formerly an ancient Saxon castle. Distance from Stokesley, 6 m. E. Pop., in 1801, 201; in 1831, 188. A. P., £1,966.

KILDWICK, a parish and township in the eastern division of the wapentake of Staincliffe and Eweross, W. R. of the co. of York. It is situated on a hill on the road from Keighley to Skipton, on the banks of the river Aire. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of the W. R. and dio. of York, rated at £10 8s. 1½d., and in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford. The church—ded. to St Andrew—is chiefly built in the late style of English architecture. In the interior is a handsome recumbent statue of Sir Robert de Seeton. Distance from Skipton, 4 m. S.S.E. Pop., in 1801, 209; in 1831, 190. A. P., £1,117.

KILGWRRWG, a parish in the upper division of the hundred of Ragland, co. of Monmouth. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Llandaff, of the certified value of 14s., returned at £62, endowed with £1000, and in the patronage of the archdeacon of Llandaff. Distance from Usk, 6 m. E.S.E.

KILHAM, a township in the parish of Kirk-Newton, Northumberland. Distance from Woulter, 7½ m. N.W. by W. Pop., 240.

KILHAM, a parish, partly in the liberty of St Peter of York, and partly in the wapentake of Dickering, E. R. of the co. of York. Living, a discharged vicarage in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the dean of York, rated at £6 13s. 4d., returned at £106 18s. 4d. Church ded. to All Saints. The town consists of one street, extending from E. to W. nearly one mile and a quarter. It had anciently a market, but from its vicinity to Great-Driffield, it has now fallen into disuse. Fairs are held on August 21st and November 12th for cattle. Here is a free school founded in the 9th of Charles I. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have meeting-houses here. Within the parish is a good mineral spring, also a branch of the river Hull has its source in this place. At Hempit-hole is a remarkable spring, called the Vipsey or Gipsey, which, after the wet season, issues with such violence from the ground, as to form an arch sufficiently elevated for a man on horseback to ride beneath it. Pop., in 1801, 588; in 1831, 1042. A. P., £6,961.

KILLIAU-AYRON, a parish in the hundred of Ilar, co. of Cardigan. Living, a rectory, rated at £5, and in the patronage of the bishop of St David's. Distance from Lampeter, 8 m. N.W. Pop., in 1831, 320.

KILKEN. See CH-CEN.

KILKHAMPTON, a parish in the hundred of Stratton, co. of Cornwall. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Cornwall and dio. of Exeter, rated at £26 3s. 11½d.; and, in 1829, in the patronage of Lord Cartaret. The church—ded. to St James—is said to have been founded by one of the descendants of Rollo, first duke of Normandy, who came over with William the Conqueror. The building is remarkable for the singular richness of its architecture, part of it exhibiting a beautiful specimen of the Norman style, and other portions being of a much later date. It consists of three aisles, divided by slender pillars, supporting obtuse pointed arches, and contains an enriched pulpit, a very ancient font, and several handsome monuments, amongst which is one to the memory of Sir Beville Grenville, who was slain in the parliamentary war at the battle of Lansdown, July 5th, 1643. Here was formerly a market. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday, and on August 28th, for cattle. Distance from Stratton, 4 m. N. by E. Pop., in 1801, 808; in 1831, 1126. A. P., £3,959.

KILLAMARSH, a parish in the hundred of Scarsdale, co. of Derby. Living, a perpetual curacy, subordinate to the rectory of Eckington, in the archd. of Derby and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, not in charge, and the patronage with Eckington rectory. Church ded. to St Giles. Here is an endowment of £22, partly the bequest of Robert Turle in 1720, which is dedicated to the instruction of 25 children. The Chesterfield canal passes through this parish. Distance from Chesterfield, 9½ m. N.E. Pop., in 1801, 576; in 1831, 774. A. P., £2,867.

KILLARBY, a hamlet in the parish of Hethington, co. of Durham.

KILLCOT, a joint-tything with Bouldson, in the parish of Newent, co. of Gloucester.

KILLERBY, a township in the parish of Heighington, co.-palatine of Durham. Distance from Darlington, 7 m. N.W. Pop., in 1831, 95. A. P., £734.

KILLERBY, or KILLWARDBY, a township in the parish of Catterick, N. R. of the co. of York. Distance from Catterick, 2 m. S.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 56; in 1831, 62.

KILLESBY, a parish in the hundred of Fawsley, co. of Northampton. Livings, a rectory and a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Northampton and dio. of Peterborough; the former rated at £14, returned at £143 11s., and in the patronage of the prebend of Kilshy in Lincoln cathedral; the latter rated at £7, and in the patronage of the rector. Church ded. to St Faith. Distance from Daventry, 6 m. N. by W. Pop., in 1801, 703; in 1831, 690. A. P., £3,534.

KILLINGHALL, a township in the parish of Ripley, lower division of the wapentake of Claro, W. R. of the co. of York. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here. Distance from Knaresborough, 4½ m. W. by N. Pop., in 1801, 462; in 1831, 545. A. P., £3,262.

KILLINGHOLME (North and South), a parish in the eastern division of the wapentake of Yarborough, parts of Lindsey, co. of Lincoln. Living, a discharged vicarage with that of Harborough, in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £7 18s. 4d., returned at £132 4s. 4d., and in the patronage of Lord Yarborough. Church ded. to St Dennis. The Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here. Distance from Great Grimsby, 9½ m. N.W. Pop. of North Killingholme, in 1801, 118; in 1831, 142. A. P., £1,808. That of South Killingholme, in 1801, 225; in 1831, 338. A. P., £1,719.

KILLINGTON, a chapelry in the parish of Kirkby-Lonsdale, Lonsdale ward, Westmoreland. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, rated at £8 10s., returned at £87; and in the patronage of the vicar of Kirkby-Lonsdale. Here is a school for 16 children, endowed with £7 per annum. The school-room was built by voluntary contributions. Here is Killington-hall, formerly the residence of the Pickeringes; it is an ancient tower building, and is now occupied as a farm-house. Distance from Kirkby-Lonsdale, 8 m. N. Pop., in 1801, 314; in 1831, 302. A. P., £2,996.

KILLINGWOLD GROVE, a hamlet in the parish of Bishop's-Burton, Hunsley-Beacon division of the wapentake of Harthill, E. R. of the co. of York. Before the year 1169, here was an old hospital chiefly for poor women, dedicated to St Mary Magdalene, and rated at £12 3s. 4d. per annum. Pop. returned with the parish.

KILLINGWORTH, a township in the parish of Long Benton, Northumberland. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here. The Newcastle races were held on Killingworth-moor till 1790, when it was inclosed for cultivation. Coal is obtained in this place. Distance from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 6 m. N.E. by N. Pop. returned with the parish.

KILLYARON, or CILLAERON, a parish in the hundred of Lower Har, co. of Cardigan, North Wales. Living, a discharged rectory in the dio. of St David's, rated at £5. Church ded. to St Michael. Pop., in 1801, 248; in 1831, 314. A. P., £585.

KILLMUN-BRIDGE, a hamlet in the parish of Charlewood, co. of Surrey.

KILLEPECK, a parish in the upper division of the hundred of Wormelow, co. of Hereford. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, rated at £4 11s. 8d., and in the patronage of the bishop of Gloucester. Church ded. to St Mary and St David. The church was given by Hugh Fitzwilliam, son of the Conqueror, A.D. 1134, to the abbey of St Peter at Gloucester, and became a cell of Benedictines, subordinate to that monastery till its suppression. There was formerly an ancient castle belonging to the Kilpers—the descendants of Hugh Fitzwilliam—but about the time of Edward I. it became a ruin. Distance from Hereford, 9 m. S.W. Pop., in 1801, 279; in 1831, 285. A. P., £1,397.

KILMERSDON, a hundred on the eastern side of the co. of Somerset, containing 10 parishes. Pop., 6629.

KILMERSDON, a parish in the hundred of Kilmerston, co. of Somerset. Living, a discharged vicarage, with the perpetual curacies of Ashwick and Coleford, in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £6 18s. 6½d., and in the patronage of the lord-high-chancellor. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Here is a charity school, with an endowment of £120. The dissenters have three places of worship here. Distance from Frome, 6 m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 1721; in 1831, 2129. A. P., £4,919.

KILMESTON, a parish in the hundred of Fawley, Fawley division of the co. of Southampton. Living, a perpetual curacy, in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the rector of Cheriton, not in charge, and in the dio. of Exeter. Here is a small endowment for the instruction of eight poor children. Kilmeston is within the jurisdiction of the Cheyney court, held at Winchester. Distance from New Alresford, 3 m. S. Pop., in 1801, 153; in 1831, 255. A. P., £1,841.

KILMINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Axminster, co. of Devon. Living, a perpetual curacy subordinate to the rectory of Axminster, in the archd. and dio. of Exeter, not in charge, and the patronage with Axminster rectory. Church ded. to St Giles. Kilming-ton has the privilege of sending two boys to Axminster free school. The river Axe runs through this parish. A fair is held on the first Wednesday of September for horses and cattle. Distance from Axminster, 2 m. W. Pop., in 1801, 441; in 1831, 540. A. P., £3,293.

KILMINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Norton-Ferris, co. of Somerset. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Wells and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £21 9s. 4½d.; and, in 1529, in the patronage of the earl of Hereford. Church ded. to St Mary. At a short distance from the church is a small entrenchment, supposed to have been the site of a Danish camp: and on the south-western extremity of the parish is a stately tower, 155 feet in height, with an inscription in commemoration of Alfred the Great, and his victory, A.D. 879, on this spot, over the Danish invaders. It was erected in 1772, at the expense of Henry Hoare, Esq. of Stourhead. Distance from Burton, $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. E. by N. Pop., in 1801, 504; in 1831, 580. A. P., £1,841.

KILNSAY, or KILNSEY, a hamlet in the parish of Barnsall, eastern division of the wapentake of Staincliffe and Eweross, west side of the co. of York. Here is Kilnsay-cragg, an extensive range of limestone rock, 165 feet in height. Distance from Settle, 11 m. E.N.E. Pop. returned with Conistone.

KILNSEA, a parish in the southern division of the wapentake of Holderness, E. R. of the co. of York. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of the E. R. and dio. of York, rated at £6 8s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., returned at £98 5s.; and, in 1829, in the patronage of L. Thompson, Esq. Church ded. to St Helen. It has been suffered to fall to ruin; and from its situation near the brink of the cliff, it will probably be ultimately entirely swept away by the ocean, which has been making progressive encroachments on this coast for several years; indeed, the nave and chancel have already been engulfed in the ocean; a considerable part of the burying-ground has also disappeared. Here is the promontory of SPURNHEAD, or SPURN-POINT, the most southern point of Holderness. It contains two lighthouses—which are private property,—a few cottages, and a station for a life-boat. Mr Smeaton, the engineer of the Spurn-point lighthouses, says in his report, “It appears that this coast, from Flamborough-head, or at least from Bridlington, to the Spurn-point, trending S.S.W. (true merid.) and the tide of flood of the German ocean setting strongly southward, will cause these flood-tides, when agitated by winds from N.N.W. to N.E. to bite very hard upon this stretch of coast, and the sand and matter dislodged to be driven towards the south, forming, at the tail of the land, the appendage called the Spurn-point.” Mr Smeaton adds, “Doubtless the matter so brought would in time block up the Humber, were it not for the powerful re-flow of the tide of that river, aided by the fresh water from the higher country. The Spurn-point being therefore the effect of a struggle between the sea-tide of the German ocean, and the re-flow of the Humber, we are not to wonder if the powerful effort of the sea by degrees drive the channel of the Humber southward, towards the Lincolnshire coast, and thereby the Spurn-point lengthen towards the south, and be also in a state of travel westward.” He seemed to think that, in Camden’s time, Spurn-head was a sharp head of land, that did not extend far from Kilnsea; and that when it was drawn out in length, and to a sharper point, a lighthouse was erected upon it, and it took the name of Spurn-point. Mr Smeaton gives a plan of the Spurn-point, in the year 1786, which includes about 98 acres of ground. Several towns formerly stood on this coast, but a precise account of them cannot now be obtained, they having long been swallowed up by the sea. The celebrated port of Ravenspur was situated near Spurnhead, but it has likewise shared the same fate. Distance from Hull, 26 m. E.S.E. Pop., in 1801, with that of Spurnhead, 98; in 1831, 158. A. P., £644.

KILNWICK, a parish and township in the Bainton-Beacon division of the wapentake of Harthill, E. R. of the co. of York. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of the E. R. and dio. of York, not in charge, returned at £100; and, in 1829, in the patronage of Charles Grimstone, Esq. Church ded. to All Saints. Distance from Great Driffield, 6 m. S.S.W. Pop. of the township, in 1801, 199; in 1831, 217. A. P., £2,577. Pop. of the parish, in 1831, 581.

KILNWICK-PERCY, or KILNWICK-ON-THE-WOLDS, a parish in the Wilton-Beacon division of the wapentake of Harthill, E. R. of the co. of York. Living, a discharged vicarage, in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the dean and chapter of York, rated at £4 16s. 3d. Church ded. to St Helen. Distance from Pocklington, 2 m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 43; in 1831, 49. A. P., £1,803.

KILOE, a parish in the hundred of Williton and Freemanors, co. of Somerset. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Taunton and dio. of Bath and Wells, rated at £9 16s. 8d., and the patronage with Strington rectory. Church ded. to St Mary. Church ded. to St Peter. In the church-yard are the ruins of a chapel, which formerly existed in the time of Henry III. The Wesleyan Methodists have a place of worship here. Here is Kimberley-hall, formerly the property of the family of Fastolf; but in the reign of Henry IV. it came into the possession of Sir John Wodehouse, who pulled it down and erected a noble mansion on its site. In the present seat are preserved the fragments of a large sword and poniard, formerly used by Sir John Wodehouse at the battle of Agincourt. Distance from Wymondham, 3½ m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 136; in 1831, 138. A. P., £2,391.

KIMBERLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Greasley, co. of Nottingham. Distance from Nottingham, 7 m. Pop. returned with the parish.

KIMBERWORTH, a township in the parish of Rotherham, W. R. of the co. of York. Here is a school with an endowment of £8 per annum, for which eight poor children are instructed. The Independents and Wesleyan Methodists have places of worship here. In the neighbourhood is a handsome building, called Thundercliffe-Grange. Distance from Rotherham, 2 m. W. by N. Pop., in 1801, 3326; in 1831, 4031. A. P., £10,770.

KIMBLE (GREAT), a parish in the hundred of Aylesbury, co. of Buckingham. This place is said to derive its name from Cunobelin, or Cymbeline, the British king, whose sons here bravely opposed the progress of the Romans. In the vicinity are the remains of several fortifications and entrenchments; and on a circular mount are vestiges of a castle called Belinesbury, where it is said Cunobelin resided. Living, a discharged vicarage annexed to the rectory of Great Hampden, in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £6 10s. 5d., and in the patronage of the earl of Buckingham. Church ded. to St Nicholas. Distance from Wendover, 3 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 316; in 1831, 436. A. P., £2,544.

KIMBLE (LITTLE), a parish in the hundred of Aylesbury, co. of Buckingham. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Buckingham and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £6 2s. 11d., and, in 1829, in the patronage of the Rev. S. T. Chapman. Church ded. to All Saints. Distance from Wendover, 3 m. W. by S. Pop., in 1801, 142; in 1831, 176. A. P., £941.

KIMBLEWORTH, formerly a parish in the western division of Chester ward, co.-palatine of Durham. Living, a discharged rectory with the curacy of Witton-Gilbert, in the archd. and dio. of Durham, rated at £3 6s. 8d., endowed with Acacia, and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham. It is a sinecure—the church having long since fallen to decay—and the place is now considered as an extra-parochial liberty. Distance from Durham, 3 m. N. by W. Pop., in 1801, 22; in 1831, 36. A. P., £690.

KIMBLEWICK, a hamlet in the parish of Great-Kimble, co. of Buckingham.

KIMBOLTON, a parish in the hundred of Wolphy, co. of Hereford. Living, a perpetual curacy, subordinate to the vicarage of Elye, in the archd. and dio. of Hereford, rated at £4 6s. 8d., returned at £90, and in the patronage of the bishop of Hereford. Church ded. to St James. Distance from Leominster, 3 m. N.E. by E. Pop., in 1801, 504; in 1831, 719. A. P., £4,293.

KIMBOLTON, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Leightonstone, co. of Huntingdon. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £5, returned at £137 14s. 9d., and, in 1829, in the patronage of the duke of Manchester. The church—ded. to St Andrew—is surmounted by a lofty spire, and contains several monuments to the Montague family. Here are several places of worship belonging to the dissenters. The inhabitants of this place are chiefly employed in agriculture. A court leet and court baron are held under the duke of Manchester, who is lord of the manor. The market is on Friday; and fairs are held on the Friday in Easter week for pedlery and sheep, and on the 11th of December for cattle and hogs. Here is an endowed grammar school. In this town is Kimbolton-castle, the magnificent seat of the duke of Manchester, in which Catherine of Arragon resided subsequently to her divorce, and where she also died. It is an ancient quadrangular building, situate in a spacious park: the interior is superbly fitted up, and contains a fine collection of paintings. In this parish are the remains of Stonely priory, a convent of canons of the order of St Augustine, the revenue of which, at the dissolution, was valued at £62 12s. 3d. Kimbolton gives the title of baron to the duke of Manchester. Distance from London, 63 m. N.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 1266; in 1831, 1584. A. P., £6,637.

KIMCOTE, a parish in the hundred of Guthlaxton, co. of Leicester. Living, a rectory in the archd. of Leicester and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £20 16s. 3d., and, in 1829, in the patronage of Lord Willoughby de Broke. Church ded. to All Saints. Distance from Lutterworth, 3½ m. E.N.E. Pop., in 1801, 498; in 1831, 490. A. P., £4,523.

KIMMERIDGE or KOMMERIDGE, a parish in the hundred of Haslur, Blandford division of the co. of Dorset. Living, a donative, in the patronage of G. Clavell, Esq. The southern part of this parish is bounded by Botteridge-pool or Kimmeridge-bay, and the eastern is defended by two high cliffs, on which is placed a battery of two pieces of canon. Here was formerly a pier, but in 1745 it was demolished by a great storm. In the vicinity are several alum, salt, and glass-works. Copperas stones are found on the shore in great abundance; and in the cliff of this and of the neighbouring parishes, is found a sort of coal of a bituminous nature, which is sold to the poor at a moderate rate. Distance from Corfe-castle, 4½ m. S.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 115; in 1831, 124. A. P., £1,419.

KIMMERIDGE, a hamlet in the parish of Kimmeridge, co. of Dorset.

KIMMERSTONE, a township in the parish of Ford, Northumberland. The river Till passes near this place. Distance from Wooler, 5½ m. N.N.W. Pop. returned with the parish.

KIMPTON, a parish in the hundred of Hitchin and Pilton, co. of Hertford. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Huntingdon and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £12, and, in 1829, in the patronage of Lord Dacre. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Distance from Welwyn, 4 m. N. by W. Pop., in 1801, 614; in 1831, 911. A. P., £4,501.

Pop., in 1801, 292; in 1831, 383. A. P., £2,167.

KINDER, a hamlet in the parish of Glossop, co. of Derby. Distance from Chapel-le-Frith, 4½ m. N. Pop. returned with the parish.

KINDERTON, a joint township with Hulme, in the parish of Middlewich, hundred of Norwich, co. palatine of Chester. This township is generally believed to be the Condote of the Romans. It gave title to the ancient family of Venables, now represented by Lord Vernon of Kinderton, whose ancestors held possessions here in the time of the Conqueror. Till the end of the 16th century the barons of Kinderton exercised the power of inflicting capital punishment for crimes committed within the barony. Distance from Middlewich, 1½ m. E. Pop., in 1801, with Hulme, 404; in 1831, 493. A. P., £3,416.

KINETON, or KINGTON, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Kington, co. of Warwick. This place, which gives name to the hundred, is so called from the manor having been a royal residence in the time of Edward the Confessor. The more ancient name of Kineton is supposed by Camden to have been obtained, from its having been at a very early period a considerable market for black cattle or kine: by this name it was granted by Henry I. to the canons of Kenilworth, and coming afterwards into the possession of Milo de Kington, it was taken from him and restored to the monks by Stephen. On a spot called Castle-hill, about a quarter of a mile westward of the town, there formerly existed a castle, in which it is said King John occasionally held his court; no vestiges of the building remain, and the site is planted with trees. At a short distance is a spring still called King John's Well. The memorable battle of Edgehill was fought near this town, October 3d, 1642. Living, a discharged vicarage in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, rated at £8 6s. 8d., and in the patronage of the lord of the manor. The church—which is ded. to St Peter—presents a specimen of the early style of English and Norman architecture. The town is irregularly built, and situated on the banks of a stream which falls into the Avon. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture. The market, which has lately fallen into disuse, is on Tuesday; and fairs are held for seed and corn on the 25th of January, and the 18th of October for cattle and cheese. A court leet is held in October by the lord of the manor, when a constable and head-borough are annually appointed. Here is a national school, supported by subscription, in which 70 children of both sexes receive instruction. Lord Willoughby de Broke, the lord of the manor, has a noble mansion about a mile and a half from the town. Distance from London, 83 m. N.W. by W. Pop., in 1801, 779; in 1831, 1102. A. P., £3,986.

KINETON-PARVA, a hamlet in the above parish.

KINFARE, or KINVER, a parish in the southern division of the hundred of Seisdon, co. of Stafford. Living, a perpetual curacy in the archd. of Stafford and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, not in charge, returned at £120, and in the patronage of certain trustees. Church ded. to St Peter. Here is a free grammar school, of ancient and obscure foundation. The Stourbridge, Worcestershire, and Staffordshire canals, form a junction in this parish. In the vicinity is an ancient fortification, forming a parallelogram three hundred yards long, by two hundred in breadth. Pop., in 1801, 1655; in 1831, 1831. A. P., £10,063.

KINGCOMBE, a tything in the parish of Toller-Porcorum, co. of Dorset. Pop. returned with the parish.

KINGCOMBE, or NETHER-KENTCOMBE, a hamlet in the parish of Toller-Porcorum, co. of Dorset.

KINGERBY, a parish in the western division of the wapentake of Walshcroft, parts of Lindsey, county of Lincoln. Living, a vicarage in the archd. and dio. of Lincoln, rated at £5, returned at £105, and in the patronage of the university of Cambridge. Church ded. to St Peter. Distance from Market-Raisen, 5½ m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 30; in 1831, 95. A. P., £2,163.

KINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Chadlington, co. of Oxford. Living, a rectory in the archd. and dio. of Oxford, rated at £17 11s. 8d., and in the patronage of Mrs Foley. Church ded. to St Andrew. This parish is bounded on the west by the river Evenlode, which separates it from Gloucestershire. Distance from Chipping-Norton, 4 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 428; in 1831, 504. A. P., £3,140.

KINGHAMFORD, a hundred situated at the eastern division of the co. of Kent, comprising the centre of the lathe of St Augustin, and containing 4 parishes. Pop. 1669.

KINGMOOR, an extra-parochial liberty in Eskdale ward, co. of Cumberland. Here is a school with a small endowment. Distance from Carlisle, 2 m. N.W. by N. Pop., in 1801, 103; in 1831, 426. A. P., £1140.

KINGSBRIDGE, a hundred in the northern part of the co. of Wilts, containing 11 parishes, including the borough of Wotton-Basset. Pop., in 1831, 9863.

KINGSBRIDGE, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Stanborough, co. of Devon. This place is situated on an inlet of the English channel, called Salcombe-haven, and consists principally of one long street. According to Risdon, the name is derived from a bridge which separates it from the town of Dodbrook. The principal articles of trade in this place consist of malt and leather, especially the former. Formerly the woollen manufacture was carried on to a great extent; but it is now inconsiderable. The market is on Saturday, and a fair is held on the 20th of July for horned cattle, cloth, and shoes. The town is under the jurisdiction of the county-magistrates, and a court-leet is held at Michaelmas by the lord of the manor, at which period a portreeve or chief officer is annually appointed. Living, a discharged vicarage with that of Church-Stowe, in the archd. of Totness and dio. of Exeter, not in charge, and in the patronage of the crown. The church, founded about 1330, is ded. to St Edmund. The Dissenters have several places of worship here. Here is a free school founded in 1689. Distance from London, 208 m. W.S.W. Pop., in 1801, 1117; in 1831, 1586. A. P., £2,431.

KINGSBURY, a hundred on the southwestern side of the co. of Somerset, containing 11 parishes, including the towns of Chard, Wellington, and Wiveliscombe. Pop., in 1831, 19,962.

KINGSBURY, a parish in the hundred of Gore, co. of Middlesex. Living, a perpetual curacy and peculiar of St Paul's, not in charge, returned at £45, and in the patronage of the dean and chapter of St Paul's. The church, ded. to St Andrew, is principally in the later style of English architecture, and is said to occupy the site of a Roman encampment. Distance from London, 8½ m. N.W. Pop., in 1801, 209; in 1831, 463. A. P., £5,464.

KINGSBURY, a parish in the Tamworth division of the hundred of Hemlingford, co. of Warwick. In the time of the Saxon heptarchy, this place was a seat of the Mercian kings. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Coventry and dio. of Lichfield and Coventry, rated at £8 10s., and in the patronage of the lord-chancellor. Church ded. to St Peter and St Paul. Distance from Colehill, 6 m. N. by E. Pop., in 1801, 1111; in 1831, 1314. A. P., £5,456.

KINGSBURY-EPISCOPI, a parish in the hundred of Kingsbury, co. of Somerset. Living, a vicarage in the dio. of Bath and Wells, in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the chancellor of Wells, rated at £17

The church, ded. to St Michael, is a lofty structure, built in the reign of Edward I., by Edward Lord Mortimer, whose widow obtained a grant for a market and fair. The former has been long disused, but the latter is still held on the 10th of October for horses, horned cattle, hops, cheese and butter. Here is a free school. It is said that formerly Kingsland had a castle, in which was the burial place of King Merwald. In West Field in this parish is a pedestal, in commemoration of the celebrated battle of Mortimer's-cross, fought in 1461. Distance from Leominster, 4½ m. W.N.W. Pop., in 1801, 948; in 1831, 1074. A. P., £6,703.

KINGSLAND, a hamlet in the parish of Hackney, Tower division of the hundred of Ossulstone, co. of Middlesex. It consists principally of irregular ranges of buildings, extending a considerable distance along the high road from London to Tottenham and Ware. The Regent's canal passes through this hamlet, on the banks of which are wharfs for coal, timber, and other articles of commerce. Here are an iron-foundry and several manufactories for floor-cloth. The Independents have several places of worship here. An ancient hospital, or house of lepers, existed here in 1437, endowed with a rent-charge by John Pope, a citizen of London. It afterwards became annexed to St Bartholomew's in London, and was used as a kind of out-ward to that institution. In 1761, the patients were removed from Kingsland, and the ground was let on a building-lease, except a small chapel in the Gothic style of architecture, which was suffered to stand for the accommodation of the inhabitants of the hamlet. The chaplain is appointed by the governors of the hospital. Distance from London, 1 m. N.E. Pop. returned with the parish.

KINGSTON-UPON-THAMES, a market town and parish in the first division of the hundred of Kingston, co. of Surrey, but under a separate jurisdiction. Under the Anglo-Saxons this was a place of great importance, and is said to have derived its name from having been held in royal demesne, and from being the place in which many of the Saxon monarchs were crowned. It is said to have been originally called Moreford, from a ford over the Thames; and from the discovery of coins, urns, and other antique remains, Dr Gale supposes it to have been the Tamesa of the geographer of Ravenna. In 838 a council was held at Kingston by Egbert, at which that prince was present, together with most of the dignitaries of the Anglo-Saxon church. During the civil war under Charles I., a skirmish took place near Kingston, in which Lord Francis Villiers, brother of the duke of Buckingham, was killed on the side of the royalists, and the inhabitants of this town suffered severely for their attachment to the interest of the king.

The town is situated on the southern bank of the Thames, over which was a very ancient wooden-bridge, leading to Hampton in Middlesex, mentioned in a record of the 8th of Henry III., and consequently supposed to have been founded—with the exception of old London bridge—at an earlier period than any other on the river: recently this has been replaced by a handsome structure, consisting of five arches, erected at an expense of £40,000, advanced as a loan by government. The trade of this place is principally in malt, but no particular manufacture is carried on here. The market-day is Saturday; and fairs are held on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, in Whitsun-week, for horses and toys; August 2d, and the following day, for horses; and November 12th, and seven following days, for horses, cattle, sheep, and toys.

The first charter of incorporation was granted by King John in 1199, which was confirmed and extended by his successors; the last was by James II. in 1685, but in October 1688, this charter was annulled, and the town is now governed under that of Charles I., by a corporation consisting of 2 bailiffs, a high-steward, a recorder, and a council of 15, assisted by a town-clerk, 2 coroners, and 4 sergeants-at-mace. The bailiffs and the recorder are justices of the peace within the town and liberties, and have the power to hold sessions for the trial of all offenders not accused of capital crimes. Members were returned to parliament for Kingston, from the 4th of Edward II. till the 47th of Edward III., since which it has made no return. The petty-sessions are held here, as well as the Lent assizes for the county. A court for the hundred of ancient demesne is held every third Saturday before the bailiffs, and a court-leet and court-baron are held on the Tuesday in Whitsun-week. The town-hall, standing in the market-place, was first erected in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and partly rebuilt in that of James I., when the windows were ornamented with stained glass, representing the arms of James and the armorial bearings of several of the Saxon kings. The Lent assizes for the county were formerly held in this hall, but they are now transferred to a plain brick-building, erected within these few years. The town-gaol is a small edifice, erected in 1829.

The living is a discharged vicarage, in the archd. of Surrey and dio. of Winchester, rated at £20 6s. 3d., and in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge. The church—ded. to All Saints—is an ancient cruciform structure, the work of different periods, in the decorated style of English architecture, with a square tower rising between the nave and chancel. The dissenters have several places of worship here; and there is a free grammar school for 30 boys, founded in 1561; also a national school, in which 260 boys and 150 girls are instructed, and for which school-rooms were erected in 1819. There are numerous charitable bequests for the relief of the indigent poor, besides a dispensary supported by voluntary contributions. Distance from London, 10 m. S.W.

Pop. in 1801, 3793; in 1831 7257. A. P., £18,853.

KINGSTON-UPON-HULL, COMMONLY CALLED HULL,

A sea-port, borough, and county of itself, situated on the great inlet of the Humber, E. R. of the co. of York, comprising within the borough the parishes of St Mary and the Holy Trinity; and in the county of the town, the parishes of Kirk-Ella, North Ferriby, Hessle, and the extra-parochial district of Garrison-Side.

History.—This place has no mention in Doomsday-book, so that it is probable, at the period of the Roman survey, it was included in the manor of Myton. Edward I., after the defeat of John Balliol, visited Baynard castle in the vicinity, and obtained by purchase the lordship of Myton, including the hamlet of Wyke, in 1293, and placed it under the government of a warden and bailiffs, constituting it also a separate and independent manor, with the name of Kingston, or King's-town-upon-Hull. In 1299, the town obtained a royal charter, making it a free borough; and in the same year—being the 27th of Edward First's reign—the harbour on the river Hull was completed. In the time of John, the commerce of Hull was considerable; and in the time of Edward I. it was one of the principal places of import in the kingdom. In 1322, the town was begun to be fortified with walls, a tower, and a ditch; and in 1359, when Edward III. collected a fleet for the invasion of France, it contributed 16 sail of ships, and 466 men. Henry VI. confirmed the charter of his predecessors, and constituted the town a distinct county, with the privileges of a separate jurisdiction. In 1537, Hull was the scene of an unsuccessful insurrection, called 'the Pilgrimage of Grace,' when the town was taken by the Yorkshire insurgents, under Aske, who opposed the ecclesiastical innovations then in progress, and reinstated the monks and friars who had been ejected from their monasteries. The rebellion was soon after suppressed, and the chief ringleaders tried and executed. In consequence of the alterations made by Henry VIII. in the established religion, a fresh insurrection broke out in Hull; but this likewise proved unsuccessful, and the leader, Sir Robert Constable, being convicted of high-treason under a special commission, was hanged and quartered. In the 15th, 16th, and 17th centuries, the inhabitants of this place suffered greatly from pestilential diseases and inundations. The pestilence which commenced in 1635, raged during three years, and swept away vast numbers of the inhabitants. Although nearly 3000 persons perished during this period, Hull in a few years regained its former prosperity, when it became the theatre of the opening wars between Charles I. and the English parliament. Charles, on his way to the Scottish border, in 1639, visited Hull, where, previous to the commencement of hostilities, a dépôt of arms and military stores had been established. At this time both parties became anxious to secure possession of a place of so much importance, it being then not only a place of considerable strength from its situation, but surrounded with walls, and strongly fortified by art, and its importance still farther augmented by the ammunition and stores, which at that time exceeded the quantity in the tower of London. The subsequent attempt of the king to obtain admission into the town; the opposition of Sir John Hotham, who had been sent down in the office of governor for the parliament; the succeeding operations of the royalist troops; the treachery, trial, and punishment of the governor; are facts of national history which it is unnecessary here to detail. After the decapitation of Charles I., Cromwell visited Hull, and was received by the corporation with a congratulatory address.

General Description.—The town consists of three unequal divisions, separated by the docks. That part on the north side of the old dock is in the parish of Sculcoates, in which are several spacious streets that have risen up within the last 40 years: of still more ancient date is that part which extends westward of the Humber dock, occupying the site of the ancient hamlet of Myton, by which name it is still distinguished. The Garrison side is extra-parochial, and is connected with the town by a bridge of four arches, rebuilt in 1787, with a spacious and handsome cast-iron bridge in the centre, for the passage of large vessels. The whole town stands on a level tract of ground, at the confluence of the rivers Hull and Humber, within a short distance of the wolds of Yorkshire. Its appearance is altogether modern. The houses are principally built of brick, and the streets are in general handsome, well-paved, and lighted with gas. In 1443, the town was divided into six wards, which number, in 1824, was increased to eight. The exchange is a neat building, with a portico in front, built in 1794.—The theatre-royal, situated in Humber-street, was erected in 1809.—Here is a subscription library, established in 1775; likewise a Theological library, containing many scarce volumes of great value.—The Lyceum library was instituted in 1807; and in 1830, a handsome hall was completed in Charlotte-street, by the Mechanics' Institute, at the expense of the members.—There are two museums; one attached to the Literary and Philosophical society, established in 1822; containing a grand collection of specimens in natural history and the arts; and Wallis's museum, in Myton-gate, comprising a curious collection of fire-locks, arms, and artificial curiosities, collected by the late proprietor during the last sixty years. The public-rooms, the first stone of which was laid on the day in which his present majesty, King William IV., was proclaimed, are situated at the south-east corner of 'Kingston-square, Jarratt-street, and form a handsome edifice of brick, ornamented with quoins and cornices of stone. The exterior of the building, which is intended to be covered with cement, in imitation of stone, is yet unfinished. Within the walls of the establishment, which comprises a spacious music-hall, with dining and drawing-rooms, and accommodation for hot and cold baths, the Literary and Philosophical society have their museum and theatre, or lecture-room. Opposite to the building, at the south-west corner of Kingston-square, is now erecting a new medical hall, intended to be designated 'the Hull and East Riding school of medicine and anatomy,' the foundation stone of which was laid by James Alderson, A.M., M.D., on the 27th April, 1833. Among other public buildings worthy of notice, is the custom-house, a large brick edifice, with ornamented stone-work; and on the eastern bank of the Hull, at its junction with the Humber, is the citadel, facing a battery formerly mounting 21 guns. About a mile from the town are botanic gardens, opened in June 1812, comprising above five acres of land, well-stored with scarce and curious exotic plants. There are public baths on the bank of the Humber. The citadel and block-house were built by Henry VII.; and in 1681, a considerable sum of money was furnished by Charles II. for the purpose of improving the fortifications.

Trade, Docks, &c.—Hull has been much famed for its shipping, and various works of importance have been carried on, more for the advantage of manufactures and commerce, than with a view to the operations of war. Besides a very extensive coasting trade, a considerable foreign trade is carried on with Russia, Prussia, Norway, Sweden, Holland, France, Spain, and America, to which the goods and produce of the counties of Lancaster, York, Stafford, Derby, Nottingham, and Chester, are exported. Hull has a greater share in the whale-fishery than any other British port, but few ships are now sent to Greenland, the greater part being fitted out for Davis' Straits. The annual import of oil is between 3 and 4000 tons, and of whale-bone, from 2 to 300 tons. The value of its exports is immense, consisting chiefly of cotton goods, woollen manufactures, and lace. The extent of its imports appears from the customs paid at this port, amounting to about £1,000,000 annually. There are upwards of 30 steam-vessels plying daily and weekly from this port to Hambro', London, Lynn, Newcastle, Goole, Gainsbro', and Selby, at which latter place a rail-road is now constructing to extend to Leeds. The building of ships is extensively carried on here. The consequence of Hull as a place of trade, arises greatly from its facilities for intercourse with the interior of the country, by means of the Calder, Aire, Ouse, Trent, and other large rivers, which fall into the Humber, and the numerous canals communicating with them. In 1774, an act of parliament passed for the establishment of quays and wharfs in the harbour; and by the same statute, the shareholders were incorporated under the name of 'the Dock Company at Kingston-upon-Hull,' and required to construct docks, basins, sluices, quays, and other works. A public subscription was then opened, and the company received from the crown a grant of the military works of the town, and a vote from parliament of £15,000, towards defraying the expense of the undertaking. The first stone of the old dock was laid in 1775, and the whole undertaking was completed in four years. The length of this dock is 1703 feet, its width 254 feet, and depth 23 feet, and it occupies about ten acres in extent. A lock and entrance-basin to the old dock were constructed in 1814. From an increase of trade, an extension of dock-room was rendered necessary, and two other acts of parliament were obtained in 1802 and 1805, by which the company were empowered to increase the shares from 120 to 180: the money arising from the 60 additional shares was appropriated towards making a new dock. This dock was begun in 1807, and completed in 1809, under the superintendence of the late Mr Rennie. It is called the Humber dock, and is 914 feet in length, 342 in breadth, and occupying seven acres in extent, exclusive of its entrance-basin, which occupies two acres and a half. Under the provision of the act last-mentioned, a third dock was constructed, called the Junction-dock, uniting the two former, by which means vessels are enabled to pass round the town. The junction-dock is 645 feet in length, and 407 in breadth, and is capable of containing 60 sail of large ships, leaving sufficient room for others to pass. The docks, to which are two entrances, one from the river Hull, or the harbour, on the east, and the other from the river Humber on the south, are amply provided with extensive quays and warehouses, under the regulations of the Dock company. The bridges across the locks are constructed of cast-iron, on the lifting plan, each 24 feet in width. The works were constructed under the direction of Mr James Walker. Besides these wet docks, there are two basins—the old dock basin already mentioned, and the Humber-dock basin—capable of admitting a vessel drawing 26½ feet of water. The accommodation for shipping at this port thus consists of the old harbour of 10 acres, and the three wet docks, which, with their entrance-basins, are in superficial extent more than 36 acres. There are 60,000 square yards of open quay-room round the docks, with suitable sheds for the landing and shipping of goods under cover, and upwards of 2500 lineal feet of legal quays. The number of vessels belonging to the port in 1829, was 579, averaging a burden of 127 tons; besides coasting vessels, 1477 of which entered the port, and 1679 cleared outwards. In the year 1830, 1186 vessels entered inwards from foreign parts, and 1037 cleared outwards. A life-boat was established in 1810 at Spurn, and the crew resident are under the management of the wardens of Trinity-house.—The manufactures of Hull are not considerable; they include oil-gas works, soaperies, sarking, chain cables, ropes, sail-cloth, foundries, white-lead works, tan-yards, and potteries, and there are two establishments for making the spirit of turpentine and tar. There are also an extensive sugar-refinery, and several large breweries. The market-days are Tuesday and Friday, the former of which is well-frequented as a corn-market. Fairs are held on July 10th, October 10th, and December 10th, for horses and black cattle. Pop., in 1801, 22,161; in 1831, 32,958. A. P., £77,903.

Municipal Government.—The town was incorporated by charter of Edward I., in which the inhabitants were styled 'free burgesses.' This was afterwards confirmed and extended by Richard II.; and the civil authority over the town is now vested, by charter of Henry VI. and Charles II., in the corporation, which consists of a mayor, recorder, 12 aldermen, a sheriff, two chamberlains, assisted by a town-clerk, a water-bailiff, and other subordinate officers. The mayor, who is chosen annually by the burgesses, from two aldermen nominated to that office, is admiral within the liberties of the Humber, and is authorised to hold a court of record for civil actions to any amount, under the charter of Henry VI., at which the sheriff likewise presides, and of which the town-clerk is prothonotary. There is, besides, a court of requests for the recovery of debts not exceeding £5. The judges of assize formerly visited this town, but under the statute of the 38 Geo. III. c. 52, the trial of causes depending in the superior courts, and of prisoners for capital offences, now takes place at York. The petty-sessions for the Hunsley-Beacon division and other parts of the east riding, are held in the public-hall, in the adjoining parish of Sculcoates, every Tuesday. This town first sent two members to parliament in the 23d of Edward I., but regular returns were only made from the 12th of Edward II. The returning officer is the mayor of Hull. The 40s. freeholders of this town vote for the east riding of Yorkshire. The boundaries of the borough comprise the several parishes of St Mary, the Holy Trinity, Sculcoates, and Drypool, together with the extra-parochial place called Garrison-side. Andrew Marvel, celebrated as a patriot and political writer in the reign of Charles II., represented this borough in parliament from 1658 till the time of his death in 1678.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.—The town comprises the two parishes of the Holy Trinity and St Mary, both in the archd. of the E. R. and dio. of York. The living of the Holy Trinity is a vicarage in the patronage of the mayor and corporation. The church, which is an ancient and spacious cruciform building, with a lofty central tower, was originally erected in 1285, but improved and enlarged in that of Henry VII. The living of St Mary's is a perpetual curacy not in charge, endowed with £200, and in the patronage of T. Thornton, Esq. The church, founded about 1333, was once an extensive and magnificent building, but the greater part was demolished in the reign of Henry VIII. A tower was added in 1696, and the chancel, which is the principal remaining part of the original structure, was considerably enlarged in 1570. St John's is a chapel-of-ease of Trinity church, and was completed in 1792 at the sole expense of the Rev.

Thomas Dikes, LL.B. Living, a perpetual curacy, the presentation to which, on the demise of the founder, will devolve to the vicar of the church of Holy Trinity. The Dissenters have ten places of worship here, besides a Roman Catholic chapel and a Jewish synagogue. Here is a free grammar-school founded in 1486 by Dr Alcock, successively bishop of Rochester, Worcester, and Ely. The school is open to all sons of freemen on a charge of 4 guineas per annum, and to the sons of non-freemen for 8 guineas annually. The vicar's school, in which 50 boys are educated, was founded in 1737 by the Rev. William Mason, the father of the poet. Coggan's charity school for 20 girls was founded in 1753 by an alderman of that name. Besides these, there is another school for orphans, founded and endowed by Alderman Ferris. Extensive national schools, open to children of all denominations, were erected in 1806, and are supported by subscription. The church of England Sunday School Association, and the Sunday School Union, both founded in 1819, instruct not fewer than 7,000 children. The Dissenters likewise support a considerable number of very efficient schools.

The Trinity House.—Amongst numerous other charitable institutions, the most important is that of the Trinity House, originally founded in 1369, and rebuilt in 1753, for the relief of decayed seamen and their widows. It is governed by wardens, brethren, and assistants who are pilots of a superior class, incorporated by charter of the 20th of Henry VI., renewed and confirmed at various subsequent periods. The annual expenditure exceeds £11,500, the funds for its support have been progressively improved by various benefactions, but the revenue chiefly arises from property in land and the funds, from tolls, imposts, and duties on goods brought in or conveyed out of the port; an addition of about £700 per annum is also derived from a levy of sixpence per month on the wages of all seamen employed in vessels belonging to Hull. Connected with this institution is the marine school, established in 1786, in which 36 boys are clothed and educated for the sea service. Forming part of the front of Trinity House is a chapel for the use of the foundation, built in 1772. The Charter-house hospital was founded in 1384 by Michael de la Pole, afterwards earl of Suffolk and lord-chancellor of England, for the support of 56 pensioners of both sexes, under the direction of a master, who has a salary of £200 per annum, with a house and garden. The revenue of this hospital amounts to £5,000. Here are several other hospitals distinguished by the names of their founders. The charity-hall, or workhouse, established in the reign of William III., is under the direction of a body incorporated by the name of "the governor, deputy-governor, guardians, and assistants of the poor." There is also a general infirmary for the accommodation of 70 patients, erected in 1782, at an expense of £4,126; a dispensary instituted in 1814; a humane society in 1800; an educational clothing society in 1820, and various other associations of similar kinds. A savings bank was established in 1818. Hull was the birth-place of the Rev. W. Mason, the poet, and Benjamin Thompson, the author of numerous translations from the German dramatists. The honour of having produced the celebrated Andrew Marvell has also been claimed for this town, but Mr Frost, in his address to the literary and philosophical society of Hull, disclaims this as incorrect in point of fact.

KIRK-CAMBOCK, in Eskdale-ward, co. of Cumberland. It is 13 m. N.E. from Carlisle. "The church of Kirk-Cambock is rectorial, and was given to the prior and convent of Carlisle, but when, or by whom, we have not found. In Pope Nicholas's Valor it is rated at £8; in King Edward the Second's, nothing; in King Henry the Eighth's it is not mentioned, being then wholly appropriated to the priory, and the parish almost destroyed and ruined by the Scots. The fabric of the church hath long been in ruins, nothing remaining of it but part of the old walls. No curate is appointed to take cure of the parochial duties. For the rites of baptism and sepulture, the people commonly repair to the church of Lanercost; and for their instruction in religion they go thither, or to Stapleton, or Bowcastle, or where they think fit."—Nicolson's Cumberland, vol. 2, p. 506.

The church, ded. to St Gregory, is a small building containing some portions of the Roman style of architecture. Over the south-doorway is an inscription, purporting that the the Confessor. In the summer of 1821, a remarkable cavern was discovered here in a bank about 60 feet above the bottom of a small valley. "Some workmen who were quarrying this bank, cut across the narrow mouth of the cave, which had been choked up with rubbish and overgrown with grass and bushes, and from this cause, as well as from its inaccessible situation, had hitherto escaped observation; since then, about 30 feet of the bank have been cut away, and the present entrance is a hole in the perpendicular face of the quarry about 3 feet high, and 5 broad; which it is only possible for a person to enter by creeping on his hands and knees. The passage contracts and expands irregularly, being sometimes from only 2 to 7 feet in breadth, and from 2 to 14 feet in height; its main direction is E.S.E., and its greatest length is 245 feet. It divides into several smaller passages, which have not yet been explored, being nearly choked up by the stalactites; there are but two or three places where a person can stand upright; these occur where the roof is intersected by fissures, which after continuing for a few feet, close gradually upwards in the limestone bed above, and are from this circumstance thickly lined with stalactites: the real floor of the cave is only seen, and that but partially, near the entrance; further in, the whole of it has been covered over with a bed of hardened mud, about a foot in average thickness, the surface of which was perfectly smooth and level when the cave was first opened, except where stalagmites had been formed on it by filtration from the roof: and where the stalactites had been formed on the sides they had, on arriving at the surface of this mud, spread over it like a thin crust of ice, obviously proving that the chalky deposits have been made since the mud had been introduced. In some cases, where these incrustations were thick, they formed a bridge quite across the floor, and were left in that form when the mud was cleared away from beneath them. On the naked rocky floor stalagmitic coverings were also found, these had been covered over by the mud, which must have been introduced all at one time in a fluid state; and having dried, the formation of chalky depositions, which must have always been in operation, continued, and has partially covered its surface. The mud just described was filled with fragments of bones of a great variety of animals, all broken, and bearing the appearance of having been gnawed by others; and, from many corroborative circumstances, these appear to have been hyenas; while the bones on which they had preyed, according to the habits of that species, belonged to the following very distinct tribes of animals: tiger, bear, wolf, fox, and weasel; elephant, rhinoceros, hippopotamus, and horse; ox and deer; hare, rabbit, water-rat, and mouse; ravens, pigeons, larks, and ducks. We can here only give the general conclusions at which Professor Buckland, and other scientific men, have arrived, who have attentively examined these wonderful remains of animals, ~~now~~ so foreign to our climates. It appears that the cave at Kirkdale was, during a long succession of years, the habitation of numerous hyenas, who dragged into it the bodies of most of the other animals above enumerated, for the purpose of preying on them; and that the hyenas themselves, as they died or were killed by their younger and stronger brethren, also served these for food. It thus is rendered certain that there was a time when our wilds and forests teemed with animals now only found in hotter and southern latitudes, that many generations of these lived and died, and were the prey or the tyrants of others; that the hyena, according to the instincts which still actuate it, dragged the bodies of those it killed or found slain, into their dens, and there devoured them at their leisure; and that, finally, some great catastrophe brought destruction to the whole race, involving the remains of the dead in one mass; since which, other species of animals have alone inhabited this country, differing entirely in habits and manners from their predecessors. That the catastrophe alluded to was a deluge, there is no doubt, and this, from its gradual approach, gave the existing living animals, who then inhabited the cave, time to escape, which accounts for the circumstance of no entire skeleton of a hyena being found in it; the turbid waters, when they filled the cave, buried the animal remains, and, gradually evaporating, left them encased in a bed of mud, to be discovered, after the lapse of many centuries, and to excite our admiration at the wonderful power of the Creator of all things."—Saturday Magazine, No. 42. KIRKSTALL, a hamlet in the parish of St Peter, Leeds, W. R. of the co. of York. "Henry de Lacy, A. D. 1147, placed at Berboldeswick a convent of Cistercian monks from Fountains, who, after they had struggled with great inconveniencies five or six years there, desired to be removed to a place in Airedale, called Kirkstall, which their founder procured for them of William of Poitou, and where they settled and began to build a fine abbey, A. D. 1152, to the honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary. It was endowed with £329 2s. 11d.

per ann. Dugd.; £512 13s. 4d. Speed: and the site was granted in exchange to Archbishop Cranmer and his heirs, 34th Hen. VIII., and 1st Edw. VI."—Tanner's Not. Mon. The beautiful ruins of this abbey are yet the theme of admiration to antiquarians and artists. Whitaker says: "Kirkstall abbey is a monument of the skill, the taste, and the perseverance of a single man. Accordingly, there are in the original fabric no appearances of after-thought, no deviations from the first plan. Not only the arrangements, proportions, and relations of the different apartments are rigidly conformed to that peculiar principle, which prevailed in the construction of religious houses erected for, rather than at, the expense of the monks; but every moulding and ornament appears to have been wrought from models previously studied, and adapted to the general plan." The same author adds: "The great kitchen of Kirkstall, together with a suite of apartments extending eastward from the south-east corner of the quadrangle towards the foundations of the abbot's lodgings, is of much later date than the rest; and an imprudent superstructure on the original tower, which rose but little above the acute angled roof of the church, overweighed one of the four great columns at the intersection, which, after giving warning for several years of its approaching fall, was suddenly crushed by the vast superincumbent pile on Wednesday night, January 27th, 1779, and brought down in its ruin more than two sides of the tower. Considered merely as a ruin, the effect of the church was certainly improved by this catastrophe; but the visible detachment of the end of the north transept, and above all, of the great east window from the adjoining walls, which might yet be prevented from increasing by the application of buttresses, threatens, if neglected, to reduce this noble remain to a state of yawning dilapidation, which will be deplored when it is too late. It is a trifling circumstance, but not undeserving of mention as a trait of ancient manners; that within a few days after the fall of the tower, the writer of this account discovered imbedded in the mortar of the fallen fragments, several little smoking-pipes, such as were used in the reign of James the First for tobacco; a proof of a fact which has not been recorded, that prior to the introduction of that plant from America the practice of inhaling the smoke of some indigenous vegetable prevailed in England. Some depredations we know were beginning to be committed on 'Christal abbey,' for public purposes, at Leeds, as early as the reign of Elizabeth: but its distance of three miles from the town, and the introduction of brick when it began rapidly to increase in buildings, have happily prevented it from being converted into a quarry of stone ready hewn, in which case a few heaps of rubbish or inequalities of surface, a wrought moulding, or a mass of groutwork, might alone have indicated the place where 'the gloom of these ancient cells, the variety of chapels, and the remnants of the abbey shattered by the encroachments of ivy, and surrounded by many a sturdy tree, the lofty towers, and long perspectives of the church, detain' every man of taste and feeling, as they detained Mr Gray, 'for many delightful hours.'" Distance from Leeds, 3 m. W.N.W. Pop. returned with the parish.

KNARESBOROUGH, a borough, market-town, parish and township, partly in the liberty of St Peter of York, and partly in the lower division of the wapentake of Claro, W. R. of the co. of York. The town, which is situated on the north-eastern bank of the river Midd, is large and handsome, and the houses are well built. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of linen and cotton. The market is on Wednesday, and fairs are held on the first Wednesdays after January 13th, March 12th, May 5th, August 12th, October 11th, and December 10th for horses, cattle and sheep. A statute fair for hiring servants is held on the Wednesday before November 23d. Knareborough has sent two members to parliament from the first year of Mary, 1553. The right of election was formerly vested in the proprietors of burgage tenements. It is now enjoyed by about 370. The bailiff, in whom the government of the town is vested, is the returning officer. The petty sessions for the wapentake of Claro are held by the county magistrates weekly. Living, a vicarage in the archd. of Richmond and dio. of Chester, rated at £9 7s. 4½d. Patron, in 1829, the earl of Rosslyn. Church ded. to St John the Baptist. Here are several places of meeting belonging to Dissenters, and a Roman Catholic chapel. Here is a free grammar school founded and endowed with £20 per annum, in 1616, by Dr Robert Chaloner; likewise a school for boys and girls, with an annual income of £101 16s. There are several other charitable funds for the education and clothing of poor children.

Situated on a rocky mountain are the remain of an ancient castle, said to have been erected by Serlo de Burgh, soon after the conquest. The ruins extend over a circular area about 300 ft. in diameter, and consist of part of the keep, and a few dilapidated arches and semicircular buttresses, displaying the decorated style of English architecture. Near the centre is the court-house, and part of the ruin is converted into a prison for debtors. About half a mile down the river are the ruins of a priory, founded in the 13th century. "One Robert Flowr sunne to one Robert Flowr, that had been 2 tymes mair of York, was the first beginner of this priory. He had been afore a little while a monk yn New Minster abbay in Morpeth, forsaking the landes and goodes of his father, to whom he was heir as eldest sunne, and desiring a solitarie life as an heremite resortid to the Rokkes by the ryver of Nidde: and thither, upon opinon of Sanctite of hym, resorted other; and then he institutid his companie in the sect of Freres of the order de redemptione captivorum, alias Sancte Trinitatis."—Leland's Itin., vol. 1, p. 98. "Of which order there was a convent settled here in the chapel of St Robert, in the reign of King Henry III., chiefly by the munificence of Richard, earl of Cornwall, and king of the Romans. These religious, though but little better than mendicants, were endowed at the dissolution with £35 10s. 11d. per annum, as Dugdale. The site was granted, 7^o Edward VI., to Francis, earl of Shrewsbury."—Tanner's Not. Mon.

Southward of the castle is St Robert's chapel, an excavation in the rock, founded by an anchorite of the 13th century, son of a mayor in York. About a mile farther down the river is another excavation, supposed to have been the usual residence of the same holy man. This cave is awfully memorable as the scene of a horrid murder, committed in 1745, on the body of Daniel Clarke, by Eugene Aram, a schoolmaster of extraordinary abilities and learning.
